Canonization of Joseph Orod and Clement Hofdorfer completed, 20 May.

POPE PIUS X. celebrated his episcopal jubilee, 19

Nov.

1910. An encyclical letter published by pope Pius X.

recalling the memory of saint Charles Borromeo, of whose canonization the third centenary would occur on 1 Nov., issued. The pope communicated to saints’ catechism as opposed to the heretical reform of Luther, 28 May.

Replay signed by the cardinal secretary of state at the protest against the publication of the encyclical, in Germany. The pope expressed the regret of his holiness at the excitement of opinion raised, as no intention of slighting the non-catholics of Germany or their princes had ever entered his mind. The Prussian minister was officially informed that the pope had already instructed the Prussian bishops to abstain from the publica-

POPE A., poet (1688—1744). His bi-centenary was celebrated by an exhibition of books, pictures,

POPE JOAN. It is falsely asserted that, in the 9th century, a female named Joan, having conceived a passion for Felda, a young monk, in order to be admitted into his monastery assumed the male habit, and that on the death of her lover she entered upon the duties of professor, and, being very learned, was elected pope, when Leo IV. died, in 855. Other scandalous particulars follow; “yet, until the reformation, the tale was repeated and

POPISH PLOITS, see Gunpowder Plot and Oates’s Plot.

POPLAR TREES. The Taemahae poplar (Populus Balsamifera) was brought hither from North America before 1692. The Lombardy poplar from Italy about 1758.

POPLIN (or Tabinet), an elegant rich fabric composed of silk and worsted, introduced by the Huguenot refugees from France about 1693; first manufactured in Dublin. Irish poplins are still deservedly esteemed.

* In 1851, 1,106,558 males, and 1,235,673 females. † Estimated from Registrar General’s returns.

Estimated population of the United Kingdom, 30 June, 1901: England and Wales, 35,736,917; Scotland, 4,877,648; Ireland, 4,974,152. Total 45,590,715.
PORT BRETON, an isle near New Caledonia, South Pacific.

In 1877 the marquis Du Beul de Raves purchased of the king Maragano a quantity of land on which to found a colony. Glowing prospectuses were issued in France. The company was formed, and the scheme being favored by the legitimists, a large number of shares were purchased and much money received. Other speculative companies were formed, and colonial governments offered encouragement. In spite of warnings and prohibition several vessels sailed in 1879 with emigrants to meet with misery, disease, and, to a large extent, with death. A few who had been landed in New Caledonia got back to France and published an account of their sufferings. The marquis and some of his associates were brought to trial 27 Nov.
1883; he was sentenced to four years' imprisonment and a fine of 3000 francs, his associates to shorter imprisonment, 2 Jan. 1884.

PORTE, or Sublime Porte, official name of the court of the sultan of Turkey. Mostaem, the last of the Abbasside caliphs (1243-58), fixed in the threshold of the principal entrance to his palace at Bagdad a piece of the black stone adored at Mecca, and thus this entrance became the "porte" by eminence, and the title of his court. The sultans, successors of the caliphs, assumed the title.

—Bouillet.

PORTEOUS MOB. Capt. Porteous, at Edinburgh, on 15 April, 1736, commanded the guard at the execution of Wilson, a smuggler, who had saved the life of a fellow criminal, by springing upon the soldiers around them, and by main force keeping them back, while his companion fled. This excited great commiseration, and the spectators pelted the guard with stones. Fearing a rescue, Porteous ordered his men to fire upon the mob, and several were killed and one wounded. He was found guilty of murder, 22 June, 1776; but the queen granted him a reprieve (the king being then in Hanover). The people, at night, broke open the prison, took out Porteous, and hanged him on a dyer's sign-post, in the Grass-market, 7 Sept. 1736.

PORTER. Dr. Ashe says that this malt liquor obtained its appellation on account of its having been drunk by porters in the city of London, about 1730. On 17 Oct. 1814, at Meux's brewhouse two large vats of porter burst, destroying neighbouring houses. Several lives were lost.

PORTERAGE ACT, regulating the charge for porterage of small parcels, passed 1799.

The Fellowship of Free Porters established in London in the 13th century, with exclusive privileges, relating to grain, &c., much reduced by the act of parliament of 1872 and the construction of docks. The fellowship disbanded by the court of common council, June, 1894. Final payment of assets, 25,379 l. 45 l. d., distributed 495 members, 17 Dec. 1894.

PORT HAMILTON, see Coria.

PORT JACKSON (New South Wales), thirteen miles north of Botany Bay, was so named by Capt. Cook in 1770; see Sydney. Here the duke of Edinburgh was shot by O'Farrell, a Fenian, 12 March, 1868, but soon recovered. The assassin was hanged, 21 April.

PORTLAND ADMINISTRATIONS.

The first was the "coalition ministry," of which William Henry Cavendish, duke of Portland, as first lord of the treasury, was the head. It obtained the name of the "coalition" ministry, and included lord North with Mr. Fox, formerly inopkiate opponents. Formed 5 April, 1783; dissolved by Mr. Pitt's coming into power, Dec. same year.

FIRST ADMINISTRATION.

Duke of Portland, first lord of the treasury.
Viscount Stormont, president of the council.
Earl of Carlisle, privy seal.
Frederick, lord North, and Charles James Fox, home and foreign secretaries.
Lord John Cavendish, chancellor of the exchequer.
Viscount Keppel, admiralty.
Viscount Townshend, ordnance.

* Born 1738; became lord chamberlain, 1765; lord lieutenant of Ireland, 1782; premier, 1783; home secretary, 1794; lord president, 1804; premier again, 1807; died 1809, when Mr. Spencer Perceval became premier.

PORTLAND CEMENT, first mentioned in a patent granted to Joseph Aspden, a bricklayer of Leeds, 1824, which made the true cement at Northfleet. Its value as a building material was established by Mr. John Grant's tests, 1859-71.

PORTLAND ISLE (off Dorset), the English Gibraltar. Fortified before 1142. Portland castle was built by Henry VIII. showing a management commenced between the English and Dutch, 18 Feb. 1653, which continued for three days. The English destroyed eleven Dutch men-of-war and thirty merchants. Van Tromp was admiral of the Dutch, and Blake of the English.—Here is found the noted freestone used for building our finest edifices. The Portland lights were cast in 1760 and in 1789. The pier with nearly half a mile square of land, was washed into the sea in Feb. 1792. Prince Albert laid the first stone of the Portland breakwater, 25 July, 1839, and the last stone was laid by the prince of Wales, 10 Aug. 1852. Mr. James Kendl, the first chief engineer, was succeeded on his death in 1856 by Mr. (Capt. John) Coode, and the breakwater and other harbour works cost 1,033,660l. exclusive of convict labour. The Portland prison was established in 1848. A mutiny among the convicts here in Sept. 1858, was promptly suppressed. The king visits the prison and Whitehead's torpedo works, 4 April, 1902.

PORTLAND (or Barberini) VASE. This beautiful specimen of Greek art (composed of a glass-like substance, with figures and devices raised on it in white enamel; height 10 inches; diameter in the broadest part, 7; with a handle on each side) was discovered about the walls of the 16th century, in a marble sarcophagus in a sepulchre at a place called Monte del Grano, about 21 miles from Rome. The sepulchre was supposed to have been that of the Roman emperor, Alexander Severus (222-235), and his mother Mammeca, and the vase is supposed to have been the cinerary urn of one of these royal personages. It was placed in the palace of the Barberini family, at Rome, where it remained till 1779, when it was purchased by Sir William Hamilton, from whose possession it passed to that of the duchess of Portland, 1787; at the sale of her effects, it is said to have been bought by the then duke of Portland, who, in 1816, deposited it (on loan) in the British museum. On 27 Feb. 1845 this vase was smashed to pieces with a stone by a man named William Lloyd; it was skillfully repaired, and is now shown to the public in a special room. Josiah Wedgwood made a mould of it, and took a number of casts.

PORT MAHON, see Minorca.

PORTO BELLO (S. America), discovered by Columbus, 2 Nov. 1502, was taken by Morgan the buccaneer in 1668 by the British under admiral Vernon, from the Spaniards, 21 Nov. 1739, and the PORTSMOUTH.

PORT ROYAL des CHAMPS (near Paris) was a French Catholic convent, founded by Obis, bishop of Paris, at the wish of king Philip Augustus. Being long taken into decay, it was revived and returned in 1608 by Angélica Arnauld. In 1625 the increased community removed to Paris. The Port Royal des Champs, in 1656, became the retreat of the Arnaulds, Tillemont, Pascal, Lame- llet, and other eminent Jansenists, who devoted themselves to education, and prepared the Port Royal grammar school, and other works. This institution was condemned by the pope in 1709, and the buildings were pulled down, and tombs desecrated, by the order of Louis XIV., in 1710. The Port Royal at Paris was suppressed, with other monasteries, in 1790.

PORTSMOUTH (Hampshire), the most considerable haven for men-of-war, and most strongly fortified place in England. The dock, arsenal, and storehouses were established in the reign of Henry VIII. Population, 1901, 195,035; 1901 (est.), 214,726.

The French under D'Anne-le-Haut attempted to destroy Portsmouth, but were defeated by Viscount Lisle, in the then finest war-ship in the world, the Great Harry. Here George Villiers, duke of Buckingham, was assassinated by Felton.

Admiral Byng (see Byng) on a very dubious sentence was shot at Portsmouth. The stock-yard was fired, the loss estimated at 100,000.

Another fire occasioned loss of 100,000.

The French were suspected both times, but there was no actual proof. Fire caused by James Atten (the painter) on 7 Dec. 1776; executed on 10 March, 1777.

POSITIVE PHILOSOPHY set forth by Auguste Comte, an eminent mathematician, born 19 Jan. 1788; died at Paris, 5 Sept. 1857; succeeded by M. Pierre Lafitte as director of positiveism; died, nearly 90 years, 1 Jan. 1873. M. L. F. Emile Littre, the great French philosopher, ardently embraced the system. See Calendar.

Comte's "Cours de Philosophie Positive," published 1851-1852; "Système de Philosophie Positive, ou Traité de Sociologie, instituant la Religion de l'Humaine Communauté," 5 volumes, 1851-1852; the "Principe pour base, et le progress pour l'objet," 1851-1853.

It professes to base itself wholly on positive facts or observed phenomena, and rejects all metaphysical conceptions, which it considers negative, having nothing real or true in them; and dispenses with the science of mind. It sets aside theology and metaphysical speculation, and reduces all calculated actions, and all actions, to the cause and cause of things, and restricts itself to the observation and classification of phenomena and the discovery of their laws. Comte asserted that Europe had now arrived at the third stage of its progress.

Postivism does not recognize the supernatural or the future state.

"The Church of Humanity" is a modified form of postivism, as described by Mr. Richard Congreve, an archdail conunt (Pall Mall Gazette, 17 Jan. 1854); he died, aged 85, 5 July, 1857.

aged 74 — 15 June, 1860.

POSSIBILISTS. A section of the liberal party in Spain; aiming at reforms; Sen. Castel, a chief, Oct. 1883.

The name was also given to the workman's party in Paris, who aimed at effecting social reforms by legal methods;
they are said to have prevented a revolutionary outbreak of the radical Blanquists, or autonomists, at the presidential election, 3 Dec. 1885.

POSTAL UNION, General, was established by the Treaty of Berne, signed 9 Oct. 1874, and took effect from 1 July, 1875.

POSTERS. Posters were invented by the French, and, according to Grainger, were introduced into Europe by Mr. William Tell, son of the writer on husbandry. Posting was fixed by statute of Edward VI. at one penny per mile, 1548.
By a statute, re-establishing the post-office, none but the postmaster or his deputies could furnish post-horses for travellers, 1660. The post-horse right was imposed in 1779. Post-horse duty yielded, in 1857, in England, 128,401l., and in Scotland, 10,125l.

POST-OF-FICE OF ENGLAND. In England, in the reign of Edward IV. 1481, riders on postchaises went stages of the distance of twenty miles each other, in order to procure the king the earliest intelligence of the events that passed in the course of the war that had arisen with the Scots. — (Cite. Richard III. improved the system of couriers in 1485. In 1543 similar arrangements existed in England. — Smith's Letter's. Post communications between London and most towns of Scotland, and Ireland, existed in 1652. — Strode.)

The first chief postmaster of England, sir Thomas Randolph, appointed by queen Elizabeth 1581. James I. appointed Matthew de la Placeaster as foreign postmaster, 1689, and that I appointed William Frere and Thomas Withers, 1689.

A proclamation of Chas. I., "whereas to this time there had been no certain intercourse between the kingdoms of England and Scotland, the king now commands his postmaster of England for foreign parts to settle a running post or two at midnight and day between Edinburgh and London, and to the same come back again in six days," 1621.

The king commanded his "postmaster of England to foreign parts," to open a regular communication by running posts between the metropolis of Edinburgh and Glasgow, West Chesterfield, Harlow and Chelmsford, Easter, etc. (Rates of postage — 1 letter sent under 30 miles of, under 100 miles, of, above that distance in England, ed. ; to any part of Scotland, 5d.)

An enlarged office erected by the parliament in 1644; and one more considerable in 1657, with a postmaster, and commerce, convey the public dispatches, and as the best means to discover and prevent many dangerous wicked designs against the commonwealth by the inspection of the corresponding post offices.

The post office as at present constituted was founded on the 27 Dec. 1860.

POSTS, said to have originated in the regular couriers established by Cyrus, who erected post-houses throughout the kingdom of Persia, about 200 B.C. Augustus was the first who introduced this institution among the Romans, 31 B.C. This was imitated by Charlemagne about A.D. 800. —Ash. Louis XI. first established post-houses in France owing to his eagerness for news, and they were the first institution of this nature in Europe, 1470. —Hinault.

POTASSIUM, a remarkable metal, discovered by Humphry Davy, who first succeeded in separating it from its oxide, potash, by means of a powerful voltaic battery, at the laboratory of the Royal Institution, London, about 10 Oct., 1807; and also the metals Sodiun from soda, Calcium from lime, &c. The alkalies and earths had been previously regarded as simple substances. Potassium ignites on contact with moisture.

POTATOES, natives of Chili and Peru, generally considered to have been brought to England from Santa Fé, in America, by sir John Hawkins, 1575. Others ascribe their introduction to sir Francis Drake, in general belief about 1610. Their first culture in Ireland is referred to sir Walter Raleigh, who had large estates in that country, about Youghal, in the county of Cork. It is said that potatoes were not known in Flanders until 1620. A fine kind of potato was first brought from America by Mr. Howard, who cultivated it at Car-dington, near Bedford, 1765; and its culture became general soon after. The failure of the potato crop in Ireland, several years, especially in 1846, caused famine, to which succeeded pestilent disease of which multitudes died; among them many priests and physicians. Parliament voted ten millions sterling; and several countries of Europe, and the United States of America, forwarded provisions and other succours; see Ireland. In 1868 it was reported that in England and Wales 500,000 acres, and in Ireland 1,000,000 acres, were under cultivation for potatoes. Potato disease prevailed greatly in England, autumn of 1872. In consequence the value of potatoes imported in 1872 was 1,051,299£: in 1871, only 222,526£: in 1870, 796,839£; wom. value, 3,324,609£: in 1869, 923,326£: in 1868, 1,355,767£: in 1867, 2,670,337£; wom. in 1866, 1,490,160£: wom. in 1865, 1,803,912£: wom. value, 2,523,506£: in 1869, 5,594,900£; wom. value, 1,580,172£: in 1868, 9,013,465£; wom. value, 2,437,976£: in 1869, 5,810,785£; wom. value, 1,332,027£: in 1868, 7,093,523£; wom. value, 1,897,219£. Temporary armistice respecting the American potato beetle or bug, autumn 1876. Acres cultivated for potatoes in Great Britain in 1876, 4,022,277: 1875, 627,091: 1874, 512,471: 1881, 543,435: in 1887, 559,952: in 1890, 529,691: in 1892, 587,590: in 1894, 570,299: in 1896, 595,921: in 1898, 592,018. Ireland, 1892, 629,337: 1891, 418,510: in 1890, 610,875: 1900, 88,777.

International potato exhibition, Crystal Palace, 17-18 Sept., 1874, and another 3d Oct., 1875. Solanum nigrum successively cultivated in wet land by Mr. A. Sutton of Reading, 1834. Tercentenary of the introduction of the potato into England celebrated at Westminster; exhibition and conference, about 80 varieties exhibited, 1-4 Dec. 1826. Failure of the potato crop in Cork, see Ireland, 1829. The bonfire and boisterous treatment of the disease by dressing of salts of copper recommended by Dr. Girald (1575), was tried by Messrs. Sutton, of Reading, with disappointing results. Local farm at Lincoln sells 75 lbs. of Elderbrooke potatoes for 7d.; purchaser receives part at 1/-. 11 Dec., 1825.

First exhibition of the national potato society opened at the crystal palace, 11 Oct., 1824. The disease known as "wart disease," "cauliflower disease," "canker," "tuber, POTTERY AND PORCELAIN.

POTTERY AND PORCELAIN. The manufacture of earthenware (the ceramic art) existed among the Jews as an honourable occupation (see Chron. iv. 23), and the power of the potter over the clay as a symbol of the power of God is described by Jeremiah, 605 B.C. (ch. xviii.) Earth-ware was made by the ancient Egyptians, Assyrians, Greeks, Etruscans, and Romans. The Majolica, Raffia, or Umbrian ware of the 15th century was probably introduced into Italy from the Moors from Majorca. Raffia and other artists imitated Persian designs for this ware. Pottery manufactured at Beauvais, in France, in the 12th century. Enamelled pottery made at St. Cloud about 1683. Luca della Robbia born about 1435 applied the enamel to terracotta. Fayence ware was made in France by Bernard Palissy (died, 1590) and his family.

Porcelain, formed of earth feldspar, was made in China in the 2nd century after Christ. Chinese porcelain is mentioned in histories of the 6th century, when it was introduced into England, and eagerly sought after. Porcelain made at Bow, near London, early in the 15th century, and at Chelsea before . . . . 1698. The first European porcelain was made at Dresden by Böttcher . . . about 1700. The manufacture was fostered by the king Augustus III.

The Capo di Monte factory at Naples established . . . . 1736. Thomas Frye's painted porcelain, in 1735, and Dr. Wall, established the manufacture at Worcester . . . . 1755.

The St. Cloud China manufactory removed to Sevres . . . . 1756. Josiah Wedgwood's patent ware was first made, 1759; his great works at Etruria in Staffordshire were established in 1771. The Royal Porcelain, at Copenhagen, started in 1730; when it was seen at first by the State and carried on till 1827, when it reverted into private hands. In 1828 it was purchased by the Almacini company of Copenhagen.
POTWALLOPERS, 1109

POTWALLOPERS (or hoibers). Before the passing of the reform act of 1832, persons who had boiled a pot for six months claimed the right to vote for the election of members of Parliament.

POULTRY. An exhibition of poultry was held in London, Jan. 1828, and similar exhibitions have been held at the Crystal Palace since. National poultry conference (first) opened at Reading, 11 July, 1891; (second) opened at Reading, 9 July, 1907; report issued, 5 Jan. 1908.

POULTRY COMPTER (London) was one of the most noted of the old city prisons. The compter of Wood-street belonged to the sheriff of London, and was made a prison-house in 1555. This latter and Broad-street compter were rebuilt in 1667. The Giltspur-street prison, built to supply the place of the old city compters, was pulled down in 1855. The Poultry chapel was erected on the site of the Poultry compter, in 1819. — Leigh.

POUNDER, from the Latin Pondus. The value of the Roman pondus is not precisely known, though some suppose it was equivalent to an Attic mina, or 3l. 4s. 7d. The pound sterling was in Saxon times, about 67s. a pound troy of silver, and a shilling was its twentieth part; consequently the latter was three times as large as it is at present.—Pencham. Our avoirdupois pound weight came from the French, and contains sixteen ounces; it is in proportion to our troy weight as seventeen to fourteen; see under Standard.

POYNINGS' LAWS, named after Sir Edward Poynings, lord deputy of Ireland at the time of its passing, at Drogheda, 13 Sept. 1494. By this law all legislation in the Irish parliament was confined to matters first approved of by the king and the English council. The act was repealed, together with the English Declaratory act of the 6th of Geo. I. and other obnoxious Irish statutes, April, 1782.

PRÆMONSTRATENSIAN ORDER, or WHITE CANONS, founded in 1120 by Norbert, a monk, at Præ Montre, near Laon. Its first house in England was founded by Peter de Goush or Gousel, at Newsham, in Lincolnshire, 1143—Tanner; according to others in 1146. The order spread widely through England soon after. The house at Newsham was dedicated to St. Mary and St. Martial. — Lewis.

PRÆMUNIRE, LAW OF. This law (which obtained its name from the first two words "Præmuniri"); or "Præmunire," or "Praemunire," which is applied to any offence in the way of contempt of the sovereign or his government) derived its origin from the aggressive power of the pope in England. The offence introduced a foreign power into the land, and created an imperium in imperio. The first statute of Praemunire was enacted 35 Edward 1, 1310.—Coke. The pope bestowed most of the bishoprics, abbies, &c., before they were void, upon favourites, on pretense of providing the church with better qualified successors before the vacancies occurred. To put a stop to these encroachments, Edward III. enacted a statute in 1353. The statute commonly referred to as the statute of Praemunire is that of Richard II. 1382. Several amendments followed. The assertion that parliament is independent of the sovereign was declared a praemunire, 1661.

PRÆTORIAN GUARDS, instituted by the emperor Augustus (13 B.C.); their numbers enlarged by Tiberius, Vitellius, and their successors. At first supporters of the imperial tyranny, they eventually became their masters, actually putting up the diadem for sale (as in March, 193 A.D., when it was bought by Didius Julianus). They committed many atrocities, and were finally disbanded by Constantine in 312.

PRÆTORS, Roman magistrates, afterwards termed consuls (which see), were elected at the establishment of the republic, 509 B.C. In 366 the prætor urbanus was appointed for the city, and the prætor provincial for foreigners, 246 B.C. Two praetors were appointed for the provinces, 227, and two more, 167. Sulla, the dictator, added thirty and Julius Caesar increased the number to 10, which afterwards became 18. After this, their number fluctuated, being sometimes 18, 16, or 12; till, in the decline of the empire, their dignity decreased, and their numbers were reduced to three.

PRAGA, a suburb of Warsaw, where a bloody battle was fought, 4 Nov. 1794; 30,000 Poles were killed by the Russian general Suwarow. Near here, on 25 Feb. 1831, the Poles, commanded by Skrzecz, defeated the Russians, under general Giersch, who lost 4000 killed and wounded, 6000 prisoners, and 12 pieces of cannon.

PRAGMATIC SANCTION, an ordinance relating to church and state affairs. The ordinances of the kings of France are thus called: in one the rights of the Gallican church were asserted against the usurpation of the pope in the choice of bishops, by Charles VII. in 1438. The Pragmatic Sanction, for settling the empire of Germany in the house of Austria, 1439. The emperor Charles VI. published the Pragmatic Sanction, whereby, in default of male issue, his daughters should succeed in preference to the daughters of his brother Joseph 1., 19 April, 1713; and he settled his dominions on his daughter Maria Theresa, in conformity thereto, 1723. She succeeded in Oct. 1740; but it gave rise to a war, in which most of the powers of Europe were engaged, and which lasted till 1748.
The old city was founded about 759; the new city rebuilt in 1358 by the emperor Charles IV., who made it his capital and erected a university. Prague has been often sacked by war. Population, 1790, 389,711; 1910 (est.), 428,703.

Victory of the Hussites under Ziska, 14 July, 1420.

Frederick, the king, totally defeated by the Austrians near Prague, 8 Nov., 1600.

Prague taken by the Swedes in 1648, and by the French in 1741; they left it in 1742.

Taken by the Austrians and Prussians, obliged to abandon it, 1743.

Great battle of Prague (the Austrians defeated by the king of Prussia, and their whole camp taken; their commander, general Braun, mortally wounded, and the Prussian marshal Schwerin killed), June, 1757.

Insurrection in Prague; soon suppressed, June, 1848.

Treaty of peace between Austria and Prussia signed at Prague (by its articles Austria consented to the breaking up of the German confederation, and to Prussia's annexing Hanover, Hesse-Cassel, Nassau, and Frankfort; and gave up Holstein, and her political influence in North Germany, and North Schleswig to Denmark if the people vote for it; the last not carried out), Aug., 1866; abrogated, Feb., 1872.

Destabilizing floods; the ancient bridge over the Moldau greatly injured, 1-5 Sept., by the collapse of a wall of the bridge; 40 labourers were drowned, 18 Oct.; Bohemian industrial exhibition opened, 15 May; closed, 18 Oct., 1891.

Serious Czech rioting against the Germans has occurred at intervals.

Revolution between Czechs and Germans, 1 Dec.; state of siege proclaimed in the city, 2 Dec., 1848.

PRAIRIAL INSURRECTION at Paris. On 1, 2, 3 Perial, year 5 (20, 21, 22 May, 1795), the faubourgs rose against the directory, and were quelled by the military.

PRAISE-GOD-BAREBONES' PARLIAMENT, see Barebones.

PRASLIN MURDER. The duchesse de Choiseul-Praslin was murdered by her husband, the due de Praslin, at his own house, in Paris, 18 Aug., 1847. She was the only daughter of the celebrated marshal Sebastiani, the mother of nine children, and in her forty-first year. Circumstances were so managed by him as to give it the appearance of being the act of another. During the arrangements for the trial, the duke took poison.

PRAYER-BOOK, see Common Prayer. The Prayer-book and Homily Society, London, was founded in 1812.

Prayer-book Revision Society, established 1834, for promulgating a revision of the book of common prayer, and such liturgical reform in the church of England as in the opinion of the society would strengthen its Protestant and scriptural character.

PRAYERS. "Then began men to call upon the name of the Lord", (Acts iv. 29), 37-83 n.c. The mode of praying with the face to the east was instituted by pope Boniface II. A.D. 532. Prayers for the dead, first introduced into the Christian church about 100, are advocated by some ministers of the English church. Prayers addressed to the Virgin Mary and to the saints are said to have been introduced by pope Gregory, 593. See Liturgies.

PREBENDARY, a clergyman attached to a cathedral or collegiate church, who receives an income termed prebenda for officiating at stated times. The office slightly differs from that of a dean.

PRECEDENCE was established in very early ages, and was amongst the laws of Austria. In England the order of precedence was regulated chiefly by two statutes, 31 Hen. VIII. 1536, and 2 Geo. I. 1737.

PRECEPTORs, COLLEGE OF, Bloomsbury, London, established in 1836, and incorporated by Royal Charter 28 March, 1839, for promoting sound learning and of advancing the interests of education, especially among the middle classes, by the instruction of teachers, and by the examination of pupils at stated times.

Prebend (the first in England) of the science and art of education, instituted, 1757.

New building in Bloomsbury Square opened by the prince of Wales, 30 March, 1839.

Day training college for secondary teachers established Oct., 1846.

PREDESTINATION (Ephes. 1). The doctrine concerning this is defined in the seventeen article of the Church of England (Ephes. 1. and Romans ix. x.). It was maintained by St. Augustine, and opposed by Pelagius, in the early part of the 5th century. In later times it has been maintained by the Augustinians, Jansenists, the church of Scotland, and many dissenters (termed Calvinistic), and opposed by the Dominicans, Jesuits, and dissenters (termed Arminian), especially by the Wesleyan methodists.

PREFERENTIAL TARIFFS.

The question of preferential trade between Great Britain and the colonies had its inception in a speech delivered by Mr. Joseph Chamberlain (then secretary to the colonies) at Birmingham, 15 May, 1903. [For principal speeches, see Free Trade.] Debate in the house of commons on Mr. Chamberlain's proposals for preferential tariffs, 25 May.

On the debate on the budget, sir M. Hicks-Bent, Mr. Ritchie, and Mr. A. R. D. Elliot declare their adhesion to the principles of free trade, 9 June.

PREHISTORIC ARCHAEOLOGY began in Sweden, and first systematised by Mr. Nilsson. An international congress for treating prehistorical subjects met at Neuchâtel in 1866, and at Paris in 1867. At the third meeting at Norwich, Aug. 1868, it assumed the name of “International Congress for Prehistoric Archaeology,” and published its transactions in 1869. See Barrows, Mem. Ancient Monuments and Lake Dwellings.

Sir John Lubbock divides prehistoric archaeology into four great epochs: 1. The Drift of Palaeolithic or old stone age. The Neolithic or polished stone age: 2. The Bronze age: 3. The Iron age, when bronze was superseded.

PRE-RAPHAELITE SCHOOL, a name given about 1850, to J. E. Milkins, Wm. Holman Hunt, D. G. Rossetti, and other artists, who opposed the routine conventionality of academic teaching, and resolved to study nature as it appeared to them, and not as it appeared in the antique. For a short time they published “The Germ, or Art and Poetry,” beginning in 1850. Their principles were much advocated by the great art-critic, John Ruskin.

PREROGATIVE COURT, in which formerly all wills were proved, and all administrations taken, which belonged to the archbishop of Canterbury by his prerogative, a judge being appointed by him to decide disputes. Appeals from this court, previously to the pope, were commanded to be made to the kings in chancery, 1333; to the privy council in 1382. This court was abolished, and the Probate Court established in 1857. Sir John Dodson, the last judge, died in 1858.

PREROGATIVE ROYAL. In England the sovereign is the supreme magistrate, and it is a maxim that he can do no wrong. He is the head of the established church, of the army and navy, and the fountain of office, honour, and privilege, but is subject to the laws, unless exempted by name. The royal prerogatives were greatly increased by several despotic sovereigns, such as Elizabeth, James I, and Charles I. Elizabeth used the phrase “We, of our Royal prerogative, which we will not have argued or brought in question” (1591). James I., told his judges that it was “the phrenzy to question what the Almighty could do of His power, so it was sedition to inquire what a king could do by virtue of his prerogative.” These extreme doctrines were nullified by the revolution of 1688, and the exercise of the prerogative court is now virtually subject to parliament; see Lords.

* The records date from 1368; but the testamentary jurisdiction from that year to 1413 was exercised by the court of arches. Then abp. Stafford transferred it to a new court: president, the commissary of the prerogative court of Canterbury. There was also a prerogative court of the archbishop of York.

PRESBURG, the ancient capital of Hungary, where the diicts were held and the kings crowned. On 26 Dec. 1805, a treaty was signed between France and Austria, by which the ancient states of Venice were ceded to Italy: the principality of Pristat, part of the bishopric of Passau, the city of Augsburg, the Tyrol, all the possessions of Austria in Slavia, in Brissam, and Orefan, were transferred to the elector of Bavaria, and the duke of Wurtemberg, who, as well as the duke of Baden, were then created kings by Napoleon. The independence of the Helvetic republic was also stipulated. A new iron and stone railway and passenger bridge over the Danube was inaugurated by the emperor, 30 Dec. 1809. Population, 1900, 16,801; 1910 (est.), 67,050.

PRESBYTERIANS are so called from their maintaining that the government of the church appointed in the New Testament was by presbyters, or association of ministers and ruling elders, equal in power, office, and in order. “The elders (Greeck, presbyteros) I exhort, who are also an elder (synpresbyteros).” 1 Peter v. 1. Presbyterianism was accepted by parliament in place of episcopacy in England in 1648, but set aside at the revolution in 1660. It became the established form of church government in Scotland in 1696. Its tenets were embodied in the formulary of faith said to have been composed by John Knox, in 1560, which was approved by the parliament, and ratified, 1597, and finally settled by an act of the Scottish senate, 1698, afterwards secured by the treaty of union with England in 1707. The first Presbyterian meeting-house in England was established at Wandsworth, Surrey, 20 Nov. 1572.

A pan-presbyterian congress held in London. Representatives of about fifty bodies, British, American, and foreign, agreed to form an “Alliance of Presbyterian churches” 19-22 July, 1875. The presbyterian church of England reconstituted at Liverpool (in union with the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland) . . . . 14 June, 1875.

PRETENDERS.

PRESS ASSOCIATION (a company "limited") was established by the newspaper proprietors of London and the provinces, at a meeting at Manchester, 29 June, 1868, to make arrangements to enable them to avail themselves of the increased facilities for the speedy transmission of news afforded by the post-office, in consequence of the purchase of the right of all the telegraph companies, authorised by the Telegraph Act of 1868. The organisation of the association was completed at a meeting in London, 3 March, 1869. The Provincial Newspaper Society, out of which it sprung, was founded in 1830, and became the Newspaper Society in 1889. Foreign press association registered as a society, March, 1858.

PRESS, LIBERTY OF. The imprimatur "let it be printed" was much used on the title-pages of books printed in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The liberty of the press was severely restrained, and the number of master-printers in London and Westminster limited by the Stationer's Company Chamber, 17 Charles I. July 1, 1637. John Milton wrote his pamphlet "Areopagitica: or, A Speech for the Liberty of Unlicensed Printing," 1644. See Fourth Estate.

Disorders in printing were repressed by the parliament in 1644 and 1659, and by Charles II., 1662. The censorship of the press, a licence established in 1655 and 1669, abandoned.

The post, "the liberty of the press; it is like the air we breathe—" was first given at the Crown and Anchor tavern, at a Whig dinner

Press newspaper, a revolutionary journal, published in Dublin: commenced in Oct., 1727, by Arthur O'Connor, Mr. Emmett, the barrister (whose brother was executed in 1761) and other conspicuous men, contributors to it; it maintained the public mind in Ireland on the eve of the rebellion in 1728. PRESTON (Lancashire). Near here Cromwell totally defeated the royalists under sir Marmaduke Langdale, 17 Aug. 1648. Preston was taken in 1651 by the Irish, under Sir Forster, who proclaimed king James VII. They were defeated in a battle on 12, 13 Nov. by general Willeis and Carpenter, who with the royal army invested Preston on all sides. The Scots laid down their arms, and their nobles and leaders were secured; some were shot as deserters, and others sent to London pinned out and bound together, to intimidate their party.—The stoppage of the cotton manufactory in 1864 and 1862, through the civil war in America, occasioned great suffering in Preston. Population, 1901, 115,055; 1869 (est.), 118,350.

"The Preston guild Merchant festival," said to have been instituted in Saxon times, recorded as beginning 1158, and to have been kept once in 20 years regularly since 1582, was celebrated in Sept. 1882, Sept. 1882, and Sept. 1882.

A fine art and industrial exhibition opened, 21 Sept. 1865.

The new town hall opened by the duke of Cambridge 1 Oct. 1867.

The town hall has been a centre of political and social life in Preston from 1842 to 1869.

PRESTONSTR, near Edinburgh. At Gladsmuir, near this place, was fought a battle between the Young Pretender, prince Charles Edward Stuart, and his Scotch adherents, and the royal army under sir John Coxe, 21 Sept. 1745. The latter was defeated with the loss of 500 men, and fled.

PRETENDERS. A name given to the sons and grandchildren of James II. of England.

The Old Pretender, James Francis Edward Stuart, Chevalier de St. George, born 10 June, 1728, was acknowledged by Louis XIV. as James III. of England, in 1744.

PREVENTIVE MEDICINE. The discoveries of Pasteur, Koch, and others, relative to the propagation of disease by minute germs (see Germs Theory), led to the gradual formation of a British (after Jenner) institute of Preventive Medicine by a committee of eminent physicians and medical men. The institute was incorporated, sir Joseph Lister the first chairman, July, 1871; named the Lister institute, 5 Aug. 1903. 25,000l., part of a legacy from Mr. Richard Berridge, awarded to the institute for the endowment of a laboratory at Chelsea, April, 1894. 25,000l. received from lord Mayor's Company. The hardest gold medal given to lord Lister, 1 Jan. 1891, and prof. Koch, 1901. See Diphtheria.

PRIDE'S PURGE. On the 6th Dec. 1648, colonel Pride, with two regiments, surrounded the house of parliament, and seizing in the palace forty-one members of the Presbyterian party, sent them to a low room, then called hell. Above 160 other members were excluded, and none admitted but the most furious of the Independents. The privileged members were named the "Rump parliament," which was dismissed by Cromwell, 20 April, 1653.

PRIENE, one of the twelve cities of the Ionian league in Asia Minor. The temple of Minerva Polias, founded here by Alexander the Great, and the work of Pythias, was excavated by mr. R. P. Pullan, for the Dilettante Society, in 1865-6.

PRIEST (derived from presbyter, elder), in the English church the minister who presides over the public worship. In Gen xiv. 18. Medehidzeked king of Salem is termed "priest of the most high God." (1913 n. c.: see Hebrews vii.) The Greek hieros, like the Jewish priest, had a sacrificial character, which idea of the priesthood is still maintained by the Romanists and those who favour their views. Among the Jews, the priests assumed their office at the age of thirty years. The dignity of high or chief priest was fixed in Aaron's family, 1491 B.C. After the captivity of Babylon, the civil government and the crown were superadded to the high priesthood; it was the peculiar privilege of the high priest, that he could be prosecuted in no court but that of the great Sanhedrim. The heathens had their arch-famen or high priest, resembling the Christian archbishop. For "Priest in Absolution," see Holy Cross.

PRIMER. A book so named from the Roman book of devotions, and formerly set forth or published by authority, as the first book children should publicly learn or read in schools, containing prayers and portions of the scripture. Primers were printed 1535, 1539. Henry VIII. issued a prayer-book called a "primer" in 1543. The three were published by Dr. Burton in 1544.

PRIMITIVE CULTURE, see Civilisation.

PRIMOGENTURE, RIGHT OF. A usage brought down from the earliest times. The firstborn in the patriarchal ages had a superiority over his brethren, and in the absence of his father was priest to the family. In many parts of the ancient customs of gavel-kind and borough-English, primogeniture was superseded. It came in with the feudal law, 3 Will. I. 1668. The rights of primogeniture abolished in France, 1790.

PRIMROSE LEAGUE, formed in 1883 in memory of the late lord Baconstede (with whom the primrose is said to have been a favourite flower) and in support of conservative principles. He died 19 April, 1881, and the anniversary of that day is termed "Primrose Day," when the flower is generally worn by members of the League and others, and his statue in Parliament-square decorated by Grand Council (the governing body of the League) of the league, which began with under a thousand members, has enrolled since its inception, 90,000,000, knights, dames, and associates, with 2,000 "habitations." The league issues great numbers of political leaflets. "Habitations" have been established in Scotland and Ireland.

PRINTERS PENSION SOCIETY (now termed "Printers' Corporation"), founded 1827; chartered, 1845; almshouses instituted, 1841; orphan schools have been set up.

PRINTING. Block printing is said to have been invented by the Chinese about 593 A.D., more precisely in the 6th century. The honour of first-printing with single types in Europe has been appropriated to Mentz, Strassburg, Haarlem, Venice, Rome, Florence, Basle, and Augsburg; but the names of the three first only are entitled to attention; the early history is very doubtful, and the subject of much controversy; see Presses.

Adrian Jansen awards the honour of the invention to Laurence de Hooper, of Haarlem, "who printed with blocks, a book of images and letters, Speculam Humanae Selecta, and composed an ink more viscous and tenacious than common gum which, blended, about 1400."

(Leo's of this book, being printed on one side only, were afterwards pasted together.)

John Gutenberg invented cut metal types, and used them in printing the earliest edition of the Latin Vulgate and the Mazarin, from the discovery of a copy in the cardinal's library at Mentz.

At the sale of the Perkins library, 6 June, 1873, a copy in cumb was sold for 14d. 1, one paper sold for 26d.; a copy belonging to Sir John Thordol, of Syston park, sold for 50d. 1 Dec., 1854, a copy belonging to the Earl of Craven sold for 13s. 6d. 1852; Lord Hope's copy sold for 26d. 25 Feb., 1832.

Anastatic printing, in which written or printed matter is transferred upon zinc plates, was invented by H. Heber of Berlin about 1847, and made known in London; lectured on by Faraday in 1845; and improved by Strickland and Dedanotte in 1848.

A similar process was invented by Mr. Cocks of Falmouth in 1836.

Printing-types electro-faced with copper about 1859.

Engraved copper-plate electro-faced with iron and nickel.

Type-composing machines. — By James Young's several numbers of the "Family Herald" were set up, beginning 17 Dec. 1842; Hattersley's appeared at the Exhibition of 1862; Harr's was shown at the meeting of the British Association at Cambridge 6 Oct. 1862.

W. H. Mitchel's composing machine was tried at Messrs. Spottiswoode's, in 1864; these machines were said to be in use in America in . Jan. 1865.

Kastenbein's composing and distributing machines (in use at the Times office) shown at the International exhibition 1872.

The "Clowes" type-composing machine (W. Hooker's patent), in which electro-magnets are employed, was shown at the Caxton celebration exhibition, South Kensington July, 1877.

Alexander Mackie's type-composing machine in use at his office in Warrington, and at Messrs. Clay's, London, in 1871. It was said to be able to set up 4 columns of the Times in an hour.

Leighton's machine. — An American composing and distributing machine, in which type matrices are employed instead of type. The manipulator brings letters, points, and spaces together in one line of the galley, which is then passed into a casting-box, and the solid line of type is produced in stereo metal; this is repeated till the galley is full. An English company was formed in 1879. Machines improved yearly.

Miss Emily Faithful established the Victoria printing-office in Great Coram-street, London, in which female compositors are employed, 1865; the "Englishwoman's Journal" printed there Aug. 18, 1865; printed and published in ordinary to her Majesty, June, 1867; died June, 1892.

PRINTING-MACHINES. — William Nicholson, editor of the Philosophical Journal, first projected (1790-1), but Mr. Konig first contrived and constructed a working printing machine, which began with producing the Times of 28 Nov. 1814, a memorable day in the annals of typography.

In 1815, Mr. E. Cowper patented improvements.* Konig's machine printed 1,800 an hour on one side; Cowper's improvements increased this number to 4,200. This was raised to 15,000, by Mr. Applegath's machine, which printed the Times.

How American rotary machines, the first introduced into London 1858, prints 20,000 an hour. The largest (double octuple) in operation 1871; first laid down in 1892 at (Lloyds).

Marshall's machine at Paris said to print 36,000 an hour; Dec. 1868.

Wallter press, invented for the Times by J. C. Macdonald and Mr. Calverley, between 1839-40, prints about 17,000 an hour at 1,872.

American Campbell press said to print 50,000 sheets per day improved in a year, Feb. 1875.

Inking of rotary machine, invented by Mr. (later sir) W. J. Ingram, M. P., for printing illustrated papers, first used to print Illustrated London News, 4Oct. 1877.

- In 1817 was published Binnenbach's Physiology by Elliotson, the first Book printed by machinery. The machine employed was König's, one which printed both sides in one operation at the rate of 900 sheets an hour (1817).

Printing in colours was first commenced by the employment of several blocks, to imitate the initial letters in MSS. For instance, the Mentz Psalter of Fust, 1455, which has a letter in three colours. Imitations of chiaroscuri soon followed "Repose in Egypt," engraving on wood after Louis Cennach, in 1510, in Germany; others by Ugo da Carpi, in Italy, 1518.

J. B. Jackson (1729-54) attempted, without success, to imitate water-colour drawings and to print paper hangings.

About 1783, John Skippe, an amateur, printed some chiaroscuri.

In 1819-22, Mr. William Savage produced his remarkable work, "Hints on Colour Printing," illustrated by imitations of chiarosuro, and of water-colour drawings, giving details of the processes employed.

In 1836, Mr. George Baxter produced beautiful specimens of Picture-Printing, and took out a patent, which expired in 1855. In some of the illustrations to the "Pictorial Album" (1836) he employed twenty different blacks.

In 1849, Mr. G. C. Leighton produced imitations of water-colour drawings, by means of modifications and improvements of Savage's process, consisting of the machine he combined with avalled himself of aquatinted plates, and also of electrotyped silver and copper surfaces to obtain purity of colour as well as durability; Mr. Leighton died, 3 May, 1856.

The large coloured prints of the "Illustrated London News" were first issued in Dec. 1856.

Mr. E. Meyerstein explained his process of printing many colours at one impression (stereochromy), Society of Arts, 13 Dec. 1876.

Mr. Ivan Orloff's colour-printing machine, multi-coloured designs produced by one operation; one set up in London, July, 1859.

Prinfecting surfaces. Vulcanised india rubber was first employed for this purpose by Mr. John Leighton, F.S.A., about 1862, and patented in the name of Alfred Leighton, 1863. The application is much used for hand-stamps for books, &c.

The Rotary Type-Casting Machine, invented 1858, by Frederick Wicks, perfected 1861. Costs one million types in 24 hours. Supplied The Times with new point each day (1902) and Morning Post (1915).

The monotype machine, a very popular machine (1910). A day which copy is automatically set, and each letter afterwards cast separately, was first introduced in 1877. In 1895 an improved machine containing 255 characters was introduced. The invention was originally American.

The Stringertype type-setting and type-casting machine, invented by Mr. H. J. S. Gilbert-Stringer, perfected and put on the market, June, 1877.

Death of Mr. Urban M. Nelder, well-known printer dead, aged 53, from gas poisoning, 5 April, 1890.

inception in the suggestion made in 1894 by the departmental committee on prisons (Str. Herbert Gladstone, chairman) "that the most determined effort should be made to induce less serious and incipient criminals, and to prevent them by strong restraint and rational treatment from recruiting the criminal class." The scheme was at first applied to the Tower, but later extended to Broadmoor in 1902, and from thence transferred to Brixton, where it came into more active operation, Oct. 1902. In outline the scheme works on the basis of the "indeterminate sentence, the maximum sentence; discretion being allowed the governor, chaplain, and medical officer, acting as a committee, to reconsider the term, should the conduct of the prisoner warrant such treatment. The position of the first 6 months of his sentence appears before the committee, and his case is thoroughly examined, and if it appears that he is likely to really benefit by his release the prisoner is remitted a part of his sentence. Moral and religious influences are brought to bear upon each prisoner, and habits of industry and the cultivation of self-respect inculcated and encouraged. Various trades are taught, and recreations within the limits of discipline are permitted. The visiting committee in its report (1902-3) states that out of a total of 208 youths received only in three cases was it necessary for them to come back to the local prison as incorrigibles. The period of 6 months' imprisonment being in the opinion of the prison committee a period for any lesser impression to be made on criminal character, they have decided to transfer to Borstal only cases of 12 months' sentence and upwards. In 1904 an association was formed to help the prisoners at Borstal on their discharge, and to supervise their future career. Borstal association report, 31 March, 1905, states that as a result of the passing of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1903, which comes into force 1 Aug., 1905, the system will take its place as a recognised part of our penal administration, and girls will be included in the Borstal system of treatment and after care. 265 boys received and cared for at Borstal; 38 new baskets. Name of the Borstal prison changed to The Borstal Institution by order of Home Secretary, and one of the dispersed forts on the Medway taken over to train the lads for seafaring life, 6 Aug., 1906. The principles of the Borstal scheme are acted upon in some of the states of America, at Elmina, and at Concow.

PRIVATE BILLS, see Acts of Parliament.

PRIVATEER, a ship belonging to private individuals, sailing with a licence (termed a Letter of Marque), granted by a government in time of war, to seize and plunder the ships of the enemy. The practice, said to have been adopted by Edward I, against the Portuguese in 1295, was general during the war between Spain and the Netherlands in the 17th century, and during the last French war. Privateering was abolished by the great sovereigns of Europe by treaty, 30 March, 1850. The United States government refused to agree unless the right of blockade was also given up. The British government declined this, asserting "that the system of privateering had become essential to its naval supremacy." On 17 April, 1861, Jefferson Davis, president of the southern confederacy, announced his intention of issuing letters of marque, and on the 19th president Lincoln proclaimed that all southern privateers should be treated as pirates. This decree was not carried out; see United States. All the great powers for- bare privateering during the American civil war (which see). By the treaty of Washington priva- teering was prohibited; and April, 1898, in relation to the Spanish-American war, a Spanish decree maintains liberty of action.

PRIVILEGED PLACES, see Asylums.

PRIVY COUNCIL. A council said to have been instituted by Alfred, 865. The number of the council was about twelve when it discharged the functions of state, now confined to the members of the cabinet; but it had become of unwieldy amount before 1679, in which year it was remodelled upon Sir William Temple's plan, and reduced to thirty members; Albertus John Medway, earl of Shaftesbury, being president. The number is now unlimited. To attempt the life of a privy councillor in the execution of his office was made capital, occasioned by Giscar's stabbing Mr. Harley while the latter was examining him on a charge of high treason, 9 June, 1711.

"The Proceedings and Ordinances of the Privy Council of England from Henry II. to 1801, edited by sir H. Nicolas, 7 vols.," were published by the record commissioners, 1834-7.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL. In lieu of the Court of Delegates, for appeals from the lord chancellors of Great Britain and of Ireland in cases of admiralty—from the Ecclesiastical and Admiralty Courts of England, and from the Vice-Admiralty courts abroad—from the Wexford of the Stannaries, and the Isle of Man, and other islands, and the Colonial courts, &c., fixed by statute 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 41, 1833; amended by other acts in 1844, 1851, 1852.

PRIVY SEAL, THE LORD, the fifth great officer of state, has the custody of the privy seal, which he must not put to any grant, without good warrant under the king's signet. This seal is used by the king to all charters, grants, and pardons, signed by him before they come to the great seal. Richard Fox, bishop of Winchester, held this office in the reign of Henry VIII. previously to 1523, when Cuthbert Tunstall, bishop of London, was appointed. The privy seal has been on some occasions in commission—Bentzon. See under Liverpool, Canterbury, Wellington, and succeeding Administrators.

PRIZE-FIGHTING, see Boxing.

PRIZE MONEY, arising from captures made from the enemy, was de creed by government to be divided into eight equal parts, and distributed by order of ranks, 17 April, 1793. The distribution of army prize-money is regulated by an act passed in 1832. Naval prize-money is now regulated by royal proclamation; the last, July, 1760.

PROBABILITY. Theory of (termed by Butler, "the guide of life."), by Laplace, "good sense reduced to calculation," was originated by Pascal, and taken up by Fermat, in their correspondence in 1654.

Its object is "the determination of the number of ways in which an event may happen or fail, in order that we may judge whether the chances of its happening or failing are equal."—Laplace.

It has been treated upon by the most eminent mathematicians, viz., the Bernoullis, De Moivre, D'Alembert, Euler, Lagrange, Laplace, and Quotedet.

Lagrange is said to have "composed "History of Probability," published 1771.

PROBATE COURT, established in Aug. 1857, by 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, which abolished all powers exercised by the ecclesiastical courts in the granting of probates of wills, &c.; see Procurator Court.

The first judge appointed, 5 Jan. 1858, was sir Crosswell Crosswell, who took his seat on 12 Jan. On his death, sir James P. Wilde (aft. lord Penzance) was appointed judge, 28 Aug. 1863; see Supreme Court.

The president of the probate, divorce, and admiralty division, sir James Hannon (1872), succeeded by sir Charles P. PROCLAMATIONS, ROYAL, "have only a binding force when grounded upon and to enforce the laws of the realm."—Coke. Henry VIII., in 1583, declared that they were valid as acts of parliament. This act was annulled, 1547.

The lord-lieutenant of Ireland has power by proclamation to place districts under the provisions of the Criminal Law Procedure acts, 1881 and 1887, which districts are then said to be proclaimed.

PROCONSUL, a Roman consul, whose tenure of office was extended beyond his legal term. Q. Publiu!ius was the first proconsul appointed during the war with Partheneque, 247 B.C. The name was afterwards given to governors of provinces.

PROCTOR (from procurator), an office in ecclesiastical courts, corresponding to that of an attorney or solicitor in courts of common law. It was abolished by the Judicature act, 1873. The persons chosen to represent the clergy in convocation are termed proctors. The university proctors enforce discipline.

PROFILES. The first profile taken, as recorded, was that of Antigonus, who, having but once e, his likeness was so taken, 330 B.C.—AdaSon. "Until the end of the 3rd century, I have not seen a Roman emperor with a full face; they were always painted or appeared in profile, which gives us the view of a head in a very majestic manner."—Adelson.

PROGRESSISTS, a political party in Spain, headed by Esperarte, duke of Victoria, and latterly by general Prim. Since 1865 they adopted a policy of inaction in public affairs; by uniting with the unionists and republicans in Sept. 1868, the government were overthrown, see Spain.

A party in Servia and also in Portugal are termed Progressists. In England, since 1838 (see), the radical party in county councils, and similar bodies have been termed Progressives, and their opponents Radicals.

PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION. The scheme proposed by Mr. Thomas Hare in 1857, in a pamphlet on "Representation," and perfected in his "Treatise on the Election of Representatives," published in 1859, which was well received by Mr. J. Stuart Mill. A society to introduce this principle was formed in Feb. 1884.

It proposed that "in all cases where an elector is entitled to one vote only, to enable the elector to nominate more than one candidate to whom, under certain circumstances, that vote might be transferred in the manner indicated by the elector." Negatived by the conventions, 134, 15, 13, March, 1885.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT. By an act passed 12 Aug. 1897, the crown was enabled to issue a proclamation for the prorogation of parliament during the recess.

PROSECUTOR. By the Prosecution of Offences act, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 22 (3 July, 1879), the appointment of a director of public prosecutions with assistants was enacted, somewhat resembling officers in Scotland and Ireland. It came into operation 1 Jan. 1880. John Blossom Maule appointed director of public prosecutions, Dec. 1879; succeeded by sir Augustus Stephenson, 1884; succeeded by the hon. Hamilton Cuffe, now earl of Desart, Oct. 1894; succeeded by sir Chas. W. Mathews, May, 1909.

A committee reported the plan to be a failure, and recommended changes, June; act amended, 1884-5. 551 prosecutions; 451 convictions in 1893; 449 in 1900; 652 in 1908.

A public prosecutor, "procureur du roi," in France, is mentioned in the 14th century; replaced by "procureur public" (elected), 1791; by "commissionnaire national," 1793; "procureur" restored by Napoleon I.

PROTESTIONISTS, that section of the conservative party which opposed the repeal of the corn laws, and which separated from sir Robert Peel in 1846. The name was derived from a "Society for the Protection of Agriculture" of which was the duke of Richmond was chairman, and which had been established to counteract the efforts of the Anti-Corn Law League, 17 Feb. 1844. Lord George Bentinck was the head of the party from 1846 till his death, 21 Sept. 1848. The Derby administration not proposing the restoration of the corn-laws, the above society was dissolved, 7 Feb. 1853. The protection of native manufactures has been maintained in the United States since 1868, and in France, Germany, and other countries. See France, March, 1887; England, 1893; United States, Oct. 1890.

President Cleveland condemned protection, 3 March, 1893. See Fair Trade, Free Trade, Tariff Reforms League, and Preferential Tariffs.

PROTECTION OF LIFE AND PROPERTY ACT (for part of Ireland), passed 16 June, 1871; another, 3 March, 1881. See Ireland.

PROTECTORATES IN ENGLAND. That of the earl of Pembroke, 10 Oct. 1216, ended by his death, 1218. Of Humphry, duke of Gloucester, began 31 Aug. 1222; he was seized 11 Feb. 1247, and found dead a few days after. Of Richard, duke of Gloucester, began May, 1483, and ended by his posthumous removal in 1484. Of Edmund, duke of Kent, same year. Of Somerset began 28 Jan. 1543, and ended by his resignation in 1549. Of Oliver Cromwell began 10 Dec. 1653, and ended by his death, 3 Sept. 1658. He firmly refused to be styled king, as solicited by the parliament, Feb. May, 1657. Of Richard Cromwell began 3 Sept. 1658, and ended by his resignation, 25 May, 1659; see England.

PROTEIN, from the Greek (πρωτειν), principally; a chemical term introduced by Mudder about 1844, for the basis of albumen, fibrin, and casein.

PROTESTANT REFORMATION SOCIETY, established 1820; it employs missionaries and readers.

PROTESTANTS. The emperor Charles V, called a diet at Spires in 1529, to request aid from the German princes against the Turks, and to devise means for allaying the religious disputes which then raged owing to Luther's opposition to the Roman catholic clergy. Against a decree of this diet, to support the doctrine of the church of Rome, six Lutheran princes, with the deputies of thirteen imperial towns, formally and solemnly protested, 19 April, 1529. Hence the term protestants was given to the followers of Luther; it afterwards included Calvinists, and other sects separated from the see of Rome. The six protestant princes were: the elector of Saxony; George, marquis of Brandenburg; Ernest and Francis, the dukes of Luneburg; the landgrave of Hesse; and the prince of Anhalt; these were joined by the citizens of Strasburg, Nuremberg, Ulm, Constance, Heilbron, and seven other cities; see Lutheranism, Calvinism, Huguenots, Germany, Church of England, etc.

During three years of Mary's reign, 275 persons were brought to the block; because of religion, imprisonment, fines, and confiscations. Among those who suffered by fire were 5 bishops, 27 clergy, 8 lawyers, 84 tradesmen, 18 husbands, 25 wives, 25 children, and 4 children. The principal agents of the queen were the bishops Gardiner and Bonner. Elizabeth restores Protestantism 1559. Protestant settlements formed in Ulster, N. Ireland 1632. PROVISORS, STATUTES OF, beginning 25 Edward III., 1351-2, prohibited the pope from appointing aliens and others to benefices before they were vacant.

PROVOST, the chief municipal magistrate of a city or burgh in Scotland, corresponding to the English mayor. The provosts of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Perth, and in 1892 Dundee, are styled "lord provosts."

PROVVEDIMENTO SOCIETIES, in Italy, formed to aid in acquiring Rome and Venice, elected Garibaldi as their chief, 10 March, 1862. They were tolerated by Ricassoli, and were to be moderate by Rattazzi.

PROXIES. Voting, by proxy, an ancient privilege of the house of peers, was very frequently abused. In the reign of Charles II., when the duke of Buckingham sometimes brought 20 proxies in his pocket, it was ordered that no peer should bring more than two proxies. From 1830 to 1867, both inclusive, proxies were only called for 73 times. In conformity with the recommendation of a committee, a new "standing order" was adopted, 31 March, 1868, by which it was ordered "that the practice of calling for proxies on a division shall be discontinued."

PUBLIC MEETINGS, for political purposes, were occasionally held in England in the latter part of the 17th century, but became very frequent in the reign of George III. The meetings in Devonshire in 1753 to protest against the Cider Tax, were very effective, and set an example speedily followed, with the warm approval of Burke, Fox, and other statesmen. These meetings were prohibited by the Gagging acts, which see, passed in 1765; see Sedition. In the reign of George III the right public meetings was fully assured, and they were very effectual in relation to the passing the Reform acts, the Repeal of the Corn Laws, and other important measures. See Hyde Park. The place on which the speakers stand is termed a "platform," corresponding to the Roman rostrum, and the French tribune. The term "platform" is also applied to a set of political or religious opinions held by a party; such as the "platform of Geneva." Hooker.

PUBLIC OFFICES SITE ACT (for the Admiralty and War) passed 24 July, 1882.

PUBLIC SAFETY, COMMITTEE OF, was established at Paris during the French Revolution on 6 April, 1793, with absolute power, in consequence of the coalition against France. The severe government of this committee is termed the Reign of Terror, which ended with the execution of Robespierre and his associates, 28 July, 1794. A similar committee was established at Paris by the communists, March-May, 1791.

PUBLISHERS.

Publishers existed in Rome in the earliest days of the empire; between 1570-1570, 28 editions of parts or whole of the English Bible were published. Amongst the first writers who wrote in English, and all sorts of books were formed into a guild, the Stationers' Company, 1562; the company had no control over printed books till 1557. The charter granted then was renewed 1558, amended 1624, confirmed 1660, and is still virtually in existence; entry of copies at Stationers' Hall commenced 1568.

Some of the leading publishers and dates established:—

- Bickham, London, 1582; John Bickham, 1582; Archbishops Constable, 1588; William Bickham, 1584; Henry Bickham, 1588; Bickham & Co., 1589; Jan. Bickham & Co., 1589; Smith, Elder & Co., about 1610; Sampson Low & Co., 1617; John Alcuin, about 1620; A. & C. Black, 1706; Bartow & Co., 1709; Sharp, 1722; Smith, Elder & Co., about 1810; Samuel Low & Co., 1833; John Alcuin, about 1640; W. & R. Chambers, 1712; Macmillan & Co., 1823; Cassell & Co., 1823; Ward, Lock & Co., including Tegg (1808); Moxon (1829), 1874.

PUEBLA, see Mexico, 1803.

PUERTO, see Porto.

PULLEY, vice, and other mechanical instruments, are said to have been invented by Archytas of Tarentum, about 400 B.C., or by Archimedes, 285-212 B.C. In a single movable pulley the power gained is doubled; in a continuous combination the power is equal to the number of pulleys, less one, doubled.

PULMANN CARS, see under Railways, 1872.

PULTOWA (Russia), where Charles XII. of Sweden was entirely defeated by Peter the Great of Russia, 8 July, 1709. He fled to Bender, in Turkey.

PULTUSK (Russia), where a battle was fought between the Saxons, under their king Augustus, and the Swedes, under Charles XII., in which the former were signally defeated, 1 May, 1703. Here also the French under Napoleon fought the Russian and Prussian armies: both sides claimed the victory, but it inclined in favour of the French, 26 Dec. 1806.

PUMPS. Cistibius of Alexandria is said to have invented pumps (with other hydraulic instruments), about 224 B.C., although the invention is ascribed to Damaus, at Lindus, 1585. The pumps were in general use in England, A.D. 1425. An inscription on the pump in the front of the late Royal Exchange, London, stated that the well was sunk in 1828. The air-pump was invented by Otto Guericke in 1654, and improved by Boyle in 1657; see Air and Wells.

PUNCH, the puppet show, borrowed from the Italian Polichinello, is descended from a character well known in the theatres of ancient Rome. Fasbroke. The satirical weekly publication, Punch, or the London Charivari, was established by Henry Mayhew, Mark Lemon, Douglas Jerrold, Gilbert a' Beckett, and others: amongst its early contributors were Wm. J. Thackeray; Prof. E. Forbes, and other eminent writers; first published 17 July, 1841. Mark Lemon, the first editor, died 23 May, 1870; 2nd, Shirley Brooks, died 23 Feb. 1874; 3rd, Tom Taylor, 24 July, 1874; 4th, W. T. Cosway Bulman, 1880-1906; 5th, Owen Seaman, Richard Boyle, 1874, who designed the wrapper, and was a frequent contributor, died 11 Dec. 1883; John Leech died 1874, and was succeeded by Mr. George Du Maurier, born in Paris, 6 March, 1834, died, 8 Oct. 1896. Mr. Percival Leigh, an early and long-contributing editor to Punch, died 22 Oct., 1896, aged 57; Charles Keene, artist, a contributor since 1850, died 4 Jan., 1891. Phil May, artist and clever caricaturist, died, aged 39, 5 Aug. 1893. John Tenniel, caricaturist, since 1851 (bnt. 1893), resigns, Jan. 1901; succeeded by Linley Sambourne. Mr. Wm. Agnew, proprietor (bnt. June, 1893). An interesting jubilee number of Punch was published 17 July, 1879. Mr. Wm. Haddock Bradbury, Sir Francis Burman retires from the editorship, succeeded by Mr. Owen Seaman 14 Feb. 1906 Punch libel case, see Trials .

PUNCTUATION. The Hebrew accents for punctuation are very ancient. The period (.) is the most ancient; the colon (;) was introduced about 1450; the comma (,) was first seen about 1521, and the semicolon (;) about 1570. In Sir Philip Sidney's "Arcadia" (1587), they all appear, as well as the note of interrogation (?), asterisk (*), and parentheses ( ).

PUNJAUB (N. W. Hindostan) was traversed by Alexander the Great, 327 B.C.; by Tamerlane, A.D. 1398; by Mahmoud of Ghizni, about 1000. It was an independent state under Runjeet Singh, 1791-1839. Our wars with the Sikhs began here, 14 Dec. 1845, and were closed on 29 March, 1846, when the Punjab was annexed; see India. The Punjab has since greatly flourished, and on 1 Jan. 1859, was made a distinct presidency (to include the Sutlej states and the Delhi territory); see Durbur. The Sirhind canal (502 miles) opened by the viceroy, marquis of Ripon, 23 Nov. 1882. Local self-government bill passed 10 Oct. 1883. Area, 77,209 sq. miles; population in 1901, 22,155,764; 1910 (est.) 21,700,000 Capital, Lahore; population, 1901, 120,658; 1910 (est.) 132,000.

(Dhulceep Singh (son of Runjeet Singh), born 1835, received a pension of 40,000. He resided in England till 1826 when he sailed for India; in consequence of an indiscreet proclamation to the Sikhs he was stopped at Aden about 5 May, 1886. After his release he wandered about Europe; in May 1886 he married a European in France, said to have been a prostitute, and manifesto to the Sikhs, ordering them to rebellion, indignantly rejected with strong censure, Nov. 1889. After severe illness, he left for his country, 25 July, and is pardoned by queen Victoria, 1 Aug. 1890; received by her at Grasse, 31 March, 1894; dies at Paris, 22 Oct. 1894.)

PURCHASE OF LAND, see under Land.

PURCHASE SYSTEM in the army. The payment of a present or gratuity for a commission was prohibited by William III., 1693; but in 1702 purchase was legally re-organised. In 1711 the sale of commissions was forbidden without the royal permission; in 1719-20 regulations were issued; and a fixed scale of prices was adopted in consequence of a commission in 1755. Large over-regulation payments continued to be paid. Commissions of inquiry were held frequently after 1888; and in 1871 the system was abolished, with compensation, by royal warrant, 26 July, 1871, the bill for the purpose having been rejected by the house of lords. For amounts paid, see under Army.

PURGATIVES of the mild species (aperients), particularly cassia, manna, and senna, are ascribed to Actuarius, a Greek physician, 1245.

PURGATORY, where, it is believed by the Roman catholics, the soul passes through the fire of purification before it enters the kingdom of God. The doctrine was known about 250; was introduced into the Roman church in the 5th century, and made a religion of the dogma by Gregory I., 590-604. It was first set forth by a council at Florence, 1439; enforced by the council of Trent, Dec. 1563; see Indulgences.

PURIFICATION, after childbirth, was ordained by the Jewish law, 1400 b.c. (Lev. xii.); see Churching. The feast of the purification was instituted, 1421, in honour of the virgin Mary's going to the temple. (Luke ii.) Pope Sergius I. ordered the procession with wax tapes, whence Candlemas-day.

PURITANS, the name first given, it is said, about 1564, to persons who aimed at greater purity of doctrine, holiness of life and stricter discipline than others. They withdrew from the established church, professing to follow the word of God alone, and maintaining that the church retained many human inventions and popish superstitions; see Cathari, Nonconformists, and Presbyterianism.

PURLEY, see Diversion.

PURPLE. a mixed tinge of scarlet and blue, discovered at Tyre. It is said that Hercules Tyrius having observed his dog's lips to be stained, after eating a shell-fish named murex or purpur, was thereby led to invent the dye. Purple was accidentally used by the princes and great men for their garments. It was restricted to the emperor by Justinian I., 532, and porphyrocyclus attached to the names of some emperors signifies "born to the purple."
PURVEYANCE, an ancient prerogative of the sovereigns of England of purchasing provisions, &c., without the consent of the owners, led to much oppression. It was regulated by Magna Charta, 1215, and other statutes, and was only surrendered by Charles II. in 1660, for a compensation.

PUSHBBSM, a name attached to the views of certain clergyman and lay members of the church of England who proposed to restore the practice of the church of England to what they believed to be required by the language of her Liturgy and Rubrics, but which were considered by their opponents to be of a Romish tendency. The term was derived from the name of the professor of Hebrew at Oxford, Dr. Elwd. Pusey. The heads of houses of the university of Oxford passed resolutions censuring Dr. Pusey's attempts to renew practices which are now obsolete, 15 March, 1841; and his celebrated sermon was condemned by the same body, 30 May, 1843; he died to Sept. 1882; see Tractarians, and Ritualism.

PUTNEY, anciently Putieli and Putenheath, N.E. Surrey, on the Thames, opposite Fulham. A new granite bridge, founded by the prince of Wales (to replace the wooden one completed in 1729), 12 July, 1884. Opened by the prince, 29 May, 1880.

PYDNA (Macedon), where Perseus, the last king of Macedon, was defeated and made prisoner by the Romans, commanded by Emilius Paulus, 22 June, 168 B.C.

PYRAMIDS OF EGYPT, about 75 in number, of various sizes, constructed for the preservation of mummies of the kings and their families. The Stepped Pyramid of Sakkara is conjecturally assigned to Osiris, of the first dynasty, see Egypt. Three great pyramids are situated near Gizeh on the W. bank of the Nile. The first or greatest, is said to have been erected as the tomb of Cheops, fourth dynasty, the Cheops of Hecateus, dated by Brugsch, 2513-2466 B.C. Its height is said to have been originally 476 feet, and its base 774 square feet. The second pyramid is ascribed to Chafra, or Chephren, 2526-2494 B.C. The third pyramid is said to have been built by Menkaura or Mycerinus, 2485 B.C.

The pyramids have been visited and described by Belzoni, 1826-1829; Vesp. 1827; Frazier Smith, and others, see Egypt Explorers and Travelers.

Some of the eleven pyramids at Sakkara explored by M. Musper, 1826-1827.

At the battle of the Pyramids, Napoleon Bonaparte defeated the Mameluke, and thereby conquered Lower Egypt, 1 and 21 July, 1798.

PYRENEES. After the battle of Vittoria (fought 21 June, 1813), Napoleon sent Souch to supersede Jourdan, with instructions to drive the allies across the Ebro; Souch retreated into France with a loss of more than 20,000 men, having been defeated by Wellington in a series of engagements from 23 July to 2 Aug. One at the Pyrenees on 28 July. A railway through the Pyrenees from Bilbao to Miranda was opened 21 Aug., 1862.—The Peace of the Pyrenees was concluded between France and Spain, by cardinal Mazarin, for the French king, and don Louis de Haro, on the part of Spain, in the island of Pearsants, on the Bidassoa. By this treaty Spain yielded Biscay, Artois, and her right to Alsace; and France ceded her conquests in Catalonia, Italy, &c., and engaged not to assist Portugal, Nov. 10th.

PYROLETER, a mechanical and chemical apparatus for extinguishing fires, especially in ships, invented by Dr. Paton.

PYROMETER (fire-measurer), an apparatus employed to ascertain the temperature of furnaces, &c., where thermometers cannot be employed; Muschenbroek's pyrometer (a metallic bar) was described by him in 1731. Improvements were made by Elfoll and others. Wedgwood employed clay cylinders, 1782-6. In 1850 professor Daniell received the Rumford medal for an excellent pyrometer made in 1821. Mr. Ericsson's pyrometer appeared in the Great Exhibition of 1851. (Eng. 0.) Mr. (aft. sir) C. W. Siemens' electric pyrometer and those of Beechere, and Le Châtelier are also in use.

PYROPHONE (Greek, pur, fire; phone, voice), a musical instrument, invented by M. Frédéric Kastner, of Paris. It consists of glass tubes of various lengths; the tones being produced by what are termed "singing flames." It is based upon the "chemical harmonicon." Keys are attached for playing, as in the piano. The invention was reported to the French Academy of Sciences, 17 March, 1873; exhibited at Vienna, same year; and at the Society of Arts, 17 Feb. 1875. M. Kastner died aged 31, 6 April, 1882.

PYROXYLIN, the chemical name of Gun Cotton (which see).

PYRRHONISM, see Sceptics.

PYTHAGOREAN PHILOSOPHY. Pythagoras, of Samos, head of the Ionic sect, flourished in the 6th century B.C. He is said to have taught the doctrine of metempsychosis, or transmigration of the soul from one body to another, forbidden his disciples to eat flesh and beans, invented the multiplication table, improved geometry, and taught the present system of astronomy.

PYTHIAN GAMES, in honour of Apollo, near the temple of Delphi; asserted to have been instituted by himself, in commemoration of his victory over the serpent, Python. Also said to have been established by Agamemnon, or Diomedes, or Amphitryon, or lastly, by the council of the Amphitrions, 1263 B.C. They lasted till 394.

PYX, the casket in which Catholic priests keep the consecrated wafer. In the ancient chapel of the pyx, at Westminster Abbey, are deposited the standard pieces of gold and silver, under the joint custody of the lords of the treasury and the comptroller-general. The "trial of the pyx" signifies the verification of the goldsmiths to the pyx or chest by the master of the mint; this took place on 17 July, 1861, at the exchequer office, Old Palace-yard, in the presence of twelve privy councillors, twelve goldsmiths, and others, and on 15 Feb. 1870. This trial is said to have been ordered in the reign of Henry II., 1154-89; King James was present at one in 1614. The first annual trial of the pyx, appointed by the Coinage act of 1870, took place 18 July, 1871; new regulations issued. Feb. 1904.
QUACKERY, or medical imposture, is very ancient. Quack medicines were taxed in 1783 et seq. An inquest was held on the body of a young lady, Miss Cashin, whose physician, St. John Long, was afterwards tried for manslaughter, 21 Aug. 1830; he was found guilty, and sentenced to pay a fine of 250l. 30 Oct. following. He was tried for manslaughter in the case of Mrs. Catherine Lloyd, and acquitted, 19 Feb. 1831. Dr. Virès, “the black doctor,” a professed cancer-curer, at Paris, was condemned to fifteen months’ imprisonment as an impostor in Jan. 1800. See Trials, 8 July, 1893.

QUADRAGESIMA SUNDAY, first Sunday in Lent and 40th day before Good Friday; see Lent, and Quinquagesima.

QUADRANT, a mathematical instrument in the form of a quarter of a circle. The solar quadrant was introduced about 200 B.C. The Arab astronomers under the caliphs, in 955, had a quadrant of 21 feet 8 inches radius, and a sextant 59 feet 9 inches radius. Davis’s quadrant for measuring angles was produced about 1600; Hadley’s quadrant about 1731; see Navigation.

QUADRILATERAL or QUADRANGLE, terms applied to four strong fortresses in N. Italy, long held by the Austrians, but surrendered to the Italians, Oct. 1866.—Peschiera, on an island in the Mincio; Mantua on the Mincio; Verona and Legnago, both on the Adige; see Italy, Pescheria, &c.

The Turkish quadrilateri was Shumal, Varna, Rindcherk, and Silistra, lost to the sultan by the treaty of Berlin, which established the autonomy of Bulgaria.

QUADRILLE, a dance (originally quadrille de contre danse, introduced into French ballets about 1745), in its present form became popular in France about 1804. It was introduced into this country about 1808 (Miss Berry), and promoted by the dukes of Devonshire and others, in 1813. Ratenis.

QUESTORS (seekers). Two questores patri- cii, public prosecutors, in cases of murder and other capital crimes, acted in Rome under the kings; two questores classicci, who had the management of the public treasure; appointed about 484 B.C. The number of questors was raised from time to time, as circumstances demanded.

Quakers were first elected in 409 B.C. There were eight questors in 265; Sulla raised the number to twenty; Julius Caesar to forty.

QUAKERS or SOCIETY OF FRIENDS, some of whom sprang from those called Seekers, from their seeking the truth. (3 John, 14). Justice Bennet, of Derby, gave the society the name of Quakers in History. The first meeting-house in London was at the Bull and Mouth, Aldersgate-street. Headquarters of the Friends in England, Devonshire-house, Bishopsgate, London, E.C. A numerous body of Friends called the Hicksites, from the name of its founder, Elias Hicks, exists in the United States; the Wilburite sect in Pennsylvania is characterized by its adherence to the old-fashioned costume and mode of speech. Their principles are contained in Christian discipline being "Extricates of minutes," &c. (from the beginning), published 1721; revised 1802, 1818, and 1821, now issued in two volumes. Vol. I. now undergoing revision; Vol. II. revised 1866.

The Quakers early suffered grievous persecutions. At Boston, U.S., where the first Friends who arrived were females, they were cruelly treated, and had their ears cut off; some put to death. In 1659 it was stated in parliament that 2000 Friends had endured sufferings and imprisonment in Newgate; and 140 Friends offered themselves at this time, by name, to government, to be imprisoned in lieu of an equal number in danger from confinement of death, 1659. Fifty-five (out of 120 sentenced) were taken on board ships for transportation to America. The masters of vessels refusing to carry them for some months, an embargo was laid on West India ships, when a mercenary watch was at length found for the service. The Friends would not walk on board, nor would the sailors hoist them into the vessel, and soldiers from the Tower were employed. In 1665, the vessel sailed; but it was immediately captured by the Dutch, who liberated twenty-eight of the prisoners in Holland, the rest having died of the plague. Few reached America.

First meeting of Quakers in Ireland 1645; in Dublin a few years later; and their first meeting in Dublin was at a private house near Parnell-street, 1651; moved to Bride’s Alley 1657. Synagogue Alley (Euston-street) meeting-house was first built 1652.

The solemn affirmation of Quakers enacted to be taken in all cases in the courts below, wherein oaths are required from other subjects (see Aftermotion). John Archdale, a Quaker, elected M.P. for Chipping Wycombe; refused to take the oaths, and his election was declared void. 1699
Quakers emancipated their negro slaves. 1 Jan. 1758
A schism in the society was begun in America about 1787, by Elias Hicks publishing his opinions denying the divinity of Christ and his atonement and the authority of the Holy Scriptures. His numerous followers are styled Hicksite Friends. Joseph Pearce, a Quaker, was accused to parliament on his admission, 15 Feb. 1833. At an annual assembly it was agreed that marriages with non-members should be permitted. 1838

An act passed rendering valid Quaker marriages when only one of the persons is a Quaker. May, 1860. Quaker summer school of theology at Scarborough. 4-18 Aug. 1867

QUALIFICATION FOR OFFICE ABOLITION ACT, passed May, 1866, rendered it unnecessary to make and subscribe certain declarations.

QUARANTINE. The custom observed at Venice as early as 1127, whereby all merchants and others coming from the Levant were obliged to remain in the house of St. Lucarz or the Lazaretto, forty days before they were admitted into the city. In the times of plague, England and all other nations oblige those that come from the infected places to remain with their ships, or, in a longer or shorter time, as may be judged most safe. Quarantine acts were passed in 1753 and in 1825. The system was abolished in England by an act passed 1860, and the old quarantine men-of-war in the Solent were broken up. Quarantine established throughout Europe, in consequence of the bubonic plague at Bombay (which sees). 10 Jan. 1897. By order of council, 10 Nov. 1896, foreign cattle were made subject to quarantine.

QUARRIES. An act was passed for their regulation in 1894. See State.

QUARTERLY REVIEW, the organ of the Tory party. The publication was proposed to Mr. George Canning, and his support solicited by Mr. John Murray, the publisher, in a letter dated 25 Sept. 1807, in opposition to the opinions of the Edinburgh Review. Mr. Murray was assisted by Walter Scott, Robert Southey, John Gibson Lockhart (editor 1825-53), J. W. Croker, and other eminent persons. It first appeared Feb. 1809, with William Gifford, the celebrated translator of "Juvenal" as editor. He died 31 Dec. 1829.

QUARTER SESSIONS established 25 Edw. III. 1330-1. Days of sitting appointed, 2 Hen. V. 1415. In 1830 it was enacted that quarter sessions of the peace should be held in the first whole weeks after 11 Oct., 28 Dec., 31 March, and 25 June. Further regulated, 1842, 1853, and 1858. Brewhouse Sessions are regulated by the Licensing Act 1872.

QUASI-MODO, a name given to Low Sunday (the first Sunday after Easter) from the commencement of a hymn sung on that day.

QUATERNIONS, an important mathematical method or calculus, invented by Sir Wm. Rowan Hamilton, about 1843.

It is based upon the separation of multiplication from addition, and its fundamental idea is mental transformation or motion by what he termed vectors. It is attributed to addition motion from a point; to multiplication about a point. Four numbers are generally involved, hence the name quaternion.

QUATRE-BRAS (Belgium). Here on 10 June, 1815, two days before the battle of Waterloo, a battle was fought between the British and allied army under the duke of Brunswick, the prince of Orange and sir Thomas Picton, and the French under marshal Ney. The British fought with remarkable intrepidity, notwithstanding their inferiority in number, and their fatigue through marching all the preceding night. The 42nd regiment (Royal Highlanders) suffered severely in pursuit of a French division by cuirassiers posted in ambush behind growing corn. The duke of Brunswick was killed.

Governors: Sir George Ferguson Bowen, the first governor, 1859 (died 1899), succeeded by Mr. Blackall, 1868; the marquis of Normanby, 1871; Mr. Wm. Wellington Cairns, 1874; sir Arthur E. Kennedy, Jan. 1877; Sir John Clarke, 1878; (died Dec. 1880); sir Henry Arthur Blake, Nov. (appointed to by the colony); resigns about 27 Nov.; sir Henry Wylie Norman appointed Nov. 1883; lord Lamington, 1895; major-gen. sir Herbert Chalmers, 1902; lord Chelmsford, 1905; sir W. Macgregor, 1909.

QUEENSTOWN (Upper Canada). This town, on the river Niagara, was taken in the war with U.S.N.A. by the troops of the United States, 13 Oct. 1812; but was retaken by the British forces, who defeated the Americans with considerable loss in killed, wounded, and prisoners, on the same day. Queenstown suffered severely in this war.—The Cove of Cork, Ireland, was named QUEENSTOWN, 30 April, 1854, by queen Victoria, on her visit. The U.S. steamer America was burnt here, 29 Nov. 1893.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY (see Queen's College), was directed to be dissolved by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 65 (1879), and was dissolved by proclamation, 31 Jan. 1882; see University of Ireland.

QUENTIN, ST. (N. France). The duke of Savoy, with the army of Philip II. of Spain, assisted by the English, defeated the French under the constable De Montmorency, at St. Quentin, 10 Aug. 1557. In fulfilment of a vow made before the engagement, the king built the monastery, palace, &c., the Escurial (which see). During the Franco-German war the army of the north, under Frhr. von der Marne, was defeated here by the Germans after seven hours' fighting, on 10 Jan. 1871.

QUERETARO (Mexico), was besieged and taken (through the treachery of Lopez) by the liberal general Escobedo, 15th May 1867. The emperor Maximilian and his generals Miramont and Mejia, were taken prisoners, and after trial were shot 19 June following.

QUERN or HANDMILL, is probably the implement spoken of in Isaiah xlvi. 2, about 712 B.C. So-called Roman querns have been found in Yorkshire.

QUESNOY (N. France), was taken by the Austrians, 11 Sept. 1753, but was recovered by the French, 16 Aug. 1794. It surrendered to prince Frederick of the Netherlands, 20 June, 1815, after the battle of Waterloo.—It was here that cannon were first used, and called bombard. (Hindu).

QUETTAH, see Belochistan.

QUIBERON BAY (W. France). A British force landed here, Sept. 1756, but was repulsed. In the bay the admiral Hawke gained a complete victory over the French admiral Conflans, and thus defeated the projected invasion of Great Britain, 20 Nov. 1759. Quiberon was taken by some French regiments of Ireland, 3 July, 1795; but on 21 July, through treachery, the French republicans, under Hoche, retook it by surprise, and many emigrants were executed. About 900 of the troops, and nearly 1500 royalist inhabitants who had joined the regiments in the pay of Great Britain, effected their embarkation on board the ships.

QUICKSILVER, in its liquid state, mercury. Its use in refining silver was discovered, 1538. There are mines of it in various parts, the chief of which are at Almaden, in Spain, and at Iridia, in Illyria; the latter, discovered by accident in 1497, for several years yielded 1200 tons a year. A mine was discovered at Ceylon in 1795; and at New Almaden and other places in California. Quicksilver was concealed in winter at St. Petersburg, in 1758. It was concealed in England by a chemical process, without snow or ice, by Mr. Walker, in 1787. Corrosive sublimate, a deadly poison, is a combination of mercury and chlorine; see Cubet.

QUICKUNQUE VULT, see Athanasian Creed.

QUETESCH, the doctrine of Miguel Molinos, a Spaniard (1627-90), whose work, the "Spiritual Guide," published in 1675, was the foundation of a sect in France. He held that religion consisted in an internal silent meditation on the merits of Christ and the Mercys of God. Madame de la Mothe-Gayon, a quietist, was imprisoned in the bastille for her amusements, but released through the interest of Fénélon, archbishop of Cambray, between whom and Bossuet, bishop of Meaux, arose a controversy, 1697. Quietism was finally condemned by pope Innocent XII. in 1699. See Jansenists, Queteschism and Pietism.

QUILLS are said to have been first used for pens in 553; authorities say not before 635.

QUINCE, the Pyrus Cydonia, brought to this country from Austria, before 1575. The Japan quince, or Pyrus japonica, brought hither from Japan, 1790.

QUINDECEMVRi, fifteen men, chosen to keep the Sylline books. The number, originally two (duumviri), about 350 B.C., was increased to ten in 306 B.C., and afterwards (probably by Sylla) to fifteen, about 82 B.C. Julius Caesar added one; but the precedent was not followed.

QUININE or QUINIA, an alkaloid (much used in medicine), discovered in 1820 by Pelletier and Caventou. It is a probable constituent of all genuine cinchona barks, especially of the yellow bark; see Jesuits' Bark. Artificial quinine was prepared (synthetically) by Mr. W. L. Scott, in Oct. 1865.—QUINODINE, see Fluorescence. John Eliot Howard, promoter of the cultivation of cinchona in India, died 22 Nov. 1883.

QUINQUAGESIMA SUNDAY. The observation is said to have been appointed by Gregory the Great (pope, 590-604). The first Sunday in Lent having been termed Quadragesima, and the three weeks preceding having been appropriated to the gradual introduction of the Lent fast, the three Sundays of these weeks were called by names significant of their position in the calendar: and reckoning by decades (tenth), the Sunday preceding Quadragesima regis, the name of the first Sunday, Quinquagesima, the second Sexagesima, and the third Septuagesima.

QUINTILIANS, heretics in the 2nd century, the disciples of Montans, who took their name from Quintilia, a lady whom he had deceived by his pretended sanctity, and whom they regarded as a prophetess. They made the eucharist of bread and cheese, and allowed women to be priests and bishops. Pardon.

QUIRINUS, a Sabine god, whose name was given to Romulus after his death. L. Papirius Cursor, general in the Roman army, first erected a sun-dial in the temple of Quirinus, from which time the days began to be divided into hours, 293 B.C. Aspin. The sun-dial was sometimes called the Quirinus, from the original place in which it was set up. Ashe. The Sabines who became Roman citizens were termed Quirites.

QUITO (capital of the republic of Equator), founded in 1534, was the scene of the measurement of a degree of the meridian, by the French and Spanish mathematicians, 1730-42. Forty thousand persons perished by an earthquake which almost overwhelmed the city of Quito, 4 Feb. 1747. Since then violent shocks, but not so disastrous, occurred; till one, on 22 March, 1859, when about 5000 persons were killed; see Earthquakes and Equator.

QUIXOTE, see Don Quixote.

QUOITS, a game said to have originated with the Greeks, and to have been first played at the Olympic games, by the Idaei Dactyls, fifty years after the deluge of Deucalion, 1453 B.C. Perseus, the grandson of Acrisius, by Danae, having inadvertently slain his grandfather when throwing a quoit, exchanged the kingdom of Argos, to which he was heir, for that of Tirynthus, and founded the kingdom of Mycenae, about 1313 B.C.

QUOTATIONS. Athenaeus's "Deipnosophistae or Banquet of the Learned" (compiled about 228), and Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy" (1621), contain masses of extracts. Henry Ainsworth's "Communion of Saints" (died 1622) is a mosaic of Scripture quotations. Macdouall's "Dictionary of Quotations," 1796; Moore's "Dictionary of Latin Quotations," with a Selection of Greek, published by H. Bohn, 1836 Collections of English Quotations are now numerous: Friswell's "Familiar Words," 2nd ed. 1866 Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations". 1869-91 Adams' "Cyclopaedia of Poetical Quotations". 1853 Bohn's "Dictionary of Poetical Quotations". 1831-4 Several useful books since published.

QUO WARRANTO ACT, passed 1280. By it a writ may be directed to any person to inquire by what authority he holds any office or franchise. Charles II. directed a writ against the corporation of London in 1683, and the court of king's bench declared their charter forfeited. The decision was reversed in 1690. The proceedings have been regulated by various acts, 1710, 1792, 1837, 1843.
RABBITS, see New South Wales, 1887.

The rabbit pest has spread devastation over the Australian colonies. Rabbit-proof wire-netting is chiefly used for checking its progress. The ravages of the jack-rabbits in California and adjoining states checked by hunters, 1865-6. Rabbits destroyed in Queensland by injection with chicken cholera, reported, 22 Oct. 1898.

RABELAIS CLUB, to promote the study of Rabelais and the illustration of his works; lord Houghton, sir W. Frederick Pollock and his sons, Walter Besant, and others; first meeting, Dec. 1879.

Rabelais Gallery, Pall Mall East, opened to the press, 12 Oct.; at the instance of the National Vigilance Association, four pictures were seized as indelent by the police, 3 Nov.; Mr. J. F. Sutton and Mr. H. Scarborough, the exhibitors, were convicted, 3 Dec., and fined 2s. each; the pictures ordered to be destroyed, 12 Nov.; Messrs. Sutton & Scarborough convicted, 13 Dec. 1895; fined 2s. 6d. each; the pictures ordered to be destroyed, 18 April, 1896.

Mr. W. F. Smith's translation of the works of Rabelais was issued by the club, Feb. 1893.

RABBIES, see Hydrophobia.

RACES, one of the ancient games of Greece. Horse-races were known in England in very early times. Fitz-Stephen, in the days of Henry II., mentions the delight taken by the citizens of London in the diversions. In James I.'s reign Croydon in the south, and Garterby in the north, were celebrated courses. In New York there were races, and the prize was a golden bell, 1697. Camden. In the end of Charles I.'s reign, races were run at Hyde Park. Charles II. patronised them, and instead of bells, gave a silver bowl, or cup, value 100 guineas. William III. added to the plates (as did queen Anne), and founded an academy for riding.

At Ascot, begun by the duke of Cumberland, uncle to George III.; mentioned, 1727.

The first racing calendar is said to have been published by John Cheney, Act for suppressing races by ponies and weak horses, 19 Geo. 11. 1739.

The most important race meetings in England are at Newmarket (26,000 guineas, established by Charles II., 1667; and at Epsom, begun about 1711; by Mr. Parkhurst (annual since 1739, Allen's Surrey). The Earl of Derby began the Oaks, 1771; the Derby, 1776 (see Derby Day). Committed for trial; 21 pictures ordered to be destroyed, 12 Nov.; Messrs. Sutton & Scarborough convicted, 13 Dec. 1895; fined 2s. 6d. each; the pictures ordered to be destroyed, 18 April, 1896.

Mr. W. F. Smith's translation of the works of Rabelais was issued by the club, Feb. 1893.

RACK, an engine of torture, for extracting a confession from criminals, mentioned by Demosthenes, de Corone, 57, and in later times an instrument of the Inquisition. Lord Coke states from tradition that the duke of Exeter, in the reign of Henry VI., erected a rack of torture 1447 (thence called the duke of Exeter's daughter), now seen in the Tower. In the case of Felton, who murdered the duke of Buckingham, the judges of England protested against the proposal of the privy council to put the assassin to the rack, as contrary to the laws, 1628; the use of the rack was abolished 1620. See Racquet and Torture.

RACQUETS (Arabic ra'bat, "palm of the hand"). A game played in an open (now but seldom) or close court (60 ft. long, and 30 ft. wide and 40 ft. high, with high walls surrounding it, the floor being divided into two principal areas by the "short" line) with a bat resembling that used in tennis, and a small hard ball. It usually constitutes the game. Racquets first came into vogue during the early part of the 14th century, and Chauss bids refers to the game in "Pickwick" in connection with the Fleet. Certain frequent debtors/enlivened the monotony of their existence by playing this game against a single wall. In 1853, a racquet court was erected at Prince's Club, and since then courts have become common at the universities and public schools. On the sale of Prince's Club grounds in 1886, the Queen's Club, Kensington, became the head club of the game, and here the championship and the universities and public school matches take place.

Amateur championship, singles, instituted 1855, doubles, 1860; Oxford and Cambridge, singles, 1853, doubles, 1855; Public Schools Challenge Cup, 1883. Amateur champion, E. M. Baerlein, 1899.

E. M. Baerlein, amateur, defeated H. R. Brougham, in the challenge round of the singles championship by 3 games to 1.

Baerlein and Percy Ashworth secured the doubles championship, the holders of which, F. Dames-Longworth and A. Vane Pennick, had lost it.

The Public Schools challenge cup went to Charterhouse, who beat Eton in the final.

Oxford easily beat Cambridge in both doubles and singles.

The professional racquet championship of England was played for by W. Hay (Wellington) and C. Williams (Princes Club), the latter being successful.

T. Jennings, of Aldershot, won the £100 professional handicap, held at Queen's Club.

RADCLIFFE LIBRARY, OXFORD, founded under the will of Dr. John Radcliffe, an eminent physician. He died 1 Nov. 1744, leaving 40,000l. to the university of Oxford for the founding a library, the first stone of which was laid 17 May, 1737, and the edifice was opened 13 April, 1749. The Radcliffe Observatory, Oxford, founded by the executors of Mr. Horsley, mathematician and professor of astronomy, about 1771, was completed in 1794. The publication of the observations commenced in 1824, by Mr. Manuel J. Johnson, the director, appointed in 1839. Radcliffe Infirmary opened in 1770; see Oxford, 1893.

RADICALS or "RADICAL REFORMERS., persons who professed to aim at procuring a thorough reformation in the government and policy of England, became prominent in 1816, when Hampden clubs were formed, of which sir Francis Burdett, lord Cockrane, major Cartwright, and William Cobbett were prominent members. Samuel Bamford's "Life of a Radical," published in 1842, gives much information; he died 13 April, 1827. Many radicals were severely punished, 1817-20. Wm. Harris's "History of the Radical Party," published early in 1885——The "Radicals" in the United States were the party headed by Thaddeus Stevens, bitterly opposed to the policy of president Johnson, as too favourable to the subjugated Southern States.

The Radical Programme, advocated by the r. hon. Joseph Chamberlain, widely circulated, first appeared July, 1876, in the Fortnightly Review; it included reform of the land laws, free education, increased local government, reform in taxation and finance, improvement in conditions of agricultural labourers and of the poor, and religious equality and disestablishment of national churches.

The National Radical Union, at its fourth anniversary, at Birmingham, changed its name to National Liberal Union. See Liberals. 24 April, 1839.

RADICLE, see Compound.
RADIODES, see under Radium.

RADIOGRAPHS, a name given to the photographs obtained by Krontgen rays, see Photography, 1897.

RADIOMETER, &c., a little instrument constructed by Mr. (late Prof. Wm. Crookes, F.R.S., 1873-6. Two little disk arms, mounted on a pivot and placed in an exhausted glassbell, revolve when placed in bright light. The motion was attributed to heat-absorption, 1877; see Light. Radiophone. By this apparatus professor Bell, at Philadelphia, showed how a ray of strong light, acting on a selenium cell, conveyed sound 500 feet, Sept. 1874.

RADIOTELEGRAMS, messages sent through the post-office from land stations to ships at sea, through the medium of wireless telegraphy (which see).

RADIUM. This new and extremely rare metal is found in combination with chlorine and bromine, as radium chloride and radium bromide. It is obtained in very minute quantities from pitchblende after the metal uranium has been extracted. The principle of radio-activity was discovered by M. Becquerel, in Paris, in 1896, from the study of uranium, and Mme. Sklodowska Curie's investigation of this metal, when taking up the subject of radio-activity as the thesis for her doctorate degree, led to the discovery of radium. The discovery of radium was communicated by M. Curie to the Academy of Sciences, Paris, in March, 1898, and on 10 June of the same year M. Curie gave a demonstration of this new substance at the Royal Institution, London. Investigations of the properties and phenomena exhibited by radium have also been carried on by M. Becquerel, prof. E. Rutherford, sir William Ramsay, M. Soddy, prof. J. J. Thompson, sir William Crookes, and others. Radium possesses the extraordinary property of continually producing heat without combustion and spontaneously producing electricity, and maintains its own temperature, 15° C. above its surroundings. It gives off an emanation or gas which shines in its own light, resembling in appearance that of a fairy-lamp. This emanation, under the cold of liquid air, contracts into a small element existing in the sun. It is supposed that radium is an element breaking up, and in its dissolution giving out energy. Three kinds of rays are continually in a state of radiation, and are known as the alpha, beta, and gamma rays. The alpha rays consist of atoms of matter, each 1 per cent. of the weight of a radium atom, projected with an enormous velocity, but these can be stopped by a thin sheet of metal; they are the pro-ectile which are rendered visible on a chemical screen, as the zinc sulphide in sir William Crookes' ingenious spectrophotometer. The beta rays consist of flying or electrically charged atoms of atoms, many thousand times smaller than anything else known, and possess the power of penetrating most metal. The gamma rays, also very penetrating, are probably a variety of the X-rays. Radium has been detected in the deposit of the hot mineral waters of Bath and Buxton, pointing to its existing in an ionizable, but widely diffused, quantity in the interior of the earth. It is supposed that the element uranium is the parent of radium, and that lead is the last stage in the series of transformations. As a therapeutic agent, radium rays have been used in cases of cancer, burns and other skin diseases, but with so very definite result; it appears, however, to have a bactericidal action in certain cases. Experiments made by M. Dany, de Geoffrois, and others, at the Pasteur Institute, on the action of radium on larvae, demonstrated the power of the rays to suspend or modify functional developments. Experiments on various low forms of life have also been made by M. Bohn, at the biological laboratories of the Sorbonne, with remarkable results. M. and Mme. Curie, the discoverers of radium, were the recipients of various honours in recognition of their eminent services to scientific research. In 1895, prof. John R. Burke, of the Cavendish laboratory, Cambridge, by the exposure of a solution of gelatine to the action of bromide of radium, produced a thin pellicle, which gradually increased in depth; on microscopic examination it was found to be composed of corpuscles, to which the name of radio-plates has been given. It has, however, been proved that spontaneous generation has been produced by the action of radium. M. Curie was killed in a street accident in Paris 19th April, 1906.

Prof. Thorpe at a meeting of the royal society presented a communication on "The Atomic Weight of Radium," which he made from his experiments to be 227 .... 5 March, 1906.

RAGGED SCHOOLS, free schools for outcast destitute ragged children, set up in large towns. The instruction is based on the scriptures. John Pounds, a cobler, of Paris, who died in 1819, opened a school of this kind; and one was set up by Andrew Walker, in "Devil's Acre," Westminster, in 1839. Knight. They did not receive their name till 1843, when the "Ragged school union" was formed, principally by Mr. S. R. Starkey and Mr. Wm. Locke (afterwards hon. secretary). The earl of Shaftesbury was chairman. In 1856 there were 150 Ragged school institutions Sunday ragged schools reported in London in 1897, 250; in 1898, 311; day schools, in 1897, 204; in 1878, 58; week evening schools, in 1897, 207; in 1878, 147; 44 industrial schools in 1898. Ragged school buildings were exempted from rates, 1869. The day schools are under the control of distinguished authorities: but the Sunday schools, mother's meetings, Bible classes, lad's and girls' clubs, with a number of auxiliary agencies of benevolence and social uplift, including a register of cripples, holiday homes in country, &c., are still maintained in great efficiency (1910). Dr. Guthrie, a founder of ragged schools in Edinburgh, &c., died 21 Feb. 1897. The earl of Shaftesbury, who was an ardent supporter of the movement, died 1 Oct. 1882. Jubilee of the movement celebrated, 20 April, 1894. Queen Victoria was patron, succeeded by king Edward VII., and king George V. and queen Mary. The secretary, sir John Kirk, was knighted by king Edward VII., after 40 years service, and a national testimonial was presented at the Mansion House, 1907. Annual meetings: the union was styled Shaftesbury society in May, 1898; number of ragged schools, 1910, 140. See Skoolbacht.

RAGMAN ROLL, (said to derive its name from Ragman, a legal legate in Scotland) contains the records of the homage and fealty to Edward I., sworn to by the nobility and clergy of Scotland at Berwick in 1296. The original was given up to Robert Bruce, king of Scotland, in 1328, when his son David was contracted in marriage to the princess Joanna of England.

RAM, that portion of the bow of a battleship which projects below the water-line in the form of a beam, and designed by its momentum when striking a hard surface to crush it into pieces. The latest battleships, of the Dreadnought pattern, first one constructed end of 1895, are built without rams. The ram was first used during the American civil war, when the federal frigate Cumberland was sunk by the confederate ram Virginia, 1862. During the Austro-Italian war the Austrian ironclad Ferdinand Max sunk the Italian ironclad Re d'Italia at the battle of Lissa, 1866. In the war between Chile and Peru, the Peruvian battleships, which were well designed by the French naval designer Claude Chataignier, hoops, 1879. Accidents by collision between battleships have occurred: --

The Vanguard was rammed and sunk by the Iron Duke, 1875; the Grosser Kurfurst by the König Wilhelm, 1878 (250 of the crew of the former were drowned); the Victoria by the Compendio; Adm. Tryon and 400 men perished, 1893.

RAMADAN, otherwise Ramadhan, Ramazan, the ninth month of the Mahometan year, in which is kept a strict fast in memory of the first revelation to Mahomet; the fast is followed by the short festival Bairam (which see). The Mahometan year is lunar, consisting of 354 days 21 hours, and in about 33 years the Ramadans passes through all the seasons.

RAMAYANA, the elder of the two great Sanskrit epic poems, is said to have been written by the poet Valmiki, 5th cent. n.c. Its hero is Rama, an incarnation of Vishnu, as the son of the king of Oudh. The Ramayana consists of 24,000 verses, divided in 7 books.

RAMBOUILLET, a royal chateau, about 25 miles from Paris. Here Francis I. died 31 March, 1547; and here Charles X. abdicated, 2 Aug. 1830. After being owned by the count of Thouanine and the duc de Penthièvre, it was bought by Louis XVI. 1778.

RAMILLIES (Belgium), the site of a brilliant victory gained by the English under the duke of Marlborough and the allies over the French commanded by the elector of Bavaria and the marshal de Villeroi, on Whitsunday, 23 May (o.s. 12), 1706. The French were soon seized with a panic, and a general rout ensued: about 4000 of the allied army were slain in the engagement. This accelerated the fall of Louvain, Brussels, &c.

RAMSGATE, Kent, a fishing village in the 17th century, became important through commerce after 1689, and is now a popular summer resort. The erection of the pier began in 1750; the harbour was formed by George Smeton, 1780-95, and the lighthouse erected soon after. Iron promenade pier, 1874; handsome Roman Catholic church, built by the Pagins, the elder of whom resided here: Jewish synagogue and college erected by Sir Moses Montefiore, also a resident. Ramsgate incorporated as a borough 1884. Frith's "Ramsgate Sands" painted 1854. Population, 1881, 22,853; 1910, 27,495; 1910 (est.) 31,525.

RANELAGH (near Chelsea), a public garden for concerts and dancing, occupying the grounds of Ranelagh House (built by Jones, Earl of Ranelagh, about 1691), was opened with a breakfast, 9 April, 1712. The music for the orchestra was frequently composed by Dr. Arne. The gardens were closed, and the buildings taken down, 1804. A sports club of the same name near Barnes is now, 1910, a popular and select social resort.

RANGES ACT. 1894. See under Commons.

RANGOON, maritime capital of the Burmese empire, built by Amonra, 1753, was taken by Sir A. Campbell on 5 May, 1824. In Dec. 1826, it was ceded to the Burmese on condition of the payment of a sum of money, the reception of a British resident at Ava, and freedom of commerce. Oppresion of the British merchants led to the second Burma war, 1852. Rangoon was taken by storm by general Godwin, 14 April, and annexed to the British dominions in December. An English bishopric was founded, 1877. Destructive fire for two days about 18 April, 1884. Foundation stone of Catholic Church by lord Dufferin, viceroy, 24 Feb.

early introduced into this country from the contintent. The Virginia raspberry (Rubus occidentatalis) before 1860, and the flowering raspberry (Rubus odoratus), about 1700, came from North America.

RASTADT, Baden. Here the preliminaries of a peace were signed, 6 March, 1714, by marshal Villars on the part of the French king, and by prince Eugène on the part of the emperor; the German frontier was restored to the terms of the peace of Ryswick.—The Congress of Rastad, to treat of a general peace with the Germanic powers, was commenced 9 Dec. 1797; and negotiations were carried on throughout 1798.
The atrocious massacre of the French plenipotentiaries at Rastadt by the Austrian regiment of Szeltizer took place 25 April, 1799.

RATCLIFFE HIGHWAY (now St. George's-street), East London. Mr. Marr, a shopkeeper here, with his wife, child, and boy, were brutally murdered, 7 Dec. 1817; and on 11 Dec. Mr. and Mrs.
Williamson, their child, and servant, were also murdered. A man, named Williams, arrested on suspicions, committed suicide, 15 Dec.

RATES. See Local Rates.

RATHMINES (near Dublin). Colonel Jones, governor of Dublin castle, made a sally out, routed the marquis of Ormond at Rathmines, killed 4000 men, and took 2517 prisoners, with their cannon, baggage, and ammunition, 2 Aug. 1649.

RATIONALISM, the doctrine of those who reject a divine revelation and admit no other means of acquiring knowledge but experience and reason.
See Higher Criticism.

RATISBON (in Bavaria) was made a free imperial city about 1200. Several dicta have been held here. A peace was concluded here between France and the emperor of Germany, by which was terminated the war for the Mantuan succession, signed 12 Oct. 1797. In later times, it was at Ratisbon, in a diet held there, that the German princes seceded from the Germanic empire, and placed themselves under the protection of the emperor Napoleon of France, 1 Aug. 1806. Ratis-bon was made an archbishopric in 1806; secularised in 1810; was ceded to Bavaria in 1815; became again an archbishopric in 1847. Population 1800, 45720; 1845, 48800.

RATTENING (from ratten, provincial for rat), the removing and hiding workmen's tools as a punishment for nonpayment to trades unions, or opposition to them. Much "rattening" was disclosed at the commission of inquiry at Sheffield in June, 1867; and at Manchester Sept. following; see Sheffield.

RAUCOUX (Belgium). Here marshal Saxe and the French army totally defeated the allies under prince Charles of Lorraine, 11 Oct. 1740.

RAVAILLAC'S MURDER of Henry IV. of France, 14 May, 1610. The assassin was fearful ly tortured, and executed, 27 May.

RAVENNA (on the Adriatic), a city of the Papal states, founded by Greek colonists, fell under the Roman power about 234 B.C. It was favoured and embellished by the emperors, and Honorius made it the capital of the Empire of the West about A.D. 494. In 568 it became the capital of an exarchate. It was subdued by the Lombards in 752, and their king, Astolphus, in 754 surrendered it to Pepin, king of France, who gave it to the pope Stephen, and thus laid the foundation of the temporal see. On the 11th of April, 1312, a battle was fought between the French, under Gaston de Foix (duke of Nemours) and nephew of Louis XII., and the Spanish and Papal armies. De Foix perished in the moment of his victory, and his death closed the good fortune of the French in Italy. Ravenna became part of the kingdom of Italy in 1860.

Many of the Acedætæoræ, a secret society of assassins (said to have been formerly followers of Garabaldi), who long kept the city in terror, arrested, Sept. Oct., condemned to life imprisonment... 12 Dec. 1874.

REAPING-MACHINES. One was invented in the country early in last century, but failed from its intricacies. At the meeting of the British association at Dumfriess, Sept. 1897, the rev. Patrick Bell stated that he invented a reaping-machine in 1820, which was used in 1827; the principle being that on which the best machines are now constructed. On 15 Jan. 1898, he was presented with the humble testimonial, and 1600l. in money. McCormick's American machine was invented about 1831, and perfected in 1846; he received a gold medal from the jurors of the exhibition of 1851; and also at the Royal Agricultural society's competition at Bristol, 6 Aug. 1875. The sheaves are bound by these reaping machines. Hussey's machine, also American, exhibited in 1851, was highly commended. John Rolley, the inventor of the reaping machine largely used in Australia, died 23 Nov. 1857.

REASON was decried to be worshipped as a goddess by the French republicans, 10 Nov., 1793, and was personified by an actress.—Thomas Painé's 'Age of Reason' was published in 1794-5; Immanuel Kant's 'Critique of Pure Reason.' (Kritik der reinen Vernunft'), 1781.

REFORMATION. The. Efforts for the reformation of the church may be traced to the reign of Charlemagne, when Paulinus, bishop of Aquileia, employed his voice and pen to accomplish it. The principal reformers were Wickliffe, Huss, Jerome of Prague, Savonarola, Erasmus, Luther, Zwingli, Tyndal, Calvin, Melanchthon, Cranmer, Latimer, Knox, and Browne. Luther thus characterised himself and his fellow reformers: "Res non Verba—Luther." "Verba non Res—Erasmus." "Res et Verba—Melanchthon." "Nee Verba nee Res—Carlstadt." see Wickliffites, Protestants, Calvinists, Lutherans, Presbyterians, Wittenberg, &c. The era of the reformation is as follows:—

In France (Abbigness), said to have a constitution of Christian reformers, about 1527.

In England (Wickeft), 1515.

In Scotland (Knox), established, 1560.

In the Netherlands, established, 1562.

REFORMATORY SCHOOLS, for juvenile delinquents. The Reformatory School at Mettray, near Tours in France, was founded in 1839 by M. de Metz, formerly a councillor of Paris, and the second of the vicomte de Charette, who gave the estate on which the establishment is placed. The one at Redhill, Surrey, is situated on land purchased in 1849 by the Philanthropic Society, and under the direction of the rev. Sydney Turner. The first stone of the building was laid 30 April, 1849, by the prince consort. The inmates of these establishments are instructed in farm labour, and divided into so-called families. In 1853 the Juvenile Offenders act was passed; amended act, 1861. In 1851 and 1853 great meetings were held on this subject, and in Aug. 1859, the first grand conference of the National Reformatory Union was held. See Industrial Schools.

Reformatory and Refuge Journal commenced as a quarterly publication, Jan. 1846. Shoeblackers were first licensed by the police in 1868.

REGALIA, see Crown.

REGATTA. A public boat race, introduced into this country from Venice in 1775: and in that year one took place on the Thames. Henley regatta instituted 1859; world's championships are competed for, and at most seaside resorts regattas are annual affairs.

REGENCY BILLS. One was passed 1751.

One was proposed to parliament in consequence of the mental illness of George III., and debated 10 Dec. 1788. It was relinquished on his majesty's recovery, 20 Feb. 1789. The return of the madly led to the prince of Wales (afterwards George IV.) being sworn in before the privy council as regent of the kingdom, 5 Feb. 1811. The Regency Bill providing for the administration of the government, should the crown descend to the princess Victoria while under eighteen years of age, passed 1 Will. IV., 23 Dec. 1839. A Regency Bill appointing prince Albert regent in the event of the demise of the queen, should her next lineal successor be under age; passed 4 Aug. 1840. Regency bill—1796.

REGENTS, see Protectorates.

REGENT'S CANAL, begun at Paddington, where it joins a cut to the Grand Junction, passes under Maidai-hill, continues its course by Regent's-park to Islington, where another subterranean excavation, about three-quarters of a mile in length, was formed for its passage. It then proceeds by Hoxton, Hackney, Mile-end, to Limehouse, where it joins the Thames. The whole length of it is nine miles; it comprises twelve locks and thirty-six bridges. Opened 1812; opened 1 Aug. 1820. Great explosion of gunpowder (which see), 2 Oct. 1874.

New bridge, near Gloucester gate, Regent's park, opened by the duke of Cambridge, 5 Aug. 1878. Regent's Canal and City Railway Co. act passed, 1882.

REGENT'S PARK, originally part of the grounds belonging to a palace of queen Elizabeth, near to the north end of Tottenham court-road, pulled down in 1701. Since 1600, the property was let to various persons, but the leases having expired it reverted to the crown; and in 1814 great improvements were commenced under the direction of Mr. Nash. The park consists of about 450 acres; within it are the gardens of the Zoological Society and the Royal Botanical Society. During a frost on 13 Jan. 1867, the rotten ice of one of the lakes gave way, and about 200 persons were immersed, of whom above 40 perished. Addition of 20 acres made to the public park, 1883.

Joseph Rumbold was murdered near York Gate, 24 May. Eight youths, George Galleby, 15, William Els, 16, Francis Cole, 15, Peter Lee, 15, William Joseph Grabe, 15, William Hendaw, 16, Charles Henry Govier, 16, and Michael Duling, 15, all described as labourers, were charged with the wilful murder, 1 Aug.; Galleby was convicted; the rest acquitted of murder, 2 Aug.; they pleaded guilty to minor charges, and were sentenced to various terms of penal servitude, 4 Aug. The evidence disclosed the existence of local bands of young roughs carrying on internecine warfare. Joseph Rumbold was the intended victim; Galleby reprieved, Aug. 1882.

REGENT STREET. London, W.; designed and executed by John Nash; authorised by act, 53 George III. 1813. The colonnades of the quadrants were removed in 1848.

REGIMENTAL EXCHANGE ACT, passed 28 May, 1875.

REGIMENTS OF INFANTRY were formed in France about 1558; see Infantry. The following are the approximate dates of the establishment of several British regiments:

CAVALRY.
The 1st and 2nd Life Guards, in 1661
The Royal Horse Guards, "The Blues," formerly the Oxford Blues; they derive their name from their colonel, the earl of Oxford, in Three Indian regiments (19th, 28th, and 21st) added, Aug. 1861
Dragoon Guards.—The 1st (King's), 1655; 2nd (Queen's, Prince of Wales's), 1655; 4th (Royal Irish), 1655; 5th (Princess Charlotte of Wales's), 1655; 7th (Carabiniers), 1655; 7th (Royal Prince's), 1655
Lancers.—The 1st (Royal), 1661; 2nd (Scots Greys), 1661; 4th (Hussars), 1664; Several regiments of Light Dragoons were armed with lances and termed Lancers, Sept. 1666
See Germany, June, 1894.

INFANTRY (see Guards).
1st Royaler Royal Scots regiment, 1633; the old title resumed, Dec. 1671
Coldstream Guards, established by Monk, in 1660
3rd Dragoons, represent London train bands and have special privileges 2nd Queen's Royal 4th King's Own 5th Northumberland Fusiliers 26th Cameronian 104th Canadian 101st to 109th (Indian) added, Aug. 1861
The Highland regiments are the old 2d1, 71st, 72nd, 78th, 79th, 92nd, and 93d. See Army Organisation.

Note.—By the reorganisation of the infantry in 1855 the numbers of the regiments by which they were formerly designated were (with some exceptions) merged into their territorial names.
The 3rd Dragoons are the Kent (East) regiment; the 2nd Queen's Royal, the Surrey (Royal West) regiment; 4th King's Own, the Lancaster (Royal) regiment; 8th Northumberland Fusiliers, the Northumberland Fusiliers, 26th Cameronians, the Cameronians (Scottish Rifles).

Highland Fusiliers.—The old 2d1 (the Black Watch) is now the 1st battalion of the Royal Highlanders; the 71st, the old 1st battalion Light Infantry; the 72nd, the 1st batt. Seaforth Highlanders (the Ross-shire Buffs); the 75th, the 2nd batt. Seaforth Highlanders; the 79th, the Cameron Highlanders; the 92nd, the 2nd batt. Gordon Highlanders; the 93d, the 2nd batt. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.

REGISTERS. The registering of deeds and conveyances disposing of real estates was appointed to be effected in Yorkshire and in Middlesex, 2 Anne, 1703; et seq. Greater security was thus given to purchasers and mortgagors; and the value of estates increased in those counties. Wills have been for a series of years kept and registered, in London, at Doctors' Commons; see Bills. The registering of shipping in the Thames was commenced, 1788; and throughout England, 1789; and several acts and amendments of acts have since followed for keeping and improving registers.
The duties and payments of the Lord Clerk Register of Scotland and his deputy were regulated by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 44.

REGISTERS, PARochial, were established by Cromwell, lord Essex, by which the dates of births, marriages, and burials, became ascertainable, Sept. 1538. This measure was opposed by the people, who feared some new taxation. A stamp-tax was laid on registers in 1784. Laws for their better regulation were enacted in 1813 et seq.

The great Registration act (introduced by lord John Russell), 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 86, passed 17 Aug. 1836, see Bills of Mortality, &c.

A new registration act for births and deaths, passed 7 Aug. 1874; another passed in 1891.

Births and Deaths Registration act for Ireland passed 2 Aug. 1880
Major George Graham, the first registrar-general (1823), was succeeded by sir Brydges Powell Hamilher, appointed, Jan. 1830; retires, succeeded by Mr. Reginald MacMillan, Feb. 1835; William C. Dunbar, bt. 1903; Bernard Mallet 1909

Cost of the office, 1803-1850, estimated 52,358.

REGISTRATION OF VOTERS was enacted by the Reform act, passed 7 June, 1832, and by acts passed in 1868 and 1885; see Resisting Barristers.

New Parliamentary and Municipal Registration act passed 22 July, 1878
New bill, second reading, 26 Apr.; withdrawn, Sept. 1893
Registration Acceleration act passed, 31 July, 1894

REGIUM DONUM (Royal gift), an allowance from the sovereign for the maintenance of the Presbyterian ministers in Ireland, commenced by Charles II. in 1672, and revived by William III. in 1690, was commuted by the Irish Presbyterian Church act passed June, 1874. The allowance to certain protestant dissenting ministers in Ireland was given up by them in 1857, in deference to the wishes of English dissenters.

REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP, see Public Worship.

REGULATION OF THE FORCES ACT passed 17 Aug. 1871. See Army.

REICHENBACH (Prussia). Here Duroc was killed during the conflicts between the French and the allies, 22 May, 1813; see Bautzen. Here was signed a subsidy treaty between Russia, Prussia, and England, whereby the last engaged to provide means for carrying on the war against Napoleon I. on certain conditions, 14, 15 June, 1813. Austria joined the alliance soon after.

REICHSRATH, the representative council of the empire of Austria, reconstituted by decree 5 March; met on 31 May, 1860. In May, 1861, the upper house consisted of 17 spiritual, 55 hereditary, and 39 peers. The lower house consisted of 136 elected deputies. No representatives came from Hungary, Transylvania, Venetia, the Banat, Slavonia, Croatia, and Istria. The Reichsrath was abolished by a rescript, 21 Sept. 1865, with the view of restoring autonomy to Hungary and other provinces. It again met 20 May, 1897. The Reichstag of Germany, the imperial parliament or diet, first met at Berlin, 21 Mar. 1871.

REIGATE (Surrey), sent two members to parliament in the reign of Edward I; lost one by the Reform Act of 1832, and was wholly disfran- chised for corruption by that of 1885. Population, 1881, 18,862; 1901, 25,913; 1939 (est.) 29,014.

REIGN OF TERROR. Maximilien Robespierre headed the populace in the Camp de Mars in Paris, demanding the dethronement of the king, 17 July, 1792. He was triumphant in 1793, and numbers of eminent men and citizens were sacrificed during his sanguinary administration. Billad Varennes denounced the tyranny of Robespierre in the tribune, 27 July, 1794. The next day he suffered death, with many of his companions; see France. This has been termed the Red Terror. The reaction after the restoration of the Bourbons, 1815, disgraced by many atrocious acts of wanton cruelty, has been termed the White Terror. The Jesuits were then consequous in the destruction of their adversaries.

REIGNS OF SOVEREIGNS. The average duration, according to Newton, is 19 years each; according to Hales 22 1/2 years; that of the sovereigns of England being 23 years, and that of the popes, 74 years. Pius IX. was the first pope who reigned above 25 years, 1846-78.

REISNER WORK. The name applied to a kind of inlaid cabinet-work formed of woods contrasted in colour. So-called from Reisner, a German workman, who lived in the reign of Louis XIV. (1643-1715) of France.

REICS, the trade in these became general in the 7th century, fragments of bones, &c. being brought from Jerusalem. The sale of relics was prohibited by pope Innocent III. 1198, without effect.

RELIEF CHURCH. A secession from the church of Scotland, founded by Thomas Gillespie, who was deposed from his ministry for opposing the doctrine of passive obedience to the law of the church of Scotland respecting the settlement of ministers, 23 May, 1752. The church was constituted as the "presbytery of relief," 22 Oct. 1757. The Relief and Secession churches were united as the United Presbyterian Church, 13 May, 1817.

RELIGION. "The feeling of reverence which men entertain towards a Supreme Being or to any order of beings conceived by them as demanding reverence for the possession of superhuman control over the destinies of man or the powers of nature, more especially the recognition of God as an object of worship, love, and obedience." There are numerous classifications of religions. Hegel distributes them into religions of nature, religions of spirituality, and the absolute or Christian religion. Professor Bleiler's classification includes nature religions and ethical religions; the former comprehending animism, polytheism, anthropomorphic polytheism, &c.; the latter comprehending Confucianism, Taoism, Brahminism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Judaism, and Christianity. The science of religion comprises the psychology, the history of religions, and comparative theology. Hume may be said to have initiated the study of religion as a process of mind and the factors which condition and determine its development in his "Natural History of Religion," 1759. During the 14th century the study of comparative religions was taken up and has made great progress in Germany, France, and England by the investigations of philosophers and scholars like Von Hartmann, Plicherl, Reville, Kuenen, Renouf, Max Muller, Herbert Spencer, D'Alviiela, De la Sausaye, Tylor, Lubback (lord Avebury), Rhyg, Davids, Rawlinson, Lang, and others.

The following table gives the latest distribution and percentages of the leading religions of the world according to Dr. H. Zeller, director of the Stuttgart Statistical Bureau:

RENSBURG (Holstein), was taken by the imperialists in 1627; by the Swedes in 1633; and by the Prussians and confederate troops in 1848. The first diet of Schleswig and Holstein met here 3 April, 1848. It was re-occupied by the Danes in 1852, and then by the Prussians after a serious conflict, 21 July, 1864.

RENNES (capital of Brittany, N. W. France). Here was established by Henry II., in 1553, the parliament so celebrated for its independence, especially in its struggle with the court, 1788-89. On 20 May, 1788, it declared infamous every one who should take part in the cour pleniere then proposed, but afterwards suppressed. Here took place the re-trial of the Ireysus case (which see) 1899. Population in 1911, 74,609; 1910 (est.) 81,406.

RENTS said to have been first made payable in money, instead of in kind, about 1135. Numerous statutes have been enacted in various reigns to

ORDERED FOR THE SERVICE OF THE GOVERNMENT.

REPRESENTATION OF THE PEOPLE ACT FOR ENGLAND, passed 15 Aug. 1867; for Ireland and Scotland, 13 July, 1868; a new act passed, 6 Dec. 1884. See Reform.

REPUBLICANS, see Democrats. The name adopted by the Northern party in the United States, N.A., opposed to the democrats in the South. It is stated that the first delegate-nominating convention in the United States that adopted the name Republican was held in Strong, Franklin county, Maine, 7 Aug. 1834. Sir Charles Dilke, M.P., professed himself a republican at public meetings and was much applauded, Nov. 1871; but at some places his appearance led to riotous proceedings. His motion for returns respecting the expenditure of the civil list by queen Victoria was negatived in the house of commons (2770), to March, 1872. A national republican conference of delegates was held at Sheffield, 1 Dec. 1872, when a national flag was adopted.

It is stated that the first delegate-nominating convention in the United States that adopted the name Republican was held in Strong, Franklin county, Maine, 7 Aug. 1834. Sir Charles Dilke, M.P., professed himself a republican at public meetings and was much applauded, Nov. 1871; but at some places his appearance led to riotous proceedings. REPORTING. The publication of the debates in parliament is forbidden as a breach of privilege, but was virtually conceded, after a severe struggle, in 1771.* Reporters' galleries were erected in the houses of parliament after the fire of 1834. To the unfettered liberty of reporting we doubtless owe much of our freedom and good government; see under Law. By the verdict for the defendant in the case of Wason v. The Times (for libel) reports of parliamentary debates were decided in favor of the Times, 1877. A commons committee on reporting recommend continuance of Hansard's debates with improvement, May, 1879.

The publication of Hansard's parliamentary debates began 1835 and closed in 1888. Latterly a subsidy was granted. The publication of the debates was taken up by Messrs. Meares, Currie & Co., Feb. 1889; and continued by the Hansard Publishing Union, limited, 1889; the Union ordered to be wound up, 13 May. See Trials, 1882-93. Mr. T. C. Hansard, aged 72, died, 12 Nov., 1891. Reports of parliamentary debates made by a reporter for the service of the government. 1869.

REPEAL OF THE UNION, IRELAND. An Irish association was formed with this object under the auspices of Mr. O'Connell, in 1829. See Home Rule and Ireland.

A proclamation of the lord lieutenant prohibited the meetings of a society "teigned for the purpose of procuring a repeal of the union, under the name of the Irish Society for Legal and Legislative Reform or the Anti-Union Society," 18 Oct. 1839. The common, by a majority of 454, rejected Mr. O'Connell's motion for repeal, 27 April, 1834. A new association in 1841, 1842, and 1843 became numerous. A grand assembly of the houses of the people were held in the last-named year, in various parts of Ireland, some of them amounting to 150,000 persons. A meeting to be held at Clontarf, on 8 Oct., 1843, was prevented by the government; and Mr. O'Connell and his chief associates were brought to trial for political conspiracy, 15 Jan., 1844; and convicted 18 Jan.; but the sentence was reversed by the house of lords, 4 Sept.; see Trials.

The association for the repeal of the union continued for some time under the direction of Mr. John O'Connell, but was little regarded. The total "repeal rent" is said to have amounted to £134,729. A fruitless attempt was made in Dublin to revive repeal agitation 4 Dec. 1860. See Home Rule and Ireland for the revival of the home rule movement.

RESERVE FORCES. In the summer of 1859, acts were passed to provide for the establishment of a military reserve force of men who had been in the service (not to exceed 20,000), and a volunteer reserve of not to exceed 30,000. These acts were consolidated and amended in 1867, 1882 and 1896. The reserve forces called out by proclamation, on account of possible war with Russia,

REPRESENTATION OF THE PEOPLE ACT FOR ENGLAND, passed 15 Aug. 1867; for Ireland and Scotland, 13 July, 1868; a new act passed, 6 Dec. 1884. See Reform.

The Representative, a daily Tory paper, was started by Mr. John Murray, the bookseller, in opposition to the Times, in 1826. Although he was assisted by Mr. Benjamin Disraeli and other eminent persons, the project was unsuccessful; the first number appeared 25 Jan., the last 29 July, 1826.

REDEDM, the screen or decorated portion of the wall behind the altar in a church. A highly sculptured reredos, designed by Sir G. G. Scott, was erected in Exeter cathedral, by subscription 1873. Prebendary Philips, the chancellor, and others who objected, brought their objections before the bishop a visitation court, on 7 Jan.; it was decided that the bishop had jurisdiction in the matter, and he ordered the reredos to be removed. 15 April, 1874. Dean Boyd appealed to the court of arches, and Sir H. Phillimore reversed the previous decision. 6 Aug. 1874. Prebendary Philips appealed to the judicial committee of the privy council, who decided that the reredos should remain 24 Feb. 1875. The magnificent reredos set up in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, was protested against as idolatrous by some of the London clergy, April, 1858. An action against the dean having been stopped by the bishop, the queen's bench division ordered the bishop to withdraw his veto upon the prosecution, 3 June, 1855. After further litigation, the house of lords sustained the bishop's veto. 20 July, 1851.

2 April, 1878. About 35,000 good soldiers appeared, and were commended. They were disbanded 31 Aug., 1878. Again called out on account of war in Germany, 15 July, 1879, and prospect of war with Russia, 27 March, 1885. Average of army reserve: 1888, 55,200; 1889, 56,682; 1893, 70,874; 1896, 78,057; 1904, 77,673. Important changes to be made to meet exigencies during war time, act passed, 1 July, 1868. Reserve called out and sent to the front during South African war, 1899-1902. Under Army Act (1907), a "Special Reserve" was formed, consisting of the old militia force, with a nominal strength of 80,000 men. The actual strength (1 Jan., 1909) was 67,780 men. The Special Reserve is liable for foreign service.

RESONATOR, a small apparatus, placed in the mouth to strengthen and increase the volume of the voice in singing, invented by signor Alberto Bach, who exhibited its effects at the Royal Academy of Music, 29 June, 1886.

RETREAT OF THE TEN THOUSAND GREEKS, who had joined the army of the younger Cyrus in his revolt against his brother, Artaxerxes Muenem. The Greeks were victorious, but Cyrus was defeated and slain at the battle of Cunaxa, 401 B.C. Artaxerxes having entered the Greek leaders into his power and killed them, Xenophon was called to the command of his countrymen. Under continual alarms from sudden attacks, he led them across rapid rivers, through vast deserts, over the tops of mountains, till he reached the sea. The Greeks returned home after a march of 1155 parasangs or leagues (325 miles), which was performed in 215 days, after the absence of Xenophon, 10 months, of the retreat has been immortalised by the account given by his conductor, in his "Anabasis Cyrus" (Expedition of Cyrus).

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF ENGLAND. The revenue collected for the civil list, and for all the other charges of government, as well as ordinary, was 1,200,000l. per annum, in 1660, the first after the restoration of Charles II. In 1860 it was raised to 6,000,000l., every branch of the revenue being anticipated; this was the origin of the funds and the national debt, 2 William and Mary, Saloon. The revenue laws were amended in 1861. Previously to 1834 there had been an average surplus of 2,500,000l. since 1849. In consequence of the Russian war the deficiency in 1854 was 2,320,000l.; in 1855, 21,141,182l.; in 1856, 10,104,412l. In 1857, there was a surplus of 36,097l.; in 1858, of 1,127,057l.; in 1859, a deficiency of 2,049,584l.; in April, 1901, the deficit, owing to the S. African war, was 55,357,000l.; see Statistical Abstract.

REVEND, an honorary appellation given to the clergy, since the middle of the 17th century. In Tanworth parish register, the minister is first styled "reverend," in 1657, occasionally afterwards; but regularly so after 1727. It first appears in the registry of All Hallows, Barking, in 1732. The prefix on a family tombstone was refused to Mr. Keet, a Wesleyan preacher, by the bishop of Lincoln, but given by the archbishop of Canterbury. On trial, Mr. Walter G. F. Phillipson, the chancellor of Lincoln, decided against Mr. Keet, who gave notice of appeal, 3 June. Sir R. Phillimore gave a similar decision in the court of arches, 31 July, 1775. On appeal to the privy council those decisions were reversed. It was decided that there is no law or usage restricting the epithet to ministers of the Church of England. 24 Jan. 1776.

REVIEWS. The Journal des Savans, published on 5 Jan. 1665, by Denis de Salo, under the name of Hédouville, was the parent of critical journals. It was soon imitated throughout Europe, and was itself translated into various languages. George III. spoke of this publication to Dr. Johnson, in the private interview with which he was honoured by his majesty, in the library of the queen's house, in Feb. 1767. Boswell. The Bibliothèque Anglaise came out in 1716-27; the Revue Britannique, founded 1825, ceased Dec. 1861. For Military Reviews, see Adversary, Army, and Volunteers. For Naval Reviews, see Navy.

REVISING BARRISTERS' COURTS, to examine the lists of voters for members of parliament, were instituted by the Reform Act of 1832.

REVISION, see under Bible. Advocates of the revision of the French constitution, chiefly Bonapartists or Jacobins, termed Revisionists, Feb. 1884.

REVIVALS on the subject of religion arose in the United States in 1857. In the autumn of 1859, they began in Scotland, the north of Ireland (particularly Belfast), and England. Many meetings were held for prayers and preaching throughout the week, as well as on Sundays. The "twelve days' mission," a series of revival services, took place in many London churches during advent, 1860.

Mr. Moody, preacher (born 1837, died 22 Dec. 1899), and Mr. Sankey, singer, American Revivalists, visited many towns in the United Kingdom, 1872-5. Their meetings in London began at the Agricultural-hall, 9 March, about 13,000 present; at the Queen's theatre, Haymarket, 11 April-1 May, 3,000 present; at the Albert-hall, London, 4 Feb., and at Brixton, 8 April. 1905. REVOLUTIONARY TRIBUNAL, established at Paris, Aug. 1792.

Up to 27 July, 1794, when Robespierre was deposed, it had put to death 2774 persons, including queen Marie Antoinette, the princess Elizabeth, and a large number of nobility and gentry, male and female. The oldest victim was counselor Dupin, aged 97; the youngest, Charles Duhesne, aged 14. From 27 July to 15 Dec. 1794, only Robespierre and his accomplices (about 130) suffered by it.

REVUE DES DEUX MONDES, the French literary and historical periodical published on the 1st and 15th of each month, first appeared in 1831. It includes among its contributors the most eminent writers in France.

REYNARD THE FOX. "REINEKE FUCSIS," a satirical epic in low German, in which beasts are actors and speakers, was first printed as "Reineke Vos," at Lubeck in 1498, and is said to have been written by Hinreck van Alkmaer. It has been frequently translated. Goethe's version in High (or literary) German hexameters appeared in 1794. Jacob Grimm has shown that the subject-matter of this "Thier-sage" or "beast-fable" is very ancient, and contains many incidents being found in Pilpay and other oriental writers. The early French had a "Roman de Renart," and "Renart le Nouvel." A poem, entitled "der Reimar," in Flemish, was known in the 11th century; Caxton's translation in English prose was printed 1481; a poetic English translation of Goethe's version, by T. J. Arnold, appeared in 1855.

REZONVILLE, BATTLE OF, 18 Aug. 1870, see Metz.

RHEA (or RETIA), an ancient Alpine country, comprising the modern Grisons, Tyrol, and part of Lombardy, inhabited by a wild rapacious people, after a long struggle was conquered by Blussus and Tiberius, A.D. 15.

RHEA, ISLE OF, see Re and Rochelle.

RHEIC (now REGGIO), S. Italy, a Greek colony, flourishing in the 5th century, B.C. It was held by the Campanian legion, 261-271, afterwards severely harassed for its rebellion. Reggio was taken by Garibaldi, Aug. 1860.

RHEIMS (N. France). The principal church here, built before 306, rebuilt in the 12th century, was burned in 1467. The corpse of St. Remi, the archbishop, is preserved behind the high altar, in a magnificent shrine. The kings of France were crowned at Rheims; probably because Clovis, the founder of the French monarchy, when converted from paganism, was baptized in the cathedral in 496; the only kings not crowned here down to 1525, were Henry IV., Napoleon I., and Louis XVIII. Several ecclesiastical councils have been held here. The city was taken and retaken several times in the last months of the French war, 1874. University founded by cardinal Lorraine, 1517, suppressed about 1760. Strike of the workmen of Mr. Jonathan Holden, mill owner, a great benefactor to the town, May, 1869. Population, 1911, 107,773; 1910 (est.), 105,500. Statue of Joan of Arc unveiled 15 July, 1376. Mgr. Langenieux, abp. of Rheims, died 3 Jan. 1905. Mgr. Lucan appointed-ibid. of Rheims 21 Feb. 1906. Rheims aviation week 22-29 Aug. 1909.

RHEOMETER, see under Electricity.

RHETORIC. Rhetorical points and accents were invented by Aristophanes of Byzantium, 200 B.C. Rhetoric was first taught in Latin at Rome by Phoebus Gallus, about 87 B.C. He taught Cicero, who said "We are first to consider what is to be said; secondly, how; thirdly, in what words; and lastly, how it is to be ornamented." A regius professor of rhetoric was appointed in Edinburgh, 20 April, 1762, when Dr. Blair became first professor.

RHINE (Latin, Rhenus; German, Rhein; French, Rhin), a river, about 760 miles long, rising in Switzerland for receiving the Our, Neuse, Meuse, Neckar, and other rivers, terminating in many arms in Holland, and falling into the German ocean. On its banks are Constance, Basel, Strasbourg, Spires, Mannheim, Cologne, Dusseldorf, Utrecht, and Leyden. The possession of the banks of the Rhine has been the cause of many wars, and it was crossed by the French about twenty times in a century. In the beginning of the revolutionary war, Custine invaded Germany by crossing it in 1792; and at the close of the war in 1815, France retained the left bank, but lost it at the close of the Franco-Prussian war, 1870-71 (which see). A navigation treaty with other powers was signed by France, 17 Oct. 1868. A central committee for the navigation exists, formed by members for Alsace, Lorraine, Baden, Bavaria, Hesse, Holland, and Prussia. Very great damage (about 4,000,000£) and loss of life, caused by the rising of the river through rain during 1882.

Becker's German song "They shall not have it, the free German Rhine," and Alfred de Musset's reply, in French, "We have had it, our German Rhine," appeared in 1841. Max Schmekenburger, author of "The Watch on the Rhine," died 1851.

RHINOPLASTY, an operation performed by dissecting a flap of skin from the forehead and placing it over the nose.

RHODE ISLAND (N. America), settled by Roger Williams about 1636, was taken in the war of independence by the British, 8 Dec. 1776; but was evacuated by them, 25 Oct. 1779. Capitals, Providence and Newport. Population in 1880, 276,531; 1890, 428,550; 1910 (est.), 500,000; see United States.

RHODES, an island on the coast of Asia Minor, is said to have been peopled from Crete, as early as 916 B.C. The Rhodians were great navigators, and institutions of a maritime code afterwards adopted by the Romans. The city was built about 608 and flourished 300-200 B.C.; see Cos, Rhodes, long an ally of the Romans, was taken by the emperor Vespasian, A.D. 71. It was held by the Knights Hospitallers from 1309 to 1523, when it was conquered by the Turks, who still retain it. The knights retired to Malta (which see). Rhodes suffered severely by an earthquake on 22 April, 1863.

RHODESIA, the name given (1895) to the territories subject to the S. Africa company (after the rt. hon. Cecil Rhodes, "the great empire builder") born at Bishop's Stortford, 5 July, 1853 (died 26 March, 1902), comprising an area of 750,000 sq. miles; chief towns, Bulawayo (capital of Matabeleland) and Salisbury. Rhodesia is divided into two parts: Northern Rhodesia, first opened to British influence by the late Dr. Livingstone, subdivided into North-Eastern and North-Western Rhodesia (called also Barotseland) and still occupied by native tribes of their own chief. The headquarters of the administrator of N.-E. Rhodesia are at Fort Jameson, and of the administrator of N.-W. Rhodesia at Kalomo. Southern Rhodesia is governed by an executive council, composed of the administrator of S.
RHODESIA.

Rhodesia and 4 members appointed by the British South Africa company, with the approval of the secretary of state for the colonies, and by a legislative meeting of the administrator, the resident commissioner, and 14 other members, of whom are appointed by the British South Africa co. and 7 elected by the registered voters of Mashonaland and Matabeleland. The seat of government is at Salisbury, the capital of Mashonaland. Native affairs are administered, under the administrator, by a resident commissioner and commissioners in the various districts. About 1900 miles of railway are now (1895) open for traffic. Population (white) of S. Rhodesia, census 1904, 12,596; 1910 (est.), 18,000; natives, 1910 (est.) 500,000. Revenue 1909, 554,029.; expenditure, 543,971.; imports, 1,815,372.; exports, 2,614,490. See Zambesi and Mashambudzi, 1894.

Royal charter of incorporation granted to the British South Africa company, by which large administrative powers in the region (formerly called Rhodesia) north of Cape Colony, were conferred on March 29, 1896. RITCHIE’S ACT, see Local Government.

RITUALISTS, a name given in 1866 to a party in the church of England, formerly termed Puseyites, who, by giving a more imposing character to public worship, by the use of coloured vestments, incensory, &c., desired to revert to the practices of the church as set forth in the first prayer-book of Edward VI., and, as they contend, following the use of the early Christian church. An ecclesiastical exhibition was held during the church congress at York in Oct., 1866, but was not officially connected with it. But the ritualists were censured in several episcopal charges in Dec., 1866; in two reports of the ritualistic commission, 19 Aug., 1867, and April, 1868, and by the judic peace of the church. The privy council on appeal, 23 Dec., 1868. See Church of England and Wales, 1867-9. At a general convocation of the American Episcopal Church at Philadelphia, 27, 28 Oct., 1868, after a warm discussion on ritualism, the discussion was adjourned. It was renewed at the convocation 10 Oct., 1874, and the ritualists were defeated by the evangelical party, a stringent canon on ceremonies being passed 27 Oct. The “Public Worship Regulation Act” was passed 7 Aug., 1874, for the repression of ritualism in England. See Public Worship and Church of England, 1867-9.

Royal commission “to inquire into the alleged breaches or neglect of the law relating to the conduct of divine service in the church of England, and to the ornaments and fittings of churches,” was appointed, and the same extended to houses of worship and procedure applicable to such irregularities, and to make such recommendations as may be deemed requisite for dealing with the aforesaid matters.” It. hon. sir M. Hicks Beach, &c., chairman, appointed, 20 April, 1894.

ROAD CLUB, established in the autumn of 1874 in London, by gentlemen interested in the revival of coaching.

ROAD MURDER. On the night of 29-30 June, 1860, Francis Savile Kent, four years old, was murdered, and his body hid in a garden water-closet at Road. His step-sister Constance Kent (aged sixteen), and the nurse Elizabeth Gough (the first suspected), were discharged for want of evidence. The coroner was severely blamed for charging the jury improperly, but the court of queen's bench, in Jan. 1861, refused to issue a writ for a new inquiry. Constance Kent, on 25 April, 1865, before Sir Thomas Henry Low-street, was convicted at her trial at Salisbury, on 21 July following, confessed herself to be guilty of the murder. Her punishment was commuted to penal servitude for life. Let out on ticket-of-leave, 18 July, 1885. Road is near Frome, Somerset.

ROADS, see Roman Roads. The first general repair of the highways of this country was directed about 1285. Acts were passed for the purpose in 1524 and 1555, followed by others in Elizabeth's and succeeding reigns. Roads through the Highlands of Scotland were begun by general Wade in 1726. London Macadam's roads were introduced about 1818. Wooden pavements were tried with partial success in the streets of London: at Whitehall in 1859, and in other streets in 1829; asphalt pavement seen after; wood paving came into general use in the latter part of the 19th century. An act "for the better management of the highways" was passed in 1862 after much opposition; another, 16 Aug. 1878; also regulated the use of locomotives on roads; whilst another in 1903 regulated the speed of motor cars. Steam road-rollers were tried in 1879; used in London 18 March, 1888. see Macadamising.

Commissions of highways appointed, 29 Sept. 1903; report issued, 29 Sept. 1903.

ROANOAKE, an island off N. Carolina, U.S., discovered by sir Walter Raleigh, 1584, and settled by him, 1585, without success.

ROASTING ALIVE. An early instance is that of Bochoris, king of Egypt, by order of Sabacon of Ethiopia, 737 B.C. Longlet. Sir John Oldcastle, lord Cobham, was thus put to death in 1418, and Michael Servetus for heresy at Geneva, 27 Oct. 1553; see Burning Alive, and Martyrs.

ROBBERS were punished with death by Edmund I.'s laws, which directed that the eldest robber should be hanged. Remarkable robbers in England were Robin Hood, 1189 (see Robin Hood), and Cluad Du Val, "executed at Tyburn," says an historian quaintly, "to the great grief of the women," Jan. 1670. In Ireland, the famous MacCabe was hanged at Naas, 19 Aug. 1691. Galloping Hogan, the ruffian, flourished at this period.

Freyen, the celebrated highwayman, surrendered himself, 10 May, 1749. The accomplished Barrington was transported, 22 Sept. 1790. See Trials.

ROBIN HOOD, captain of a band of robbers, in Sherwood forest, Nottinghamshire; traditionally reported to have been the earl of Huntingdon, disgraced and banished the court by Richard I. at his accession (1189). Robin Hood and Little John and their band are said to have continued their depredations till 1247, when Robin died. Stow, Lord Tennyson's drama, "The Foresters; Robin Hood and Maid Marian," first represented at New York on account the American copyright law, end of March, 1842.

"ROBINSON CRUSOE," by Daniel De Foe; the first part appeared in 1719. See Jean d'Estaques. Three old ladies, Mary Ann, Jane Amelin, and Sarah Frances De Foe, linearly descended from De Foe, pensioned by queen Victoria, May, 1877.

ROBURTE, a German explosive invented by Dr. Carl Roth, reported 1888.

ROCHDALE, Lancashire. A charter was obtained for a market by Edmund de Lacy, 1221, and the grammar school was founded 1564. Rochdale canal was opened 1804. The new town was commenced in 1865. Rochdale first sent a member to parliament in 1832. The woollen manufacture was carried on in the 16th century. The first cotton mill was erected in 1795. Theatre royal and opera house, built in 1867; destroyed by fire, 27 Jan. 1901. Population, 1901, 85,112. 1900 (est.) 85,653.

ROCHEFORT (W. France), a seaport on the Charente. The port was made by Louis XIV. in 1669. In Aix-roads or Basque-roads, near Rochefort, capt. lord Crachane attacked the French fleet and destroyed four ships, 11-12 April, 1809. Near Rochefort, the emperor Napoleon I. surrendered himself to capt. Miltand of the Bellerophon, 15 July, 1815.

ROCHELLE (W. France), a seaport on the Atlantic, belonging to the English for some time, but finally surrendered to the French leader, Du Guesclin, in 1372. As a stronghold of the Calvinist party, it was vainly besieged by the duke of Anjou in 1573; and was taken after a siege of thirteen months by cardinal Richelieu in 1628. The duke of Buckingham was sent with a fleet and army to relieve it; but the citizens declined to admit him. He attacked the isle of Ré, near Rochelle, and failed, 22 July, 1627. He was repulsed 8 Nov. following.

New harbour opened by president Carnot, 19 Aug. 1850.

ROCHESTER, in Kent, the Roman Duorobrium. The bishopric, founded by Augustin, 604, is the next in age to Canterbury. The first cathedral church was built by Ethelbert, king of Kent. St. Justus was bishop in 604. Alterations were made in the diocese in 1835, 1867, and 1903. Rochester is valued in the king's books at 358l. 3s. 2d. per annum. Present income 4,000l.

The cathedral reopened after repairs of the choir, 11 June, 1853; and front and towers restored, 25 July, 1894. The old castle and grounds were purchased for the public by the Corporation, 1883. The ten churches fund begun by the bishop, 1884. St. Bartholomew's hospital, founded by Gundulf for lepers, 1078, was refounded as a general hospital, 1863; near to it is an ancient Norman church. Watts's charity house, founded 1579 to lodge six poor travellers who 'are rogues or porters,' has been immobilised by Chas. Dickens. The Guildhall dates from 1867. Among other ancient buildings are Restoration house, where Charles II. slept in 1660; Satis house, the residence (1605) of the present bishop; the Cathedral grammar school, Henry VIII., and Eastgate house (see infra). James II. embarked at Rochester in his flight from England, 1688. Made a municipal borough by Henry II. Near to Rochester is Godshall, formerly the residence of Chas. Dickens, in "Edwin Drood," "Pickwick," and some of his other novels introduces Rochester. Since 1885, Rochester has returned one member to parliament instead of two. Population, 1881, 21,307; 1901, 30,622; 1909 (est.), 34,000.

Eastgate House, originally the residence of sir Peter Buck, clerk of Queen Elizabeth's navy at Chatham. Died 1699, carved on woodwork. Referred to by Chas. Dickens in "Edwin Drood." The museum and library were opened 15 March, 1903.

ROGATION WEEK. Rogation Sunday, the Sunday before Ascension-day, received its title from the Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday following it, called Rogation days, derived from the Latin rogare, to beseech. Extraordinary prayers and supplications for these three days are said to have been appointed in the third century, as a preparation for the devout observance of our Saviour's ascension on the next day succeeding to them, denominated Holy Thursday or Ascension-day. The whole week in which these days happen is styled Rogation week; and in some parts it is still known by the other names of Crop week, Grass week, and Procession week. The perambulations of parishes have usually been made in this week.

ROHAN, an illustrious family, descended from the ancient sovereignty of Brittany. Henri de Rohan, son-in-law of the great Sully, after the death of Henri IV. (14 May, 1610), became head of the Protestant party, and sustained three wars against Louis XIII. He eventually entered the service of the duke of Saxe-Weimar, and died of wounds received in battle in 1638. Of this family was the cardinal de Rohan; see Diamond Necklace.

ROMAN LAW, see Codes; ROMAN LITERATURE, see Latin.
ROMAN ROADS. 1174

ROMAN ROADS IN ENGLAND. Our historians maintain, but are mis-taken, that there were no roads in England. The Eel is said, "made roads almost all over the world, to have their marches in a straight line, and to employ the people," and criminals were frequently condemned to work at such roads, as we learn from Suetonius, in his life of Caligula. They were commenced and completed at various periods, between the 2nd and 4th centuries, and the Roman soldiers were employed in making them, that inactivity might not give them an opportunity to raise disturbances. Bede.

1st. Watling Street, so named from Vetelians, who is supposed to have directed it, the Britons calling him in their language Gobatilla (from Kent to Cardigan). 2nd. Icknield, or Icknield Street, from its beginning among the Fosse (from St. David's to Tynemouth). 3rd. Foss, or Fosse Way, probably from its having bee defended by a fosse on both sides (from Cornwall to Lincoln). 4th. Ermin Street, from London, a German word, meaning Mercury, whom our German ancestors worshipped under that name (from St. David's to Southampton).

ROMAN WALLS. One was erected by Agrigola (79 to 85) to defend Britain from the incursions of the Scythians. The first wall tended from the Tyne to the Solway (86 miles); the second from the birth of Fort, near Edinburgh, to the birth of Clyde, near Dumbarton (36 miles). The former was renewed and strengthened by the emperor Adrian (121), and by Septimius Severus (208). It commenced at Bewness, near Carlisle, and ended at Wallend near Newcastle. It had towers and gates, or towers and towers. The more northern wall was renewed by Lollins Urbicus, in the reign of Antoninus Pius, about 140. Many remains of these walls still exist, particularly of the southern one.

ROMANCE, originally a composition in the Romance or Provençal idiom. The term in the middle ages was extended to narrative poetry in general. Hildobard, a bishop of Trecent, in Thessaly, about 398, was the author of Ethepica (relative to the love of Theucgeneis and Charicleis), the first work in this species. The first part of the "Roman de la Rose" was written by Guillaume de Lorris (1226-76); the second, a separate poem, by Jean de Meung (1285-1341), the Decameron of Boecaccio was published, 1358; Don Quixote, by Cervantes, 1605; Gil Blas, by Le Sage, 1715. See English Language.

ROME. The foundation of the city by Romulus, was laid on the 21st April, according to Varro, in the year 753 of the Julian period (573 years before the birth of Christ, and in the fourth Olympian). The dates given: Cato, 751; Polymius, 750; Fabius Pictor, 747; Cinirius, 728 B.C.). The Romans conquered nearly the whole of the then known world. In the time of Julius Caesar, the empire was bounded by the Euphrates, Taurus, and Armenia on the east; by Ethiopia on the south; by the Danube on the north; and by the Rhine on the west. Numerous ecclesiastical councils have been held at Rome, from 197 to the present time. Population, 1872, about 240,000; 1910 (est.), 525,000. Chiefly through the exertions of Mr. John Henry Parker of Oxford, the Roman exploration fund was established, for the preservation of ancient architectural remains. The Italian government votes 1200l. a year for a similar purpose. The early part of the name is legendary, and the dates purely conjectural.

RÖNTGEN RAYS, see Surgery, 1898. Prof. W. C. Rontgen while experimenting with a Crooke's vacuum tube, electrically excited, and enveloped in a black covering, exhibited that some rays proceeding from the tube passed through the black paper and affected a fluorescent screen at a distance of two yards, 8 Oct. 1895. See Voltameter.

The continued researches proved that many substances opaque to ordinary light were transparent to these X-rays, as flesh, wood, &c.; the shadows of such objects thrown on a screen can be photographed; the interior of a dead monkey was photographed with great distinctness, L'Atin, March, 1896. The movements of the bones in a living animal were exhibited by these rays by means of a cinematograph, in 1897 et seq. These rays have the power of disintegrating electrified bodies.

The Röntgen society founded, prof. Sylvanus P. Thompson, president, June; first meeting in London, 5 Nov. 1897 (see Radiographs).

Experiments by Dr. Heineke in Leipzig show röntgen rays exert a beneficial effect on the internal organs of the body, reported, 9 Dec. 1895.

X-rays, "a supposed novel series of radiances, whose properties confers ability to pass through aluminium, wood, and other substances, and the brightening of an electric spark while being non-fluorescent and without photographic action," stated to be discovered by prof. Blondlot, of Nancy, as a course of his researches on röntgen rays; the prize Leconte of 50,000 francs awarded to prof. Blondlot for his discovery by the Academy of Sciences, 1904.

The rays are much utilized in surgery, 1904.

ROSE'S ACT, 33 Geo. III. c. 54 (1793), brought benefit societies under the control of government.

ROSE S WARS OF THE WORLD, between the Lancastrians (who chose the red rose as their emblem) and the Yorkists (who chose the white rose), 1455–1485. It is stated that in the Wars of the Roses there perished 12 princes of the blood, 200 nobles, and 100,000 gentry and common people. The union of the roses was effected in the marriage of Henry VII. with the princess Elizabeth, daughter of Edward IV. 1486.

ROSETTA.

Richard II., who succeeded his grandfather Edward III., in 1377, was deposed and succeeded 1399 by his cousin Henry IV. (son of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, the fourth son of Edward III.), in prejudice to the right of Roger Mortimer (grandson of Lionel, duke of Clarence, Richard's third son), who was declared presumptive heir to the throne in 1385.

Roger's grandson, Richard duke of York, first openly avowed in 1449.

Attempts to compromise failed, and the war began in 1455.

The Lancastrians were defeated at St. Albans; the protector Somerset (son of Henry, slain, a true Lancastrian), and Richard was declared successor to Henry VI. 23 May.

The war was renewed, and the Yorkists defeated the Lancastrians at Bloreheath. 23 Sept. 1459.

The Yorkists eventually dispersed, and the duke was attainted.

He defeated his opponents at Northampton, took Henry prisoner, and was declared heir to the crown; but fell into an ambush near Wakefield, and was put to death 31 Dec. 1460.

Defeated the Lancastrians at Towton 29 March, 1461.

Was defeated by Warwick, who restored Henry VI. 1 Sept. 1469.

Edward defeated the Lancastrians at Barnet, 14 April, and finally at Tewkesbury 4 May, 1471.

The struggle ended with the defeat and death of Richard III. at Bosworth 22 Aug. 1485.

ROSETTA (in Egypt), taken by the French in 1798, and by the British and Turks, 19 April, 1801. The Turks repulsed the British here, 22 April, 1807. Near Rosetta was fought the battle of the Nile, 1 Aug. 1798; see Nile. Mehemet Ali rendered great service to his country by constructing a canal between Rosetta and Alexandria.

The Rosetta Stone, discovered by the French in 1799, was brought from Rosetta in a French vessel, from whence it was taken by Mr. Wm. H. Hamilton, who deposited it in the British Museum. In 1822, Mr. Letronne published the text and a translation of the Greek inscription. It is a piece of black basalt, about 3 ft. long and 2 ft. wide, with an inscription in three languages, viz., hieroglyphics, modified hieroglyphics (demotic or cursive), and Greek, setting forth the praises of Ptolemy Philopator (69-20 B.C.). It was studied by Dr. T. Young and especially by J. F. Champollion, whose works were published 1814-1845. Champollion's method was adopted by Rosellini, and extended by Lepsius, Parrot, Brugsch, and others. Champollion discovered that the hieroglyphics represented sounds by an initial letter, and after studying the "Ritual of the dead," published a grammar and dictionary.

ROSCRICIANS, a sect of mystical philosophers who appeared in Germany in the 14th century. It is asserted that their founder was a noble German monk named Christian Rosencreutz, born 1378, who travelled in Arabia, Egypt, Africa, and Spain; returned to Germany and founded the fraternity of the Rosy Cross, and died aged 102. The Fama Fraternitatis and the Confessio Rosarum Crucis, 1615, the latter attributed to Johann Valentin Andreae and others, are important works. They swore fidelitas, promised secrecy, and wrote hieroglyphically, and affirmed that the ancient philosophers of Egypt, the Chaldeans, Magi of Persia, and Gnostics of the Indies, taught the same doctrine.

ROSS, Cork S. Ireland), a bishopric founded, it is supposed, by St. Fachan, in 6th century. It was united to Cork in 1340, and Cloyne to both, by the Irish Church Temporalities act (1833); see Bishops; New Ross.

ROSTROM (plural rostrum), a bask, the name given to the prows of ships, which were attached to the front of the platform (hence termed rostrum), erected between the comitum and the forum in Rome, whence the tribunes addressed the people. The custom is said to have begun with the ships of Antium, taken during the Latin war, which ended 33 B.C.

ROTA CLUB, a society who met at Miles's Coffee-house in New Palace-yard, Westminster, during the administration of Oliver Cromwell, whose plan was that all the great officers of state should be chosen by ballot; and that a certain number of members of parliament should be changed annually by rotation, from whence they took their title. Sir William Petty was one of the members in 1659. (Biog. Brit.)

ROTHESCHILD FAMILY. Meyer Amschel, or Anschel, was born at No. 148, Judengasse (Jew-lane), Frankfort, in 1743. In 1772 he began business as a money-lender and dealer in old coins, in the same house, over which he placed the sign of the red shield (in German, Roth SkoU). Having had dealings with the landgrave of Hesse, that prince entrusted him with his treasure (said to have been 250,000L.) in 1800, when the French held his country. With this sum as capital, Anschel traded and made a large fortune, and restored the 250,000L. to the landgrave in 1815. At his death his son continued the business as partners. His son, Nathan, began at Manchester in 1768, removed to London in 1803; and died immensely rich, 28 July, 1830. The baron, James, head of the family, died at Paris, 15 Nov. 1868.

ROTTERDAM, the second city in Holland. Its importance dates from the 15th century. The commerce of Antwerp was transferred to it in 1509. In 1572, Rotterdam was taken by the Spaniards by stratagem, and cruelly treated. It suffered much from the French revolutionary wars, and from inundations in 1775 and 1825. Desiderius Erasmus was born here in 1466. The museum and picture-galley of Rotterdam were destroyed at the fire of the Schieland palace, 16 Feb. 1864. ROYAL ACADEMY. A society of artists met in St. Peter's-court, St. Martin's-lane, about 1730, which Hogarth established as the society of incorporated artists, who held their first exhibition at the Society of Arts, Adelphi, 21 April, 1760. From this springing the Royal Academy, it continued a close sequence of a dispute between the directors and the fellows. On 10 Dec. 1768, the institution of the present Royal Academy was completed under the patronage of George III.; and sir Joshua Reynolds, knighted on the occasion, was appointed its first president. Leigh. The first exhibition of the academicians (at Pall-Mall) was on 20 April, 1769, which day sir Joshua Reynolds died. In 1771 the king granted them apartments in old Somerset-house, and afterwards, in 1780, in new Somerset-house, where they remained till 1838, when they removed to the National Gallery. Among the professors have been Johnson, Gibbon, Goldsmith, Macaulay, and Hallam. Turner, the painter, gave funds to the academy to reward of a number triennially for landscape-painting, which was awarded to Mr. N. O. Lupton in 1857. A commission of inquiry into the affairs of the academy, appointed in 1862, recommended various changes in July, 1863, which were carried into effect. The hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the academy was celebrated in 1898. The Royal Academy held its last exhibition in Burlington-house, Piccadilly, 3 May, 1864. The annual exhibition of pictures by the old masters, with some British, began 3 Jan. 1870. The money received has been devoted to the establishment of a professorship of chemistry and a laboratory, &c. In 1874 the exhibition included many of Landseer's pictures.

Sir Francis Chantrey, R.A., sculptor, died 25 Nov. 1841. At the death of his wife, Jan. 1876, in conformity with his will, 100,000l. was bequeathed to the Academy, and invested in Consols now (1896) producing an income of 5,000l. per annum, for the purchase of works of art for the nation, and other purposes. The collection, of some 110 pictures, since 1857 has been permanently located in the Tate gallery, Pimlico. thermo-raphs Mr. Justice North's decision that the works of sculpture purchased must be finished in marble or bronze, and not models, June, 1838.

The gallery containing the sculptures of John Gibson, bequeathed by him, was opened free, 27 Nov. 1870. The number of the works of art exhibited in 1879 was about 260; in 1910, including sculptures, 1,262. Beinbrand exhibition, 95 oil paintings and collection of drawings, opened, 31 Dec. 1868.

18,000l. bequeathed by the late lord Leighton constituted a trust fund as "The Leighton Bequest," the interest to be devoted to the adornment of public places, &c.; announced, 11 Feb. 1896.

Alverse criticism respecting the choice of pictures for purchase by the Chantrey fund leads to the appointment of a select committee to consider the subject, 1864. Select committee's report recommends that all purchases be made by a committee to consist of the president of the Royal Academy, a royal academician appointed by the council, and an associate of the Royal Academy nominated by the associates, 1865.

ROYAL EXCHANGE (Cambium Regis), London. The foundation of the original edifice was laid by sir Thomas Gresham, 7 June, 1566, on the site of the ancient Tun prison. Queen Elizabeth opened it on 23 Jan. 1571, and her herald named it the Royal Exchange. Hume. It was totally destroyed by the great fire, Sept. 1666. Charles II. laid the foundation-stone of the next edifice, 23 Oct. 1667, which was completed by Mr. Hawkesmore, a pupil of sir Christopher Wren, in about three years; it was repaired and beautified in 1769. This also was burnt, 10 Jan. 1838. The present Royal Exchange, erected under the direction of Mr. Tite, was opened by queen Victoria, 28 Oct. 1844.—Basement of Lloyd's office damaged by fire, 27 Dec. 1893. Improvement and enlargement of the chimes inaugurated, 1 July, 1895. Decorations; paintings by sir F. (att. lord) Leighton and others, 1895 et seq.; a fresco unveiled 30 Sept. 1903; another, presented by 600 members of the Stock Exchange, representing the granting of a charter (25 July, 1844) for the foundation of the Bank of England, 18 July, 1904. Messrs. Smith's offices damaged by fire, 16 Jan. 1903. The Royal Exchange, Dublin, commenced 1769, opened 1779.
ROYAL GEORGE, a man-of-war of 108 guns, lost off Spithead. While heeled over to repair a pipe, a sudden gust of wind washed the sea into her ports, and she went down. The rear-admiral Keppenfeldt, the crew, many marines, women, and Jews, in all about 600 persons, were drowned, 29 Aug. 1782. By the use of the diving-bell, the ship, embedded in the deep, was surveyed in May, 1817, et seq. Portions of the vessel and its cargo were brought up in 1839-42, under the superintendence of sir Charles Pasley, when gunpowder was ignited by the agency of electricity.

ROYAL GRANTS to members of the royal family:
Queen Victoria, on July 2, applied to parliament for a grant to prince Albert Victor of Wales for his maintenance, and for one to the princess Louise of Wales on her marriage with the earl of Fife, a select committee was appointed consisting of 23 members (including Mr. Goscen, Mr. H. Smith, lord Hartington, Mr. J. Chalmers, sur- bernan, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. John Morley, Mr. Labouchere, Mr. Burt, dr. Cameron, Mr. Parnell, and Mr. Sexton), 3 July, the committee first met July, 1859.

After several meetings at which there was much discussion on various propositions, a report was made to the house of commons, and was eventually resolved, after several amendments had been rejected, that 50,000l. out of the consolidated fund should be paid annually (through trustees) to the prince of Wales for the support and maintenance of his family, the same to continue till six months after queen Victoria’s decease, 29 July, 1859. An act of parliament to this effect was passed.

ROYAL HUMANE SOCIETY (London), see Humane Society.

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN, the earliest of the kind in London, was founded 9 March, 1799, by count Rumford, sir Joseph Banks, earls Spencer and Morton, and several other noblemen and gentlemen. It received the immediate patronage of George III., and was incorporated 13 Jan. 1800, by royal charter, as "The Royal Institution of Great Britain, for the diffusing knowledge, and facilitating the general introduction of useful mechanical inventions and improvements, and for teaching, by courses of philosophical lectures and experiments, the application of science to the purposes of life." It was enlarged and extended by an act of parliament in 1810; the original plan, as drawn up by count Rumford, in 1799, having been considerably modified. The members are elected by ballot, and pay ten guineas on admission, and five guineas annually, or a composition of sixty guineas.
The House (in Albermarle-street, Piccadilly) was purchased by subscription in 1819, and the present front was added by subscription in 1838. The Lecture theatre was erected in 1800-1, under the superintendence of Mr. T. Webster.
The library established in 1800 was rebuilt with the modern improvements, 1872.
The library was commenced in 1803, by the unanimous subscriptions of the proprietors of the institution. The Fund for the support of the apparatus of Young, Cavendish, Davy, Faraday, and De La Rue. The first lecture was delivered 4 March, 1800, by Dr. Davy, he being the first professor of natural philosophy and chemistry.
In Aug. he was succeeded by Dr. Thomas Young, so celebrated for his researches in optics, resulting in the discovery of the interference of light, and the establishment of the theory of undulation.
In Feb. 1804, Mr. (afterwards sir Humphry Davy) was engaged as assistant lecturer and director of the laboratory, and on 31 May, 1802, he was appointed professor of chemistry. By him the alkaline metals potassium and sodium, were discovered in 1807; the nature of chlorine was determined in 1810, and the safety-lamp invented in 1813.

William Thomas Brande succeeded sir Humphry Davy's professor of chemistry in 1813, and held that office till his resignation in 1832, since which time, till his death (Feb. 1866), he was professor of chemistry.

In 1834 Michael Faraday (born 22 Sept. 1791), on the recommendation of sir H. Davy, was engaged as assistant in the laboratory, and in 1835 as his director; in 1857 he became one of the permanent lecturers of the institution. In 1820 he commenced those researches in electricity and magnetism which form an era in the history of science. In 1824 he discovered the densibility of electricity and other gases; in 1833 he obtained electricity from the magnet; in 1835 he exhibited the two-fold magnetic matter of magnet, comprehending all known substances of the earth, firmament, &c.; and lastly he published his researches on atmospheric magnetism; died, 25 Aug. 1867.

John Tyndall, F.R.S., professor of natural philosophy, July, 1853, hon. professor, 6 May, 1857; died 4 Dec., 1854, eminent for his discoveries in organic chemistry, &c.; bequeathed 1000l. to the Royal Institution, received Jan. 1856.

Lord Rayleigh, F.R.S., professor of natural philosophy, 6 May, 1857; succeeded to the professorship, 1857; is eminent for his researches on sound, light, &c.; Professor sir J. J. Thomson, M.A., LL.D., R.S.C., F.R.S., 1895.

Edward Frankland, F.R.S. (after sir J), professor of chemistry, 1858; eminent for his discoveries in organic chemistry, &c.; died, 4 Aug. 1892.

Sir James Dewar, F.R.S. (born 28 Sept. 1842), professor of chemistry, 9 April, and director of the laboratory, 7 May, 1897; was one of the most important chemists of the modern period, and re-established the liquefaction and solidification of gases at high temperatures, air, oxygen, hydrogen, &c., 1878 et seq.

1839, sir J. St. Aubyn and other gentlemen proposed to form a school of mines at this institution; but the plan, although warmly supported by the members, was withdrawn for want of encouragement by the government and by mining proprietors.

The weekly evening meetings, on the Fridays, from January to June, commenced in 1826.

Endowments. In 1833, John Fuller, esq., of Roschill, endowed two professorships, of chemistry and physiology; the former is now held by Mr. Faraday, and the latter by Mr. Acton, succeeded by dr. Wm. Olingon, 1866-72; by dr. John Hall Gladstone, 1874, died 7 Oct. 1902; by James Dewar, 1877. The latter on dr. Rogers for three years, to be filled by nomination forwards by triumvirate of the institute. The Fullerian professors of physiology have been P. M. Rogers, R. E. Grant, T. R. Jones, W. H. Carpenter, W. W. Gull, T. M. Jones, T. D. H. Bedyer &d, H. Owen, J. T. M. Millard, M. Foster, Wm. Rutherford, Alfred Har. Garreau, and E. A. Schaefer (1858-1871), J. G. McKendrick, 1881-4; A. Gamgee, 1884; G. J. Romanes, 1885, Victor Hankey, 1897; A. Fuller, 1897; Augustus Waller, 1897; Edwin Ray Lankester, 6 Jan. 1868; Dr. Allan Macfadyen, Jan. 1881; Louis C. Miall, 1904; William Stirling, 1906; F. W. Mott, 1906.

- In 1846, Mrs. Acton gave 1000l. to be invested for paying every seven years 100 guineas for the best essay on the beneficence of the Almighty, as illustrative of a department of science; which have been awarded in 1844 to Mr. G. Fowsey, and in 1854 to Mr. W. Woolhouse,

The "Fund for the establishment of Experimental Research" was founded on 6 July, 1867, by sir Henry Holland, professor Faraday, sir J. Murchison, Dr. Bence Jones, and others.

In 1843, the establishment of a school of practical chemistry in the institution approved by profs. Faraday and Brande was proposed but failed.

On 2 July, 1863, the scheme was revised by Mr. Ludwig Mond, F.R.S. and M.R.I., who presented to the institution the house adjoining, with a proposal for its transformation into a laboratory, to be termed the Davy-Faraday Research Laboratory. He supplied the funds necessary for the incidental expenses of the work, and also gave an endowment sufficient to maintain a staff of professors and assistants, and to supply everything necessary for the prosecution of scientific research, to be devoted to pure and practical science. The laboratory is an adjunct to the Royal Institution, and is open, conditionally, to independent private research. The conveyance and deal of trust dates from 1865, when the laboratory was subject to a committee appointed by the managers of the institution, the first directors being Lord Rayleigh and prof. J. Dewar. Dr. Alexander Scott appointed superintendent. The laboratory was opened by Sir Henry Holland, on an historical address by Dr. Ludwig Mond, followed by experiments in liquid air, in the audience, on 22 Dec. 1895.

The expenses of the institution were Sir Joseph Banks, president, till the charter was granted, afterwards the earl of Winchelsea; Mr. (afterwards sir Thomas) Bernard, afterwards lord chancellor; Algernon George, duke of Northumberland, K.G., elected president, 1842; succeeded by sir Henry Holland, in 1856 (died 27 Oct. 1873); by Algernon George, duke of Northumberland, K.G. (died 1 Jan. 1899); by his son, Henry George, duke of Northumberland, 6 March, 1899.

W. Pole, esq., treasurer, elected 1843; succeeded by Wm. Spottiswoode, esq., in 1865; by George Bicker, esq., by Henry Leverett, esq., 1866; by Sir James Chalmers Brown, 1853.

Rev. John Barlow, secretary, elected 1842; succeeded by Henry John Dewar, M.D., 1842; by Wm. Spottiswoode, 1873; by Wm. Lamberton, Bart., 1874; by Wm. Wigram, Bart., 1891; by Sir Frederick Branwell, Bart., 1893; by Sir Wm. Crookes, 1898. Librarians: Wm. Henslow, 1842; Wm. Welby, 1865; Wm. Mathew, 1853; Benjamin Vincent, 1847; Henry Young, 1849; 21 eminent foreign scientific men were elected honorary members, 4 May, 1901, in relation to the Faraday centenary, which see.

Centenary celebrations: 25 eminent foreign scientists were elected honorary members, 1 May, 1893; banquet to the foreign delegates at the Merchant Taylor's hall, the evening was received by the duke of Cambridge and the lord chancellor and others present, 3 June; the prince of Wales presides at a commemorative lecture by Lord Rayleigh on the "Discoveries of Thos. Young," 7 p.m., and presents diplomas to the foreign scientists, 4 p.m.; the lord mayor holds a reception in the evening, 6 June; at the second banquet (the duke of Northumberland in the chair), prof. Dewar produced liquid hydrogen, which see, in substantial quantities, at a 21° absolute temperature, and by it solidified liquid oxygen and air, and brought about a succession of beautiful experiments before Lord Kelvin, Rayleigh, and a brilliant audience, Friday eve., 7 June, 1896.

ROYAL SOCIETY. (London.) In 1665 several learned men met in London to discuss philosophical questions and report experiments; the Memoir Ormion of Bacon, published in 1623, having inspired them to such a prosecution of them (Dr. Wilkins, Wallis, &c.), about 1666, removed to Oxford, and with Dr. (afterwards bishop) Seth Ward, the hon. Robert Boyle, Dr. (afterwards sir) W. Petty, and several doctors of divinity and physic, frequently assembled in the apartments of Dr. Wilkins, in Wadham college, Oxford. They were generally called the Philosophical Society of Oxford, which only lasted till 1690. The members were, about 1660, called to various parts of the kingdom, on account of their respective professions, and the majority coming to London, constantly attended the lectures at Gresham college, and met occasionally till the death of Oliver Cromwell, 3 Sept. 1658; see Society, and Scientific Papers. — "Record of Royal Soc," issued 1847.

The society was organised in 1660, and constituted by Charles II. a body politic and corporate, by the appellation of "The President, Council, and Fellowship of the Royal Society, for promoting, by the application of Natural Knowledge," 22 April, 1662.

Henry Oldenburg, the first secretary, an eminent philosopher, a native of Bremen, a friend of Milton, Boyle, Wren, and Pepys, and Sept. 1675, Evelyn records the first anniversary meeting, St. Andrew's day, 30 Nov. 1663.

The Philosophical Transactions begin 6 March, 1665-6.

In 1668 Society was opened by its collecting telescope (now in the possession of the society), and on 28 April, 1668, presented to the society the MS. of his Principia, which the council ordered to be printed. This was done under the superintendence and at the expense of Halley the astronomer, at that time clerk to the society.

The society met for some years at Gresham College, and afterwards at Arundel House (1666), where it came into possession of a valuable library, presented by Mr. Howard, grandson of its collector, the earl of Arundel after various changes the fellows returned to Gresham College, where they remained till their removal to Cranecourt, in a house purchased by themselves, 3 Nov. 1716.

The first Copley medal was awarded to Stephen Gray in 1737; the royal medal to John Dalton, 1826; the Rumford medal (instituted in 1797) to count Rumford himself in 1805.

The society remove to apartments granted them in Somerset-house, 1750; to apartments in Burlington-house, Piccadilly. Parliament votes annually 400l. to the Royal Society for scientific purposes; raised to 500l. in 1855.

Regulations made by which only fifteen fellows are to be annually elected, who pay ten pounds on admission, and four pounds annually, or a composition of sixty pounds, March, 1847. In consequence, the number of fellows was reduced from 839 in 1847, to 626 in 1865; to 587 in 1875; to 523 in 1885; 543 in 1893; 450 in 1905; 513 in 1909.

The entrance fee abolished, and the annual payment reduced to 3l. announced, Nov. 1886.

The "Royal Society Scientific Fund" was founded in imitation of the "Literary Fund" in 1859; see Scientific Fund.

The Duxbury medal (which see) first awarded, Nov. 1777.

The Darwin medal (see Development) first awarded, 1890.

The Croonian lecture given by prof. Virchow, of Berlin, 16 March, 1893.

Sir Wm. Crookes bequeaths over 16,000l. to the society, announced Dec. 1897.

The "Hughes" medal for original discovery in physical science, particularly electricity and magnetism (from a bequest of Prof. David Edward Hughes), first awarded to Joseph John Thomson, Nov. 1902.

The Royal Society entertain, at a banquet at the hotel Cecil, delegates to the triennial conference of the International Association of Academies, 24 May, 1905.

Anonymous donor presents 1,000l. to the society for the advancement of science, Nov. 1904.

Dr. Ludwig Dewar bequeaths 1,000l., to the society to be employed in the endowment of research in natural science, Jan. 1910.

Dr. H. Hayman was opposed by the masters of the school, and after much discussion and discussion, was dismissed by the trustees, Dec. 1773, and Dr. Jex Blake elected in his room, Feb. 1774. Vice-Chancellor Mallus decided against Dr. Hayman in his attempt to set aside the dismissal, but expressed his own opinion on "the grievous hardship of Dr. Hayman's case," 21 March, 1774.

Mr. Dissard, the premier, presented Dr. Hayman to the living of Aldingham, Lancashire, April, 1774; he died, aged 81, 11 July, 1794.

RULING MACHINES, used for ruling paper with faint lines, for merchants' account-books, &c. They were invented by an ingenious Dutchman, invented in London in 1782, and were subsequently greatly improved by Woodmason, Payne, Brown, and others. They were improved in Scotland in 1803. Herr F. A. Nobert devised a ruling machine in 1815 for the production of micropipical test plates, diffraction gratings, and microscopes, specimens of which were exhibited in 1831. The test plates contain bands of lines in a graduated series of fineness from 1/1000 to 1/3000 of a Paris line.

RUM (French "rhum"), ardent spirit distilled from sugar lees and molasses, deriving its peculiar flavour from a volatile oil. Rum is principally made in the West Indies. The duty on rum imported into the United Kingdom is £5. 1d. per gallon, 1s. additional per gallon if imported in bottle.

RUSSIA.

Boards of control and trade, sir John Holhouse (att. lord Broughton), and earl of Clarence (succeeded by Mr. Labouchere).

Admiralty, the earl of Auckland (succeeded by sir Francis Thornhill Baring).

Secretary at war, Mr. Fox Maule.

Paymaster-general, Mr. Macaulay.

Lord John Russell and his colleagues resigned their offices, 22 Feb. 1852; but were induced (after the failure of lord Stanley's party to form an administration) to return to power, 3 March following.

SECOND ADMINISTRATION (or continuation of his first), March, 1852.

First lord of the treasury, lord John Russell.

President of the council, marquis of Lansdowne.

Chancellor of the exchequer, sir Charles Wood.

Home, foreign, and colonial secretaries, sir George Grey, viscount Palmerston (succeeded by earl Granville, 22 Dec.), and earl Grey.

First lord of the admiralty, sir Francis T. Baring.

Board of control, lord Broughton.

Board of trade, Mr. Labouchere.

Secretary at war, Mr. Fox Maule (att. lord Panmure, and earl Galway).

Postmaster-general, marquis of Clancar.

This ministry resigned 21 Feb. 1852; see Derby Administration.

THIRD ADMINISTRATION. (On the decease of lord Palmerston, 15 Oct. 1852, Russell received her Majesty's commands to reconstrue the administration.)

First lord of the treasury, John, earl Russell.

Postmaster-general, Robert, earl Stanley of Aldreley.

Lord president of the council, George, earl Granville.

RUSSIAN TRIBUTARY. William, lord Russell's trial for complicity in the Ryce-house plot was marked by a most touching scene. When he requested to have some one near him to take notes to help his memory, he was answered, that any of his attendants might assist him; upon which he said, "My wife is here, and will do it for me." He was behended in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, 21 July, 1858.

Lady Russell survived him forty years, dying 29 Sept. 1723, in her eighty-seventh year. His attinder was reversed, 1 Will. IIII. 1858.

RUSSIA, the eastern part of ancient Sarmatia. The name is generally derived from the Roxolani, a Slavonic tribe. Rury, a Varangian chief, appears to have been the first to establish a government, 862. His descendants ruled amid many vicissitudes down to 1350. The progress of the Russian power under Peter the Great and Catherine II. is unparalleled for rapidity in the history of the world. The established religion of Russia is the Greek church, with toleration of other sects, even Mahometans. By an imperial ukase, in 1802, six universities were established, viz., at St. Peterburg, Moscow, Wilna, Dorpat (in Livonia), Charcov, and Kasan; but literature made little progress till the 19th century, the native publications being very few, and the best books being translations. The Russian language, however, distinguished by a degree of elegance, is, to a foreigner, of very difficult pronunciation; the number of letters and diphthongs is forty-two. The Anglo-Russian Literary Society, with library, &c., set up at the Imperial Institute, 1893. The population of the empire in 1897, 82,159,600; 1st general census of the empire, total, 86,159,713, 1868, 155,433,580. By the first Russian budget (1862), the estimated revenue was 34,500,000/., expenditure, 35,800,000/., 1892, revenue, 118,025,000/., expenditure, 115,540,000/. Budget revenue and expenditure, 1893 (cal.), 270,757,000/. National debt, 19,8, 87,200,000/. Imports, 1901, 97,495,257L., exports, 100,2,26,200L. from the United Kingdom, 12,77,483/. to the United Kingdom, 23,2,22,211/. Peace strength of army about 1,200,000; available in time of war about 4,000,000. 44 3/4 miles of railway working 19,01.

RUSSIAN LANGUAGE is a copious branch of the Slavonic family. There are many dialects, the predominant literary language being that of Moscow. The earliest literature consists of legendary poems and tales. The earliest preserved MS. is the codex of the Ostroumoff Gospels, written at Novgorod by the deacon Gregory, 1050-57. The first Russian book was printed at Moscow, 1544.

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.—The war between Japan and Russia was due to three principal causes: the rights of the Japanese in Manchuria; the independence of Corea; and the independence of China, all these interests being imperturbed by the rapid extension of the Russian power. The conflict between China and Japan, 1894-95, resulted in the re-occupation by China of the independence of Corea, and the cession to Japan of Port Arthur and the Liao-tung peninsula; the latter advantage was, however, lost to Japan by the action of Russia, supported by France and Germany, on the ground that its possession by the Japanese would "constitute a perpetual menace to the capital of China, and render the independence of Corea illusory." Japan failed in her attempt to obtain pledges from Russia that neither Port Arthur nor the Liao-tung peninsula would be occupied by the forces of that power; assurances were, however, given "that Russia had no designs whatever on Manchuria"; but Russia refused to comply with this condition and made a treaty on the ground that to do so would be an imputation on her bona fides. In 1898, Russia obtained from China a lease over Port Arthur and Tsien-lin-wan, together with railway concessions.
RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.

(Granted 23 March) : Russian forces were landed (5 Sep. 1903), the Trans-Siberian railway was rapidly extended south of Port Arthur, fortifications erected, garrisons established, and Manchuria treated as if it were virtually a Russian province. In return for her support given to China after the relief of Pekin, 1900, Russia sought, but unsuccessfully, to obtain a convention securing her special rights in Manchuria, and ultimately agreed to evacuate one province of Manchuria on 8 Oct. 1903. The promised evacuation was not carried out, and on 30 Oct. 1903, Russian troops re-occupied Mukden, and a great number of troops were sent into Manchuria. This action of Russia in maintaining her occupation of Manchuria, notwithstanding her treaty with China and the repeated assurances given to the powers by Russia, together with aggressive action on the Yalu in Corean territory, caused great apprehension to Japan, as threatening the independence of Corea and the safety of Japan, especially if Manchuria were annexed by Russia. In a despatch dated 28 July, 1903, M. Kurino, the Japanese minister at St. Petersburg, was instructed by Baron Komura, Japanese foreign minister, "to express to the Russian government in a spirit of conciliation and frankness, with a view to the conclusion of an understanding" on these questions, and "to a definition of their respective interests in those regions." The Japanese proposals were stated in the following terms in a despatch from Tokio, dated 3 Aug. 1903:—

I. A mutual agreement to respect the independence and territorial integrity of the Chinese and Corean empires, and to maintain the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations in these countries.

II. Reciprocal recognition of Japan's preponderating interests in Corea and Russia's special interests in railway enterprises in Manchuria, and of the right of Japan to take in Corea and of Russia to take in Manchuria such measures as may be necessary for the protection of their respective interests as above defined, subject, however, to the provisions of Article 1.

III. Reciprocal undertaking on the part of Russia and Japan not to impede the development of those industrial and commercial activities respectively of Japan and Russia in Corea and in Manchuria, which are not inconsistent with the stipulations of Article 1.

IV. Reciprocal engagement that in case it is found necessary to send troops by Japan to Corea, or by Russia to Manchuria, for the purpose either of protecting the interests of Russia as defined in Article 1, or of suppressing insurrection or disorder calculated to create international complications, the troops so sent are in no case to exceed the actual number required, and are to be forthwith recalled as soon as their mission is accomplished.

V. Recognition on the part of Russia of the exclusive right of Japan to give advice and assistance in the interests of Japan and of China in Corea, including necessary military assistance.

The following counter proposals were submitted on behalf of Russia, 3 Oct. 1903:—

I. Mutual engagement to respect the independence and territorial integrity of the Corean empire.

II. Recognition by Russia of Japan's preponderating interests in Corea, and of the right of Japan to give advice and assistance in the interests of China and of Russia in Corea, without infringing the stipulations of Article 1.

III. Engagement on the part of Russia not to impede the commercial and industrial undertakings of Japan in Corea, nor to oppose any measures taken for the purpose of protecting them, so long as such measures do not infringe the stipulations of Article 1.

IV. Recognition of the right of Japan to send for the same purpose troops in Corea, with the knowledge of Russia, but their numbers not to exceed that actually required, and with the engagement on the part of Japan to recall such troops as soon as their mission is accomplished.

V. Mutual engagement not to use any part of the territory of Corea for strategic purposes, nor to undertake on the coasts of Corea any military works capable of menacing the freedom of navigation in the straits of Corea.

VI. Mutual agreement to consider that part of the territory of Corea lying to the north of the 36th parallel as a neutral zone, into which neither of the contracting parties shall introduce troops.

VII. Recognition by Japan of Manchuria and its littoral as in all respects outside her sphere of interest.

The proposal of Russia that Manchuria should be regarded as outside the Japanese sphere of interest was, in view of the important political and commercial interests of Japan in that country, rejected by Japan 30 Oct. 1903; other amendments, including one relating to a neutral zone, in Manchuria as well as in Corea, were proposed by Japan. Russia, in reply, on 6 Jan. 1904, promised to reconsider the delay of the Russian government in replying to its communication, reaffirmed the proposals of 3 Oct., but omitting Article VII., 11 Dec. 1903. In reply, 21 Dec. 1903, the Japanese government stated that Russia's exclusion of Manchuria from the negotiations nullified them entirely, the negotiations having been expressly undertaken to remove every cause for misunderstanding respecting both Corea and Manchuria; Russia was asked to reconsider the question; the neutral-zone clause to be omitted. The Russian government reply, 6 Jan. 1904, proposing to insert the following article in the agreement, "Recognition by Japan of Manchuria and its littoral as being outside her sphere of interest, while Russia within the limits of that province will not impede Japan or other powers in the enjoyment of rights and privileges acquired by them under existing treaties with China, exclusive of the establishment of settlements." This article was subject to the understanding that the articles respecting a neutral zone of Corean territory for strategic purposes, were conceded by Japan. The final proposals of the Japanese government were presented to Russia, 13 Jan. 1904, and comprised the following modifications of the Russian terms:—

I. The elimination from Article V. of the words "not to use any part of the territory of Corea for strategic purposes.

II. The elimination from Article VI. as to a neutral zone.

III. The acceptance of the final Article concerning Manchuria, provided that Russia agreed to respect the territorial integrity of China in Manchuria; not to impede Japan or other Powers, within the limits of Manchuria, in the enjoyment of rights and privileges acquired by them under the existing treaties with China; to recognise Corea and its littoral as being outside the Russian sphere of influence.

IV. The recognition by Japan of Russia's special interests in Manchuria, and of the right of Russia to take measures necessary for the protection of these interests.

Owing to the dilatory tactics of Russia the patience of the Japanese government became exhausted, and becoming convinced that no hope existed of a peaceable settlement of the questions at issue, and having regard also to the preparations being made with both her army and navy by Russia, the Japanese government at Tokio announced, 6 Feb. 1904, through their minister at St. Petersburg, the breaking off of diplomatic relations with Russia. The mikado issued, to Feb.,

BATTLE OF MUKDEN.—The Japanese forces comprised the third army, under gen. Nogi, on the left (looking northward); the second army, under gen. Oku, to the right of the third army; the fourth army, under gen. Nosu, in the rear; and the fifth army, under gen. Kuroki, on the right; and the right flank detachment of reservists under gen. Kawamura. The Japanese line extended nearly 100 miles from W. to E. in the direction of Manchuria. The Russian forces comprised the second army under gen. Kaullbars (looking southward); the centre under gen. Biberling; and the first army under gen. Kuropatkin, with a detachment under gen. Renkenkamp, the whole commanded in chief by gen. Kuropatkin.

The general idea of the Japanese operations was the threatening of the Russian left under gen. Linevitch, the real object the attack on the Russian right and an extended out-flanking movement. Gen. Kuropatkin (whose forces were about 450,000 men and 10,000 guns, with a strongly entrenched position on the N. and S.E. of Fushan, 25 miles east of Mukden), misled by the Japanese attack on his left, where his strongest forces were placed, failed to realize the true Japanese objective, until too late to redress his position; hence, one of the greatest of modern times, is divided into 5 sections, representing the successive stages of the conflict.

1. The Japanese commence offensive operations on the Russian right, by the advance of three corps over the frozen roads and rivers, 15 Feb.; he gains the Ching-ho-ching defile, the Tai-tse river having been crossed, and a fierce conflict waged for two days with the Russians, who were driven out of their entrenchments, 24 Feb.; Japanese first army, under gen. Kuroki, moves forward from the Pensil-han district on Kaool-t'ing, and forces the Russians in their advanced positions about 10 miles N. and N.W. of Pensil-han; the fourth army, under gen. Nosu, advances on the Shao-ho, gaining ground and threatening the Russian position; and the result is, that gen. Kuropatkin's attention was directed to the defence of his centre and left.

II. Gen. Oku, with the Japanese second army, advances and deploys between the Shao-ho and the Hun; gen. Nogi, with the third army on the left of gen. Oku, rapidly marches between the Hun and the Liao, and concentrating on a northerly direction, coming all the counter-attacks of the Russians, 22 Feb. gen. Kuropatkin becomes aware of this movement, 1 March, but measures taken by him proved to be inadequate; and as he was too late, his forces being driven back on the night towards Mukden; gen. Nogi begins his turning movement on the west, between the Hun and Liao rivers, marching rapidly in a northwesterly direction. By 25 March, advances at first without encountering opposition, marches nearly due N. to Hsin-mun-han, 31 miles west of Mukden, 1 March; swing round, gen. Nogi marches eastward on a front of 15 miles, keeping touch with gen. Oku, at Lik'-wan-piu, and pushing towards the railway; second Russian army, under gen. Kaullbars, is forced to face westward on a line running from Maciapu to N.N.E.; the fourth and first armies, under gen. Nosu and Kuroki respectively, make separate efforts to prevent the Russian troops from withdrawing in the centre and the left to meet the decisive attack. 28 Feb.-1 March.

III. Russian army by 5 March was held in the centre, driven northwards by the left and completely turned on the right, gen. Kuroki having forced the left of the Russian entrenchments on the Shao-ho, 5 March. Russian forces intervene near and penetrate gen. Oku and penetrate a short distance along the Hsin-mun-han-road, but are then repulsed, 5 March; gen. Nosu dislocates the Russians from their entrenched position on the Shao-ho, 7 March. Nosu's line extends its development of the Russian forces to the N. of Mukden; the fortified positions of Machiapu and Pta, N. and S.E. of Fushan, reached by gen. Kawamura, 25 Feb. are the scene of a desperate conflict, gen. Kuropatkin having reserves
The British, prevented by a minefield at Mukden, were unable to capture the Russian fleet. The Japanese, however, were able to capture the Russian fleet and sink several ships.

3. The British and Japanese fleets engaged in a battle near Tsushima, which resulted in the sinking of several ships.

4. The Russian fleet was defeated, and the Japanese were able to capture several ships, including the flagship.

5. The Japanese were able to capture the Russian fleet, and the battle of Tsushima ended with the Japanese in control.

The Japanese navy used their victory to negotiate a peace treaty with the Russians, which they signed on May 9, 1905. The treaty stated that Russia would cede Manchuria and the Liaodong Peninsula to Japan, and would withdraw its troops from the Korean Peninsula.

Russian terms in writing submitted.

12 Aug.

Many of the Japanese terms were accepted, but Russia firmly rejected the Japanese proposals for a war indemnity, the limitation of Russia’s naval forces in the Far East, the surrender of the Russian ships interned in foreign ports, and the cession of Sakhalin; a deadlock resulted; president Roosevelt intervenes and addresses a direct personal appeal to the czar; ultimately the Japanese commissioners, acting under instructions from Tokyo, withdraw their demand for an indemnity, the limitation of Russian naval power in the Far East, the surrender of the interned ships, and offer to cede half of the island of Sakhalin; on these terms an agreement was signed.

29 Aug.

Treaty signed.

5 Sept.

The following are the principal articles of the Treaty of Peace:

Article I. — His Majesty the emperor of Russia recognizes the preponderant interest, from political, military, and economic points of view, of Japan in the empire of Corea, and stipulates that Russia will not oppose any measures for its government, protection, or control that Japan will deem necessary to take in Corea in conjunction with the Corean government; but Russian and Russian subjects and enterprises shall be entitled to enjoy the same status as the subjects and enterprises of other countries.

Article III. — It is mutually agreed that the territory of Manchuria shall be simultaneously occupied by both Russian and Japanese troops. All rights acquired by private persons and companies shall remain intact.

Article IV. — The rights possessed by Russia in conformity with the lease to Russia of Port Arthur and Dalny, together with the land and waters adjacent, shall pass over entirely to Japan, but the properties and rights of Russian subjects are to be safeguarded and respected.

Article X. — The Russian and Japanese governments engage themselves reciprocally not to put any obstacles in the way of the general measures, which shall be alike for all nations that China may take for the development of the commerce and industry of Manchuria.

Article VI. — The Manchurian railway shall be operated jointly between the Russians and the Japanese at Kwantunglen. The respective portions of the line shall be employed for the development of industrial purposes. In view of Russia keeping her line with all the rights acquired by her convention with China for the construction of the railway, Japan acquires the mines in connection with such section of the lines which falls to her. The rights of private parties or private enterprizes, however, are to be respected. Both states retain absolutely free to undertake what they may deem fit on the expropriated ground.

Russian and Japanese armistice commissioners meet at Shimonoseki and sign the peace agreement providing for the cessation of hostilities between the two armies in Manchuria.

RUSSO-TURKISH WAR.* The Russian and French governments having each taken a side in the dispute between the Greek and Latin churches as to the exclusive possession of the Holy Places at Jerusalem, the French, at the request of the Porte, advised the formation of a mixed commission, which decided in favour of the Greeks, and a firman was promulgated accordingly, 9 March, 1853: to this decision the French acceded.

The Russians make further claims, and Prince Mecchikoff (who arrived at Constantinople 28 Feb., 1853), by various notes (between 22 March and 17 May), demands that a convention should be signed by the sultan granting to the czar such a protectorate over the Greek Christians in Turkey, as make a junction of the lines which they own at Konantshonost.

Article VIII. — It is agreed that the lines of the Manchurian railway shall be worked with a view to ensuring commercial traffic between them without obstruction.

Article IX. — Russia cedes to Japan the southern part of Sakhalin Island as far north as the fifty-fifth degree of north latitude, including the island dependant thereon. The right of free navigation is assured in the bays of La Perouse and Tartary.

Article XI. — Russia shall make an agreement with Japan, giving the Japanese subjects the right to fish in Russian territorial waters in the seas of Japan, Okhotsk, and Behring.

Article XIII. — The Russians and Japanese reciprocally engage to exchange prisoners of war, paying the real cost of the upkeep of the same, such cost to be supported by documents.

* In 1854, when the czar was in England, he conversed with the duke of Wellington and lord Aberdeen (whom he had known many years) respecting the dissolution of the Turkish empire; and on his return he published his views in a memorandum drawn up by count Nesselrod, which was transmitted to London, but kept secret till March, 1854. In January and February of that year the czar had several conversations on the subject with the British envoy at St. Petersburg, sir G. H. Seymour, in one of which (Jan. 14) he compared Turkey to a "sick man in a State of delirium," and made proposals to the British government as to the disposal of his property. He stated frankly that he would not permit the British to establish themselves at Constantinople; and, in another conversation, he would not object to their possessing Egypt. The purport of these conversations was conveyed in despatches to lord John Russell, who replied that the British government declined to make any provision for the contingency of the fall of Turkey. The czar made similar proposals to the French government with the same result.

RUTHENIUM, a rare metal, discovered in an ore of platinum by M. Claus, in 1813.

RUTHERFORD’S ACT, LORD (13 & 14 Vict. c. 30), for simplifying law proceedings in Scotland, passed 1850.

RUTHVEN, RAID OF, a term applied to the seizure of the person of James VI. of Scotland by William Ruthven, earl of Gowrie, and other nobles, in 1582, to compel the king to dismiss his favourites, Arran and Lennox. Osten sibly for this, Gowrie was judicially put to death by his two opponents in 1584.

RYE-HOUSE PLOT, a plot (some think pretended) to secure the succession of the duke of Monmouth to the throne in preference to the duke of York (afterwards James II.), a Roman catholic. Some of the conspirators are said to have projected the assassination of the king, Charles II., and his brother. This design is said to have been frustrated by the king’s house at Newmarket accidentally taking fire, which hastened the royal party away eight days before the plot was to take effect, 22 March, 1685; see Newmarket. The plot was discovered 12 June following. Lord William Russell on 21 July, and Algernon Sidney on 7 Dec. following, suffered death for being concerned in this conspiracy. Both were illegally convicted. The name was derived from the conspirators’ place of meeting, the Rye-house at Brxbourne, Hertfordshire.

RYSWICK (Holland), where the celebrated peace was concluded between England, France, Spain, and Holland, signed, by their representatives, 20 Sept., and by the emperor of Germany, 30 Oct. 1697.
SAALFELD (Saxony, N. Germany). Here the Prussians, under prince Louis of Prussia, were defeated and their leader slain by the French under Lannes, 10 Oct. 1806.

SAARBRÜCK, the Roman Augstii Muri or Sarce pons, an open town on the left bank of the Saar, in Rhenish Prussia, founded in the 1st century, long subject to the bishops of Metz, afterwards ruled by counts (about 1237), and by the house of Nassau about 1380. It was captured by the French and retaken by the Germans 1676, reunited to France 1791-1814, and ceded to Prussia, 1815. On 2 Aug. 1870, it was bombarded by the French under Frossard (between 11 and 1 in the daytime), and the Prussians in small force were dislodged, and the town occupied by the French general Bataille. The mitrailleuses were said to be very effective. On the 6 Aug. the Prussian generals Gabel and von Steinmetz, with the first army, recaptured Saarbrück, after a sanguinary conflict at the village of Spicheren. The loss was great on both sides. The French general François was killed, and the 2nd corps under Frossard nearly destroyed. The French retreated to Metz.

SABBANS, the ancient inhabitants of Yemen, in S. Arabia; in the Old Testament called Sheba, Gen. x. 28, Job vi. 19, &c. The queen of Sheba is mentioned as having visited Solomon. The Sabians were a wealthy and powerful people, carrying on an extensive trade of commodities as gold, ivory, spices, &c., obtained from India and Africa. In the 8th cent. B.C. “the people of Saba” paid tribute to Tityath-Pileser and Sargon, kings of Assyria. A Roman expedition, under Elius Gallus, unsuccessfully invaded the country of the Sabians, 24 B.C. Their religion included the worship of the sun and moon, and other deities.

SABBATAI ZEVI, a false prophet, and the founder of a sect of semi-Christians and semi-Jews in the middle of the 17th cent. He announced the beginning of a Messianic reign, and it is said that in 1664 he had some 80,000 followers. He was put to death by the sultan of Turkey in 1677.

SABBATARIANS. Traces exist of Sabbatarism, or Sabbatharies, among the sects of the 16th century on the continent. Upon the publication of the “Book of Sports” in 1618, a violent controversy arose among English divines on two points: first, whether the Sabbath of the fourth commandment was in force among Christians; and secondly, whether, and on what ground, the first day of the week was entitled to be distinguished and observed as the “Sabbath.” In 1628, Theophrastus Brabourne, a clergyman, published the first work in favour of the Seventh-day or Saturday, as the true Christian Sabbath. He and several others suffered great persecution for this opinion; but after the restoration there were three or four congregations observing the last day of the week for public worship in London, and several in the country parts of England. In 1853 there were three Sabbatarian or Seventh-day Baptist congregations in England; but in America (especially in the New England states) they are more numerous.—Joseph Davis suffered imprisonment in 1679. He and his son bequeathed property to maintain the sect; and litigation respecting its disposal was settled by vice-chancellor Stuart in conformity with their intentions in June, 1870. Very few Sabbatarians then remained.

SABBATH, Heb. from sabath, “to rest.” In the Decalogue the Sabbath is commanded to be observed as a day of rest for man and beast, the reason assigned being that God “rested the seventh day from his labours in the work of creation; see Gen. ii.; Exod. xx. 8; Isai. lviii. 13; and as a commemoration of the deliverance of the Israelites from bondage in Egypt, Deut. v. 15. The observance of the Sabbath by the Jews is first mentioned after the exodus of the Israelites from Egypt, but no direct evidence of its having been kept in patriarchal times is to be found in the Pentateuch (which see), although the formula “Remember” with which the fourth commandment begins might seem to imply that the observance of the Sabbath was familiar to the Israelites, but had fallen into neglect. In the later history of the Jews after the captivity the Sabbath was kept with great strictness, and the sanctity of the day guarded by very stringent rules. The Mishna, for example, enumerates 39 principal works which are forbidden on the Sabbath, and to each of these are attached several minor ones which might lead to breaking of the Sabbath. To such a degree was the holiness of the seventh day esteemed by the Jews that when Jerusalem was stormed by Titus in A.D. 70 the inhabitants would not stir to defend themselves. The early Christian Church observed the first day of the week in commemoration of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, and this gradually took the place of the Jewish Sabbath. The earliest law by which the observance of the first day of the week was ordained is the edict of Constantine, xx. It was the religious solemnization of the seventh day which was peculiar to the Jews. Prof. Sayce, “Ancient Empires of the East,” states:—‘In Babylonia and Assyria the week of seven days was an Accadian or Babylonian invention, the days of the week being dedicated to the moon, sun, and five planets. The 7th, 14th, 21st, and 28th days of the lunar month were kept like the Jewish Sabbath, and were actually so named in Assyrian. They were termed dies quinta in Accadian, rendered ‘days of completion (of labour)’ in Assyrian; the Assyrian Sabbata or ‘Sabbath’ itself being further defined as meaning ‘completion of work’ and ‘a day of rest for the soul.’”—See Sunday.

SABBATICAL YEAR: a Jewish institution, 1391 B.C. Exodus xxiii. During every seventh year the very ground had rest, and was not tilled; and every forty-ninth year all debts were forgiven, slaves set at liberty, and estates, &c., that were before sold or mortgaged, returned to their original families, &c.

SABELLIANISM, from Sabellius (of Ptolemais in Egypt), who flourished in the 3rd century, and who taught that there was but one person in the Godhead, the other persons of the Trinity being but different names of the same person. This doctrine was condemned at a council at Rome, 260.
SAFETY LAMP.

The theatre was opened in 1705. Eighteen persons were trampled to death at this theatre, on a false alarm of fire, 15 Oct., 1807; see under Theatres. Now (1910) a music-hall.

SAFETY LAMP. One was invented in 1815 by sir Humphry Davy, to prevent accidents which happen in coal and other mines. The safety-lamp is founded on the principle that flame, in passing through iron-wire meshes, loses so much of its heat as to be incapable of igniting inflammable gases. The father of all safety-lamps was Dr. Reid Clanny, of Sunderland, whose invention and improvements are authenticated in the Transactions of the Society of Arts for 1817. The "George," constructed by George Stephenson, the engineer, in 1815, is said to be the safest. A miner's electric light, by M. Dunas and Benoit, was exhibited in Paris on 8 Sept. 1982. On 14 Aug. 1887, safety-lamps were rigidly tested by several mining engineers, and serious doubts thrown upon their complete efficacy. Col. Shakespear's safety lamp (light extinguished by opening) was exhibited at Royal Institution, &c., May, 1879; Messrs. Fleuss and Foster's new safety miner's lamp, Jan., 1884.

Mr. J. Wilson-Swan's electric safety lamp, weighing 6 lb, was exhibited at Aberdeen meeting of British Association, Sept. 1885.

Mr. Charles D. Arni's safety lamp reported successful; the supply of mineral oil is dated from the burner, 1889.

The Thornbury miners' lamp (patented 16 Feb. 1888) tried at Aldwarke Main Collieries by Mr. C. E. Rhodes, and subjected to experiments by prof. Dewar and sir Frederick Abel, who declare that this lamp fulfils the conditions required by the royal commission in 1886. Paraffin and other mineral oils may be used in this lamp, reported Nov. 1889.

II. Davids in 1827 patented a method of lighting miners' safety oil lamps by an electric spark applied from outside the lamp, and Paterson and others have applied the same method in other ways with the object of being able to light the lamps in the mine without matches and flame lights and danger of explosion.

Many inventors have given their attention to the improvement of electric safety lamps for mine use, and one of the most recent, 1988-1890, is the "Foss."

SAFFRON (saffron, French; saffron, Italian), the flower of crocus, was first brought to England in the reign of Edward III. by a pilgrim, about 1313, probably from Arabia, as the word is from the Arabic saffar. Miller. It was cultivated in England in 1582.

SAGAS. Early Irochandic tales, dated from the 10th century. See Eidias.

SAGE (Sauge, French; Saura, Latin), a wholesome herb. Mortimer. The Mexican sage, Salvia mexicana, was brought from Mexico, 1724. The blue African sage, Salvia africana, and the golden African sage, Salvia aurea, were brought to England from the Cape of Good Hope in 1731.

SAGUNTUM, or ZACYNTHUS, now Murviel, in Valence, E. Spain, renowned for the dreadful siege it sustained, 219 B.C. The citizens, after performing incredible acts of valour for eight months, chose to be buried in the ruins of their city rather than surrender to Hannibal. They burnt themselves, with their houses, and the conqueror became master of a pile of ashes, 218 B.C.

SAHARA, a great sandy desert, North Africa, south of Barbary States. A project for making an inland sea here was entertained in 1883, and the construction of a railway was proposed in Algeria, Oct. 1890. A large natural reservoir of water at El-Golica, in the desert, was discovered early 1891.

M. Fourcoul's 12 years' exploration, rich in scientific results; see French West Africa, 1888-1900. M. Blanchet's mission meets with many disasters; see Rome, Oct. 1889. Thanks to the region between Algeria and the Sudan, includes 3 districts, Gurara, Twat, and Tidikelt, occupied by the French; see Algeria and Morocco, 1890.

Surveys for the Trans-Saharan telegraph line, to link up Timbuctoo with Algiers, and eventually to reach lake Tchad, completed by M. Bleton, inspector of posts and telegraphs in Algeria, announced. • • • • Sept. 1905.

M. Felix Dubois reports the result of his mission.

M. Dubois had crossed the Sahara with a Tunis escort and without a single Success. In the hitherto, Algerian scientists, had accompanied a French explorers, reported. • 21 Feb. 1906.

SAIGON, French colony in Cochinh China, founded in 1860, after a defeat of the Chinese, 17 Feb. 1859.

SAILORS' HOME, in Well-street, London Docks, established by Mr. George Green, 1830; opened, 1835. In one year it admitted 5,444 boarders, who, besides home, had evening instruction, the use of a savings bank, &c. Similar institutions have since been established in the United Kingdom and abroad. Sailors' orphan girls' school and home, Hants, established 1829. Sailors' and Firemen's Union, see Shipping.

The Passmore Edwards Sailors' Palace, Limehouse, opened by the prince and princess of Wales; an 'Ocean Library' inaugurated 19 May, 1903.

SAYKA MUNI; see Buddhion.

SALADO, a river, S. Spain; see Tarifa.

SALADS are stated to have been in use in the middle ages; lettuces are said to have been introduced into England from the Low Countries, 1520-17.

SALAMANCA (W. Spain), taken from the Saracens 801. The university was founded 1240, and the cathedral built 1513. Near here the British and allies, commanded by lord Wellington, totally defeated the French army under marshal Marmont, 30 July, 1812. The loss of the victors was most severe, amounting in killed, wounded, and missing, to nearly 6,000 men. Marmont left in the victor's hands 7,411 prisoners, 11 pieces of cannon, 6 stands of colours, and 2 eagles. This victory was followed by the capture of Madrid. Population, about 35,000.

SALAMIS (near Athens), in a great sea-fight here, 20 Oct. 480 B.C. Themistocles, the Greek commander, with only 310 sail, defeated the fleet of Xerxes, king of Persia, which consisted of 1,000 sail. —Near Salamis, in Cyprus, the Greeks defeated the Persian fleet, 440 B.C.; and Demetrius Poliorcetes defeated the fleet of Ptolemy and his allies, 306 B.C.

SALASSI, a turbulent Alpine tribe, were thoroughly subdued by Terentius Varro, 24 B.C., and a Roman colony established in their territories (now Aosta).

SALDANHA BAY, S. Atlantic Ocean; northward of the Cape of Good Hope. Here on 17 Aug. 1799, a Dutch squadron, under admiral Lucas, was defeated by vice-admiral sir George Keith Elphinstone, without resistance; sir George was created lord Keith.
SALENCKEMEN, on the Danube. Here a victory was gained by the imperialists, under prince Louis of Buda, over the Turks, commanded by the grand vizier Mustapha Kutipirgi, on Aug. 1691.

SALENTO (Salernum, S. Italy), an ancient Roman colony. Its university, with a celebrated school of medicine, reputed to be the oldest in Europe, was founded by Robert Guiscard the Norman, who seized Salerno in 1077.

SALIQUE or SACLÉ LAW, by which females are excluded from inheriting the crown of France, is said to have been instituted by Pharamond, 243, and ratified in a council of state by Clovis I., the real founder of the French monarchy, in 511.

This law, introduced into Spain by the Bourbons, 1700, was formally abolished by decree 29 March, 1830, and on the death of Ferdinand VII., his daughter succeeded as Isabel II., 29 Sept., 1833; see Spain. By this law also Hanover was separated from England, when queen Victoria ascended the English throne, 1837.

SALISBURY (Wiltz), founded in the beginning of the 13th century, on the removal of the cathedral father from Old Sarum. National councils or parliaments were repeatedly held at Salisbury, particularly in 1296, by Edward I.; in 1328, by Edward III.; and in 1343. Henry Stafford, duke of Buckingham, was executed here by order of Richard II. On Salisbury Plain (in Welsh Henllys) the battle of the Blackmore was fought in 1264. The town was greatly increased by the sale of the prison lands in 1669, to the value of 500,000 acres. On it were so many cross roads, and so few houses to take directions from, that Thomas, earl of Pembroke, planted a tree at each milestone from Salisbury to Shaftesbury, for the traveller's guide. The autumn military manoeuvres took place on Salisbury Plain, Aug., Sept., 1872; again 31 Aug., 1878, under General Massington. The first battle of the Bishops was at Sherborne, St. Aldhelm being slain, 705. Herman removed the seat to Old Sarum, about 1072; and the see was removed to Salisbury by a papal bull, in 1217. It has yielded to the church of Rome one saint and two cardinals. The building of the cathedral commenced on 28 April, 1220, and was completed in 1258. This edifice is reckoned one of our finest ecclesiastical erections. Its spire, the loftiest in the kingdom, was considered in danger in April, 1864, and subscriptions were begun for its immediate repair. The choir was re-opened, after restoration, by Sir G. G. Scott, 1 Nov. 1870; and turns restored under Sir Arthur Blomfield, March, 1888. The bishopric is valued in the king's books at 1,397. 11s. 8d. Present income 5,000l. Population, 1811, 15,868; 1812, 17,117; 1821, 22,925.

RECENT BISHOPS.

SALONICA, see Thessalonica.

SALT (chloride of sodium, a compound of the gas chlorine and the metal sodium) is procured from the rocks in the earth, from salt-springs, and from sea-water. The famous salt-mines of Wieliczka, near Cracow in Poland, have been worked 600 years. The salt-works in Cheshire, called the Worsley, Norden, Northwich, and Middlewich, were of great importance in the time of the Saxons. The salt-mines of Staffordshire were discovered about 1670. Salt duties were first exacted in 1702; they were renewed in 1732; reduced in 1823; and in that year were ordered to cease in 1825. During the French war the duty reached to 50d. per ton. For the salt-tax in France see Gabelle. The government salt monopoly in India was abolished in May, 1863, by Sir C. Trelawny. Since 1797 salt has been largely employed in the manufacture of chloride of lime or bleaching powder (by obtaining its chlorine), and soap (by obtaining its soda). On this are based the chemical works of Cheshire, Lancashire, and other places. See under Akalites. Much distress in the salt districts of Cheshire through the subsidence of land, 1852-7. The proprietors of the Cheshire salt mines combined to form a "trust" or syndicate in the autumn of 1852; central office, Norbury, Stockport, being nearly ruined by great competition, first meeting 27 Sept. 1852. Great advance in the price of salt Oct. 1855. A draft report presented to the town of Northwich by Mr. Brunner, M.P., March, 1857.

Salt exported from the United Kingdom: 1856, 605,884 tons; 1857, 610,242 tons; 1858, 626,601 tons; 1859, 666,604 tons; 1860, 694,523 tons; 1861, 692,677 tons; 1862, 657,967 tons.

SALTAIRE, see Alperton.

SALT LAKE, see Mormonites.

SALT-PETRE (from sal petre, salt of the rock), or Nitre, is a compound of nitric acid and potash (nitrogen, oxygen, and potassium), and hence is called nitrate of potash. It is the explosive ingredient in gunpowder, many detonating powders, and lighter matches. By the 17th century demonstrated that salt-petre was composed of aqua fortis (nitric acid) and potash; the discoveries of Lavoisier (1777) and Davy (1807) showed its real composition. Its manufacture in England began about 1625. During the French revolutionary war, the manufacture was greatly increased by the researches of Berthollet.

SALUTE AT SEA. It is a received maxim at sea, that he who returns the salute always fires fewer guns than he receives, which is done even between the ships of princes of equal dignity; but the Swedes and Danes return the compliment without regarding how many guns are fired to them. The English claim the right of being saluted first in all places, as sovereigns of the seas; the Venetians claimed this honour within their gulf, &c. See Flag, and Naval Salute.

SALVADOR, BAHAMA, and the first point of land discovered in the West Indies or America by Columbus. It was previously called Guanahani, or Cat's Isle, and Columbus (in acknowledgment to God for his deliverance) named it San Salvador when he first saw it, 11 Oct., 1492. The capital, San Salvador, was destroyed by an earthquake, 16 April, 1854, and is now abandoned.

SANATORIUM, see Taberunostes.

SANCTUARIES, see Aegyptus. Privileged places for the safety of offenders are said to have been granted by king Lucius to churches and their precincts. St. John's of Beverley was thus privileged in the time of the Saxons. St. Burian's, in Cornwall, was privileged by Athelstan, 935; Westminster, by Edward the Confessor, St. Martin's-le-Grand, 1059. Being much abused, the privilege of sanctuary was removed by statute in 1539 (at the request of Henry VII), and much reduced in 1540. In London, persons were secure from arrest in certain localities: these were the Minories, Salisbury - court, Whitfriars, Fullwood's - rentis, Mitre-court, Baldwin's-gardens, the Savoy, Chink, Deadman's-place, Montague-close, and the Mint. This security was abolished 1657, but lasted in some degree till the reign of George II. (1727).

SANDALS, see Shoes.

SAND-BLAST. Gen. R. C. Tilghman, of Philadelphia, has invented a method of cutting stone or hard metal by a jet of quartz sand impelled by compressed air or steam. A hole of 1 inch diameter and 1 1/2 inch deep was bored through a block of corundum, nearly as hard as diamond, in 25 minutes. The invention was submitted to the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, 15 February 1871. It may be employed in the arts, for etching, glasswork, &c.

* Captain Fremantle, the friend of Nelson, and his companion in most of his brilliant achievements, was also wounded in the arm immediately before Nelson had received his wound in the same limb. The following note, addressed to the lady of Captain Fremantle (who was on board and with her husband at the time the letter was written), has been preserved, as being the first letter written by the hero with his left hand:— "My dear Mrs. Fremantle,—Tell me how Tom is. I hope he has saved his arm. Mine is gone, but, thank God! I am as well as I hope he is. Ever yours,

HOAKTON NELSON."
SAPPHIC VERSE.

SAPPHIC VERSE, invented by Sappho, the lyric poetess of Mitylene. She was equally celebrated for her poetry, beauty, and a hopeless passion for Phaon, a youth of her native country, on which last account it is said she threw herself into the sea from Mount Lucana, and was drowned, about 500 B.C. The Lesbians, after her death, paid her divine honors, and called her the tenth muse. Some consider the story fabulous.

SAPPHIRE, a precious stone of an azure colour, and transparent; in hardness it exceeds the ruby, and is next to the diamond. One was placed in the Jewish high priest's breast-plate, 339. Thammas Kouli Khan is said to have possessed a sapphire valued at 300,000, 1733. Artificial sapphires were made in 1857 by M. Gandin. Equal parts of alum and sulphate of potash were heated in a crucible. Mr. Pierport Morgan presents two sapphires, one reported to be the largest and the other the most beautiful in the world, to the Nat. Hist. museum, New York, July, 1902.

SARMATIA, the ancient name for the country in Asia and Europe between the Caspian Sea and the Vistula, including Russia and Poland. The Sarmatiae or Sauromatiae troubled the early Roman empire by invasions. After subduing the Scythians they were subjugated by the Goths, in the 3rd and 4th centuries. They joined the Huns and other barbarians in invading Western Europe in the 5th century.

SARNO (S. Italy). Near this river, Teias, king of the Goths, was defeated and slain by Justinian's general Narses, March, 553.

SARUM, Old (Wiltshire), an ancient British town, the origin of Salisbury (which see). Although completely destroyed, it returned two members to parliament till 1832.

SASSANIDES, descendants of Artaxerxes or Ardishir, whose father, Babek, was the son of Sassan. He revolted against Artabanus, the king of Parthin; defeated him on the plain of Hormuz, 226; and re-established the Persian monarchy. This dynasty was expelled by the Mahometans, 652; see Persia.

SATAN, see Devil Worship.

SATIRE. About a century after the introduction of comedy, satire made its appearance at Rome in the writings of Lucilius, called the inventors of it, 116 B.C. Livy. The Satires of Horace (35 B.C.), Juvenal (about A.D. 100), and Persius (about A.D. 60), are the most celebrated in ancient times, and those of Churchill (1701) and Pope (1720), in modern times. Butler's "Hudibras," satirizing the presbyterians, first appeared in 1663. Satire consists in a satirical pamphlet, partly in verse and partly in prose, attacking the policy of the court of Spain and the league, written in the style of the bating satires of the cynic philosopher Menippus. The first part, "Catholicum d'Espagne," by Lezay, appeared in 1503; the second, "Abridge des Etats de la Ligue," by Gillet, Pitton, Rapi, and Fusserat, appeared in 1594.

SATRAPIES, divisions of the Persian empire, formed by Darius Hystaspes about 316 B.C.

SATTARA (W. India) was long a flourishing state, founded by Sevajej about 1669; subjugated by the Marhattas about 1749; conquered by the British, 1818; ruled by a rajah under the protection of the company. The last rajah died without issue in 1848; when the country was annexed.

SATURDAY (the last, or seventh day of the week; the Jewish Sabbath; see Sabbath). It was so called from an idol worshipped on this day by the Saxons, and according to Verstegen, was named by them Satyrion's day.

SATURN, the planet, ascertained to be about 900 millions of miles distant from the sun, and its diameter to be about 77,250 miles. One of the 10 satellites was discovered by Huyghens (25 March, 1655); four by Cassini (1657-82); two by sir William Herschel (1789), one by his brother, and Lasell (1848) (q. v.). The 10th satellite was discovered by prof. Pickering, 29 April, 1853. The ring was observed by Galileo, about 1610; its annular form determined by Huyghens, about 1655. Cassini discovered that the ring consisted in fact of two concentric rings, the inner brighter than the outer, in 1677. Another ring was detected in 1850 by Dawes in England (29 Nov.), and by Bond in America. The ring, or series of concentric rings, is now considered to be composed of a multitude of small satellites.

SATURNALIA, festivals in honour of Saturn, father of the gods, were instituted long before the foundation of Rome, in commendation of the freedom and equality which prevailed on the earth in his golden reign. Some, however, suppose that the Saturnalia were first observed at Rome in the reign of Tullus Hostilius (364-349 B.C.), after a victory obtained over the Samnites, whilst others suppose that Jannus first instituted them in gratitude to Saturn, from whom he had learned agriculture. Others assert that they were first celebrated after a victory obtained over the Latins by the dictator Posthumius, when he dedicated a temple to Saturn, 497 B.C. During these festivals no business was allowed, amusements were encouraged, and distinctions erased.

SAVAGE CLUB, instituted by various literary men, in 1837, facetiously terming themselves "savage" on account of their freedom from conventionalism.

SAVAGE ISLAND was discovered by capt. Cook in 1774, and so named because of the fierce attack made by the natives on his party. The island has long been a field of missionary enterprise: the inhabitants, about 4,500, are now Christians, and it was ceded to Great Britain by the Samoan agreement, Nov. 1842.

SAVANDROOG or SEVENBROOOG, of Mylors, S. India, a strong fortress, was captured by the British, 2 April, 1753, and 21 Dec. 1755.
SAVANNAH. 1228

SAVANNAH, a city and port of Georgia on the river Savannah, U.S.A., founded in 1733, and incorporated, 1784; it was taken by the British in the American war in 1778, and by Gen. Sherman, the northern army, 21 Dec. 1864. Pop. 1900 54,244; 1910 (est.), 70,000.

SAVINGS BANKS. The first was established at Berne, in Switzerland, in 1787, by the name of caisse de domestiques, being intended for servants only; another was set up in Basel, in 1792, open to all depositors. The Rev. Joseph Smith, of Wendover, began a Benevolent Institution in 1791; and in 1803-4, a "charitable Bank" was instituted at Wethersfield by Miss Persis Walpole. The Rev. Henry Duncan established a parish bank at Ruthwell in 1810. One was opened in Edinburgh in 1814. The benefit clubs, among artists, having accumulated stocks of money for their progressive purposes, a plan was adopted to identify these funds with the public debt of the country, and an extra rate of interest was held out as an inducement; hence were formed savings' banks to withdraw the small sums, returnable with interest on demand.

Rt. Hon. Geo. Rose developed the system, and brought it under parliamentary control, 1816.

Acts to consolidate and amend previous laws relating to savings' banks were passed in 1823 and 1847; extended to Scotland in 1835; again consolidated and amended in 1863, 1879, and 1882.

On 29 Nov. 1824, the number of savings' banks in Great Britain and Ireland was 534, besides above 20,000 friendly societies and charitable institutions. The depositors (in the banks) were 1,032,581, while the societies embraced a vast but unknown number of depositors. The amount of deposits was 72,383,517.

SAVANNAH, a manufacturing town, N. Italy, long held by the Genoese was captured by the king of Sardinia in 1726; by the French in 1809, and annexed; restored to Sardinia at the peace. Pope Pius VII. was kept here by Napoleon I., 1809-12. Soup is said to have been invented here, and hence its French name savon.

SAVOY, the ancient Sapaunia orSabaudia, formerly a province in N. Italy, east of Piedmont. It became a Roman province about 118 B.C. The Ambiani seized it in A.D. 395, and the Franks in 490. It shared the revolutions of Switzerland till about 1845, when Conrad, emperor of Germany, gave it to Humbert, with the title of count. Count Thomas acquired Piedmont in the 13th century. Amadeus, count of Savoy, having entered his dominions, solicited Sigismond to erect them into a duchy, which he did at Cambrai, 10 Feb. 1416. Victor-Amadeus, duke of Savoy, obtained the kingdom of Sicily from Spain, by a treaty, in 1711, but afterwards exchanged it with the emperor for the island of Sardinia, with the title of king, 1720. The French subdued Savoy in 1792, and made it a department of France, under the name of Mont Blanc, in 1800. It was restored to the king of Sardinia in 1814; but with Nice annexed to France in 1860, in accordance with a vote by universal suffrage, 23 April, 1860. The annexation was censed in England.

SAXONY, a kingdom in N. Germany. The Saxons were a fierce, warlike race, the terror of the inhabitants of the later western empire, frequently attacked France, and conquered Britain (which see). After a long series of sanguinary conflicts they were completely subdued by Charlemagne, who instituted many new and bishoprics in their country. Wittkind, their great leader, who claimed descent from Woden, professed Christianity about 785. From him descended the first and the present ruling family of Wettin (the houses of Sopplinburg, Gottle, and Aschendorf); from 1166 to 1421 Saxony became a duchy, 880; an electorate, 1180; and a kingdom, 1866. It was the seat of war, 1813; the king being on the side of Napoleon. In the conflict of 1866 the king took the side of Austria, and the army fought in the battle of Königgrätz, 3 July. The Prussians entered Saxony 18 June. Peace between Prussia and Saxony was signed 21 Oct. (subjecting the Saxon army to Prussia), and the king returned to Dresden, 5 Nov. Constitution of 4 Sept. 1831; modified, 1848, 1854, 1866, 1871, 1888, and 1874. Population, in 1800, 4,108,788; 1805, 4,588,001.

Octoebristion of the house of Wettin was celebrated at Dresden with great magnificence on 13 June, 1853: the many branches of the royal family and its connections were represented; the emperor William II, prince Alfred of Edinburgh for England, and princes represented generally in the globe, the people from Austria and Russia were present. The people presented about 50,000, to the king, for the restoration of his fames.

SCOTTISH HISTORY society founded in Edinburgh in 1886.

SCREW, was known to the Greeks. The for raising water, invented about 236 B.C., is still in use. It is stated that with the assistance of the screw, one man can press down or raise up as much as 150 men do without it;—The Screw-Pro-pellor consists of two or more twisted blades, like the vanes of a windmill, set on an axis, running parallel with the keel of a vessel, and revolving beneath the water at the stern. It is driven by a steam-engine or electric motor.
The principle was shown by Hooke in 1681, and afterwards by De Graaf, De Born, Blainville, and others. Patents for propellers were taken out by Joseph Bramah in 1784; by Wm. Lyttelton in 1794; and by Edward Shorter in 1799. But these led to no useful result. In 1836 patents were obtained by Francis Pettit Smith (knighted July, 1871; died, 12 Feb. 1874) and captain John Eri-es-son (died, aged 86, March, 1889); and to them the successful application of the screw-propeller must be attributed. The first vessels with the screw were the Archimedes, built on the Thames in 1838 by H. Wimshurst, and the Rattler, built in the United States (1844), and tried in England in 1845.
Double screw-propellers are now employed.

for funds except by prayer has been made, but without application 1,791,729L. was received from voluntary contributions up to 31 May, 1899. Income for year ending 31 May, 1899, 34,146L.; expenses, 29,733L.; balance in hand, 2,454L.

SCRUTIN (French for ballot). In scrutin de liste the voter writes on his paper as many names as there are persons to be elected for the whole department. In scrutin d'arrondissement, the members are elected separately. The adoption of one of these modes was much discussed in France in 1875. The conservatives prefer the latter, the radicals the former. See France, Nov. 1875. The scrutin de liste was adopted in the elections of 1833, 1849, 1871, and 1875.

M. Barbeau's bill for adopting the scrutin de liste (mainly advocated by M. Gambetta), was passed by the chamber of deputies (243-235), 15 May, 1881; rejected by the senate (146-114), 9 June, 1881; again rejected, Jan.
1882.
M. Waldeck-Rosenau's bill for the scrutin de liste passed by the deputies (412-299), 24 March, finally passed, and adopted, 6 June, 1884.
The bill for the restoration of the scrutin d'arrondissement passed by the chamber, 11 Feb. and senate 13 Feb.
1884.
The scrutin de liste was adopted by the Italian chamber, 14 Feb. 1885.

SCULLABOUGE, see Massacres, 1793.

SCULPTURE is said to have begun with the Egyptians. Revailed and Ahollah built the tabernacle in the wilderness, and made all the vessels and ornaments, 1391 B.C., and their skill is recorded as the gift of God. Exod. xxxi. 5. Dipoenas and Sevillia, statuaries at Crete, established a school at Sicily.
Pliny speaks of them as being the first who sculptured marble and polished it; all statues before their time being of wood, 508 B.C. Alexander gave Lydippus the sole right of making his statues, 326 B.C. He left no less than 600 pieces, some of which were so highly valued in the age of Augustus, that they sold for their weight in gold. Sculpture did not flourish among the Romans, and in the middle ages with some fine exceptions, was generally degraded. With the revival of painting, it revived also; and Donato di Bardi, born at Florence, A.D. 1393, was the earliest professor among the moderns. An institute of sculptors was established in 1861. The society of British sculptors was inaugurated 29 Jan. 1854. See Royal Academy and Statues.

SCULPTURE.

SCUTAGE or ESCUAGE. The service of the shield (scutum) is either uncertain or certain. Escuage uncertain is where the tenant by his tenure is bound to follow his lord; and is called Casteward, where the tenant is bound to defend a castle. Escuage certain is where the tenant is set at a certain sum of money to be paid in lieu of such uncertain services. The first tax levied in England to pay an army, 5 Hen. II. 1159. (Cardell.)

SCUTARI, Asiatic Turkey, opposite Constantinople, of which it is a suburb. It was anciently called Chrysopolis, golden city, in consequence, it is said, of the Persians having established a treasury here when they attempted the conquest of Greece. Near here Constantine finally defeated Licinius, 323. The hospital was occupied by the sick and wounded of the Anglo-French army, in 1854-5, whose sufferings were so alleviated by the kind exertions of Miss Florence Nightingale and a band of nurses under her, aided by a large fund of money (15,000l.) subscribed by the public. Exposed to the fire of the magazine by lightning, about 150 killed, 8 June, 1853. Population, 1901, about 9,400.

SCYLLA and CHARYBDIS. Two sea-monsters who, according to the Homer legend, dwelt on the opposite sides of a narrow sea-strait. Scylla had 12 feet, 6 long necks and mouths, with 6 rows of sharp teeth in each mouth, and barked like a dog. Charybdis, who dwelt under a cliff, three times a day sucked down the sea and threw it up again. Ulysses sailed by these monsters, but lost 6 of his crew, who were seized by Scylla. In later times, the name of Charybdis was applied to a "swallow-tail" or rapid in the straits of Messina, as especially dangerous to navigators, because in avoiding it they ran the risk of being wrecked on Scylla, a rock opposite. Hence the proverb: "To shun Charybdis and fall into Scylla."

SCYTHIA, situate in the most northern parts of Europe and Asia. The boundaries were unknown to the ancients. The Scythians made several irruptions upon the more southern provinces of Asia, especially 624 B.C., when they remained in possession of Asia Minor for twenty-eight years, and at different periods extended their conquests in Europe, penetrating as far as Egypt; see Tartary.

SEAL FISHERY ACT, passed 14 June, 1875; another act, 29 June, 1893, see FISHERY STRAITS. Seal fisheries (N. Pacific) act, relating to Russia, passed, 27 June, 1895.

SEALS or SIGNETS. Engraved gems were used as such by the Egyptians, Jews, Assyrians, and Greeks; see Erod. xxviii. 14. Ahab's seal was used by Jezebel, 879 B.C. (1 Kings xxii. 8). The Romans in the time of the Tarquins (about 600 B.C.) had gemmed rings. They sealed rooms, granaries, bags of money, &c. The German emperor, Frederick I. (A.D. 1152) had seals of gold, silver, and tin. Impressions of the seals of Saxon kings are extant; and the English great seal is attributed to Edward the Confessor (1041-66). "A seal with armorial bearings before the 11th century, is certainly false." Lord Byron. The most ancient English seal with arms on it is said to be that of Richard I. or John. White and coloured waxes were used. Our present sealing-wax, containing shellac, did not come into general use in Germany and England until about 1550. Red wafers for seals came into use about 1624; but were not used for public scales till the 18th century. A seal acquired by the British Museum made of black marble, supposed to be Hittite, found at Yuzgat in Asia Minor, announced Nov. 1886.

SEAMEN. In consequence of the great loss of life by wrecks of merchant vessels, attributed to bad ships and overloading, a commission of inquiry was agreed to by parliament on the motion of Mr. S. Plimsoll, 4 March, 1873.

The report issued in September tended to justify the public apprehensions, but suggested no remedy. The report, presented to parliament, 2 July, 1874, condemned the existing insurance system, and recommended increased responsibility of owners and others, and strengthening the powers of the Board of Trade for investigations.

The Merchant Shipping Survey Bill was rejected (173–170) 24 June, 1874. After much excitement, an act was passed to give further powers to the Board of Trade to stop unseaworthy ships 13 Aug. 1875. Merchant Shipping act (which sec.) passed 15 Aug. 1876. Strong circular issued by the Board of Trade (Mr. Chamberlain) of deaths in the employed in ships asserted to be 1 in 60; in coal mines 1 in 375 present system stated to be ineffectual. Jan. 1884.

First annual congress of the National Seamen’s and Firemen’s union held at Cardiff, Mr. Plimsoll present (he died aged 74, 3 June, 1885). 8 Oct. 1889.

SEAMEN’S HOSPITAL SOCIETY. Established 1821, see Dreadnought.

SEAS. The claim of England to rule the British seas is of very ancient date. Arthur is said to have assumed it, and Alfred afterwards supported this claim. It was maintained by Selden, and has been taken by government in course of sea, 8 Chas. I. 1623. The Dutch, after the death of Charles I., made some attempts to obtain it, but were roughly treated by Blake and other admirals. Russia and other powers of the north armed to avoid search, 1780; again, 1800; see Armed Neutrality and Flag. The international rule of the road at sea was settled in 1822; (new rules were issued in 1850 and 19 Aug. 1884). Mr. Wm. Stirling Lacou proposed to reduce the rules from 749 words to 144, for simplicity and severity. His form had been nine times before parliament, 1873. Revised rules issued by the admiralty in a "Fleet Circular," Nov. 1885.

The British Board of Trade appointed a committee to consider measures for the establishment of a "new rule of the road at sea." 1 Aug. 1890. The committee adopt-ì the regulations recommended by the Washington conference in 1889 (see Navigation Law), in spite of much opposition from the Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom, the General Shippers’ Society of London, the London Board of Lloyd’s, and other kindred bodies; reported Dec. 1894.

Committee appointed by the board of trade, March, 1895; report issued, the new rules supported but slightly, 15 May, 1895. Another committee recommended, April, 1896; another committee respecting collisions at sea, May, 1897; final report 13 May; rules to be enforced 1 July, 1897.

Lord line committee, report issued Nov. 1895.

All collision regulations, including those relating to fishing boats (passed by order in council, 1906) are consolidated by an order in council to be passed Oct. 1910.

These are accepted by all leading powers.

International maritime congresses, Antwerp, 2 Sept. 1851; London, 1889; Paris, 1905; Hamburg, 1907.

The British government, in sending delegates to an international conference at Brussels on 12 Sept., 1910, to consider the draft treaty framed at an international conference at Brussels last year.

SEA SERPENT, GREAT, the name given to an animal popularly believed to exist, especially in deep tropical seas, but much controverted by zoologists, sir Richard Owen and others.

SEASONS. The four natural divisions of the year.

In the north temperate regions in 1910 the spring quarter began 21 March, 6 p.m.; the summer, 22 June, 8 a.m.; the autumn, 23 Sept. 11 p.m.; the winter, 22 Dec. 5 p.m. See Lapland seasons under Year.

SEBASTIAN, ST. (N. Spain), was taken by the French, under the duke of Berwick, in 1710. It was besieged by the British and allied army under Lord Walsingham. After a most heroic resistance, by which the whole town was laid nearly in ruins, it was stormed by general Graham (afterwards Lord Lynedoch), and taken 31 Aug. 1813. On 5 May, 1836, the fortified works, through the centre of which ran the high road to Hernani, were carried by the English auxiliary legion under general Evans, after very hard fights. The town was afterwards named Sebastopol, and under Lord John Hay, but very opportune aid to the victors in this contest.—A vigorous assault was made on the lines of general De Lacy Evans, at St. Sebastian, on 1 Oct. 1836. Both parties fought with bravery. The Carlists were repulsed, after suffering severely. The loss of the Anglo-Spanish force was 376 men and 27 officers, killed and wounded. General De Lacy Evans was slightly wounded. See under Leagues. Population, 1887, 29,047; 1900, 37,812; 1910 (est.), 44,000.

SEBASTOPOL or SEVASTOPOL, a town and once a naval arsenal, at S.W. point of the Crimea, formerly the little village of Aktar. The buildings were commenced in 1784, by Catherine II. after the conquest of the country. The town is built in the shape of a amphitheatre on the rise of a large hill, flattened on its summit, according to a plan laid down before 1784, which has been unaltered since. The fortifications and harbour were constructed by an English engineer, colonel Upton, and his sons, since 1850. This place underwent eleven months’ siege, by the English and French in 1854 and 1855. Immediately after the battle of the Alma, 20 Sept. 1854, the allied army marched to Sebastopol, and took up its position on the plateau between it and Balaklava, and the grand attack and bombardment commenced 17 Oct 1854, without success. After many sanguinary encounters by day and night, and repeated bombardments... ments, a grand assault was made on 8 Sept. 1855, upon the Malakhoff tower and the Redan, the most important fortifications to the south of the town. The French succeeded in capturing and retaining the Malakhoff. The attacks of the English on the great Redan and of the French upon the little Redan were successful, but the assailants were compelled to retire after a desperate struggle with great loss of life. The French lost 1,000 killed, of whom 5 were generals, 23 superior and 116 inferior officers, 4,500 wounded, and 1,400 missing. The English lost 385 killed (29 being commissioned and 42 non-commis- sioned officers), 1,886 wounded, and 176 missing. In the night the Russians abandoned the southern and principal part of the town and fortifications, after destroying as much as possible, and crossed to the northern forts. They also sunk or burnt the remainder of their fleet. The allies found a very great amount of stores when they entered the place, 9 Sept. The works were utterly destroyed in April, 1856, and the town was restored to the Russians in July; gen. Tolleben, the able defender, died 1 July, and his monument covered 28 June, 1898. See Russo-Turkish War. Population of Sebastopol, 1885, 33,503; 1897, 50,716; 1910 (est.), 65,000. Made a naval port, Sept. 1895; new dock, opened, 18 May, 1908. Monument to adm. Nakhimoff unveiled by the czar, 30 Nov. 1898.

Organised revolt of the naval and military forces with Southemmutineers. 24 Nov. 1895

Mutineers capture the city; adm. Pisaresky shot; railway station taken and truife stopped; battle between loyal troops and mutineers, the latter shell the city; imperial forces storm the rebel batteries and capture the ships. 28 Nov. 1895.

SECEDEES; SUCFION CHURCH, see Burghers.

SECONDARY EDUCATION, see Education.

SECONDARY OF LONDON, an ancient office, resembling that of under-sheriff in counties. The place was purchasable till early in the present century, when it was bought up by the corporation.

SECRETARIES OF STATE. The earliest authentic record of a secretary of state is in the reign of Henry III., when John Manasseh is described as "Secretary Noster," 1253. Rymer. Towards the close of Henry VIII.'s reign, two secretaries were appointed; and upon the union with Scotland, Anne added a third as secretary for Scotch affairs; this appointment was afterwards laid aside; but in the reign of George III. the number was again increased to three, one for the American department. In 1782 this last was abolished by act of Parliament; and the secretaries were appointed for home, foreign, and colonial affairs. When there were but three secretaries, one held the portefeuille of the Northern department, including the Low Countries, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Poland, Russia, &c.; the other, of the Southern department, including France, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Portugal, and Turkey; the others of Ireland belonging to the elder secretary; both secretaries then equally directed the home affairs. Bentson. There are now six secretaries, two foreign, one home, one Scotch, war (in 1858) India, and (in 1885) Scotland, all in the cabinet. Secretary of State for Scotland act passed 14 Aug. 1885, amended 1887, explained 1894. See Administrations, and separate articles.

The Chartered Institute of Secretaries. This body was founded in 1891, and in 1902 obtained a royal charter when it had a membership of 1,526, its present membership being 5,500. It consists of secretaries of joint stock companies and other public bodies. The institute has branches in Manchester, Newcastle, Birmingham, Shefield, and South Africa.

SECRET SOCIETIES, Assassins, Fenians, Ribbonism, Veloudie Tribunal, Rosicrucians, Illuminati, Carbonari, Mary-Anne, Nikisists.

SECTS, RELIGIOUS, see under Worship, and their respective titles.

SECULAR GAMES (Ludi Seculares), very ancient Roman games, celebrated on important occasions. Horace wrote his "Carmen Seculare" for their celebration in the reign of the emperor Augustus (17). They took place again in the reign of Claudius (47), of Domitian (88), and for the last time, of Philip (249).

SECULARISM, a name given to the principles advocated by G. J. and Austin Holyoake, about 1846, and subsequently by Mr. Bradlaugh (died 30 Jan. 1891). Mr. G. J. Holyoake died 22 Jan. 1896.

Its central idea is free, not lawless thought, and it considers scepticism to be scientific. It advocates liberty of action with respect to the impossibility of proving either by experience or argument, that Christianity, or any other, is true. It is preposterous to suppose that there is only one religion which is true. Its standard is utilitarian; it is the religion of the present life only; teaching men to seek morality in nature, and happiness in duty and in reason. Messrs. Austin and G. J. Holyoake and other secularists repudiated atheism.

SECURITY FROM VIOLENCE ACT, passed in 1863, appointed whipping as a part of the punishment for attempts at garrotting.

SEDAN, an ancient fortified city in the valley of the Meuse, N.E. of France, the seat of a principality long held by the dukes of Bouillon. On 6 July, 1841, a victory was gained at La Marlé, near Sedan, by the count of Soissons and the troops of Bouillon and other French princes, over the royal army supporting Richelieu; but the count was slain on 23 June, 1842. The duke was arrested in the midst of his army, and was made to cede Sedan to the crown. The protestant university was abolished after the revocation of the edict of Nantes, 22 Oct. 1685. Around this place a series of desperate con- flicts on 20, 28, and 31 Aug. between the French army of the king and the imperial army under Murat (150,000 men) and the greater part of the three German armies under the king and crown-prince of Prussia and the crown-prince of Saxony (about 250,000 men) was brought to a close on 1 Sept. 1870. The emperor Napoleon was present during the battle, and, it is said, stood at lacs near Sedan, exposed for four hours on 1 Sept. to the German grenades. The impossibility of further resistance was then evident. The Germans had contracted their circle close round Sedan; their formidable artillery held all the heights, from which they could at pleasure wholly destroy the town and the army, and only 2000 men were in a condition to respond to their commander's call, and to make a supreme effort to break the enemy with the emperor and escape to Montmédy. At first general de Wimpffen (called to the command when MacMahon was wounded) indignantly rejected the terms offered by the victor, and the emperor had a fruitless interview with count Bismarck to endeavour to mitigate them. On 2 Sept. the emperor wrote in autograph to the king of Prussia, "Mon frère, n'avançons pas moins à admirer de votre promptitude, de vos efforts, de votre constance, de votre résolution, mon grand et illustre souverain. NAPOLÉON." A capitulation of Sedan and the whole army therein was signed by generals von Moltke and the count of Belleu, near Fleunay, at 11.30 a.m., and at 2 p.m. an interview took place between the king and the emperor.

The conflict was principally carried on by the artillery, in which the Germans had the advantage, not only in number (600 to 500), but also in weight, range, and precision. The carnage was awful, and the field the next day was a mass of shattered bones, torn flesh, and coloured rags.

About 25,000 French prisoners were taken in the battle, and 83,000 surrendered the next day, together with 70 mitrailleuses, 400 field-pieces, and 150 fortress guns. About 14,000 French wounded were found lying in the neighbourhood, and about 3000 escaped into Belgium and laid down their arms. Among the killed was a lieut.-col. Pemberton, a correspondent of the Times, who had approached too near the conflict.

The French emperor and his suite arrived at Wilmsholte, a castle near Cassel appointed for his residence (formerly inhabited by his uncle Jerome, when king of Westphalia), in the evening of 5 Sept.

In a letter dated 12 May, 1872, the emperor Napoleon took upon himself the whole responsibility of the surrender of Sedan.

SEDAN CHAIRS (so called from Sedan), were first seen in England in 1551. One used in the reign of James I., by the duke of Buckingham, caused great indignation, and the people exclaimed that he was employing his fellow-creatures to do the service of beasts. Sedan chairs came into London in 1634, when sir Francis Duncombe obtained the sole privilege to use, let, and hire a number of such covered chairs for fourteen years. They came into very general use in 1649.

SEDANGS, a tribe dwelling on the borders of Annam. M. de Mayerna, an ex-officer of the French navy, having made himself their king, came to Paris. He was set aside, and the Sedangs were brought under French protection by the French resident-general in Indo-China; reported Oct. 1889.

SEDGEMOOR (Somersetshire), where the duke of Monmouth (natural son of Charles II. by Lucy Waltera), who had risen in rebellion on the accession of James II., was completely defeated by the royal army, 6 July, 1685. The duke was made a prisoner in the disguise of a peasant, at the bottom of a ditch, overcome with hunger and fatigue. He was tried and beheaded on 15 July following.

SEDITION. Sedition acts were passed in the reign of George III. The proclamation against seditious writings was published May, 1792. The celebrated Sedition bill passed Dec. 1795. Sedition societies were suppressed by act, June, 1797. The Judicious Meetings and Assemblies' bill passed 31 March, 1817. In Ireland, during the Roman Catholic and Repeal agitation, acts or proclamations against sedition and seditious meetings were published from time to time until 1848.

SEEDS. An act was passed to prevent the adulteration of seeds (a common practice), 11 Aug. 1869; amended in 1878.

SEGEDIN, or Szegedin, Hungary. Here was concluded a treaty between Ladislaus IV. and Amurath II., 12 July, 1444. It was treacherously annulled at the instigation of cardinal Julian, who with Ladislaus perished in the fatal battle of Varna, 10 Nov. 1444. See Varna.

SEICENTO, see under Italian.

SEIDLICE (Poland), where a battle was fought 10 April, 1857, between the Poles and Russians. The Poles obtained the victory after a bloody conflict, taking 4000 prisoners and several pieces of cannon; but this success was soon followed by fatal reverses. Massacre, see Russo, Sept. 1850.

SEISMOmeter (from σεισμός, Greek for earthquake), an apparatus for measuring the violence of the shocks. One is described by Mr. Robert Mallet in his work on earthquakes, published in 1838. Further advances described by prof. J. Milne, at the Royal Institution, 12 Feb. 1897. Dr. Ehleit's apparatus adopted as the standard system for international investigations, see Switzerland, Jan. 1899.

Drs. Vicentini and Vacher improve their microseismograph for recording earthquake movements, vertical and horizontal, March, 1899.

A seismological society founded in Japan in 1882.

An earthquake investigation committee formed in Japan, prof. Kikuchi and Dr. F. Omori, president and secretaries, 1894; 32 vols. published, valuable information of seismic phenomena, &c., see Nature.

SELA, see Petra.

SELBORNE SOCIETY, for the preservation of birds, plants, and pleasant places, originated in the Selborne league (afterwards society) formed by Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Musgrave in Nov. 1855. It has included the plumage league since Jan. 1886 (see under Birds).

SELECT-MEN, the earliest officers of the townships formed by the first colonists of New England about 1635.

SELENIUM, a grayish-white elementary substance (chemically resembling sulphur), discovered in the stone rutilite by Berzelius, in 1817.

The variation in its resistance to the electric current when subjected to light was observed by Mr. Willoughby Smith in 1823, and utilised in the telephonic which see. Dr. C. Wm. Siemens constructed a "selenium eye."

SELEUCIA (Syria), made the capital of the Syrian monarchy by its builder, Seleucus Nicator, 312 B.C. On the fall of the Seleucidae, it became a republic, 65 B.C. It was taken by Trajan, A.D. 116; several times given up and retaken; subjugated by the Saracens, and united with Ctesiphon, 636.

SELEUCIDES, ERA OF THE, dates from the reign of Seleucus Nicator. It was used in Syria for many years, and frequently by the Jews until the 15th century, and by some Arabs. Opinions vary as to its commencement. To reduce it to our era (supposing it to begin 1 Sept. 312 B.C.), subtract 311 years 4 months.

SELF-DENYING ORDINANCE, which ordained that no member of parliament should hold any civil or military office or command conferred by either or both of the houses, or by authority derived from them, after much discussion, was passed 3 April, 1645, by the influence of Cromwell, who thus removed the evil of Ex-ex and other Presbyterians out of his way. A somewhat similar ordinance was adopted by the parliament at Melbourne in Australia, in 1858. The name was given to an arrangement made respecting British naval promotions and retirements in 1870.

SELLASIA (Laconia). Here the Spartans under Cleomenes were defeated by Antigonus Doson and the Acheans, 221 B.C.

SEMAPHORE, see Telegraphs.
SEMOLOGY (Greek σέμα, a sign), the science of signs, a term proposed by B. H. Smart, who died 1872.

SEMINARA (Naples). Near here Gonzalo de Cordova, the great captain, was defeated by the French, in 1495; but defeated them, 21 April, 1593.

SEMICAS. see Simancas.

SEMPACH (Switzerland). Here the Swiss gained a great victory over Leopold, duke of Austria, 9 July, 1386, under Arnold von Winkelried; the duke and Arnold were slain, and the liberty of Switzerland was established. The day is still commemorated. Especially on 5 July, 1886.

SEMPER EADEM ("Always the same"), one of the mottos of queen Elizabeth, was adopted by queen Mary and queen Anne, 15 Dec. 1702.

SEMPERINGHAM, see Gilbertines.

SENATE (Senatus). In the ancient republics the government was divided between the senatus (from seius, old; in Greek, gerousia, from geron, oldi, an assembly of elders, and the popular assembly (comitia, Latin; ecclesia, Greek), the king being merely the executive. The Roman senate, said to have originally been composed of 100 members, was raised to 300 by Tarquinius Priscus; to about 600 by Sylla, about 81 B.C. and to 600 by Julius Caesar. It was reformed and reduced to 600 by Augustus; and gradually lost its power and dignity under the emperors. The mere form existed in the reign of Justinian. A second senate, formed at Constantinople by Constantine, retained its office till the 9th century. S.P.Q.R. on the Roman standard stood for "Senatus Populique Romanus," the Roman senate and people. A senatus consultum was a law enacted by the senate.

The French senate was created by the constitution of the year 5, promulgated 24 Dec. 1792, to look over the administration of the laws. The number of senators was raised gradually from 60 to 157. The senate was re-established by the charter of peers in 1814; re-established by Napoleon III, 14 Jan. 1852; and abolished 30 Jan. 1873. Its re-establishment was proposed in 1873. Establishment of a senate of 300 voted; 225 to be elected yearly by the departments; 75 (for life) by national assembly. 22 Feb. 1875.

The 72 elected, 39 Dec. 1875.

The congress of 13 Aug., 1874, ordered the gradual abolition of age as a condition; new senators were to be elected for 9 years by the departments; enacted, 5 Nov.; bill passed by the deputies and senate, 43 Dec. 1874. See France.

SENEFFE (Belgium). Near here was fought a severe but indecisive battle between the Dutch, under the prince of Orange (afterwards William III.), and the French, led by the great Condé, 11 Aug. 1674.

SENEGAL. French colonies on the river of that name in Senegambia, W. Africa, settled about 1626; several times taken by the British, but restored to the French, to whom they were finally restored in 1814.

The French opposed by two powerful chiefs, Sanyoy and Ahmadou, sultan of Toucouleurs; Sanyoy, defeated by the French, makes a treaty 1856. Very great loss of life and property by unexampled disasters. Sept. 1890.

French war with the Sotas, 1801; the chief Ahmadou's army defeated in sharp battles; the French, under Col. Archamard, enter Nioro, 1 Jan. Ahmadou again defeated by Col. Archamard; many prisoners taken; Ahmadou fled; Nioro restored to the chiefs reported 16 Jan.

The rebel tribes defeated, near Diéna; 600 killed, 24 Feb. Diéna and Kinian taken by Col. Archamard, reported 3 March, 1894.

War with Samory renewed; he retires to his southern territories, after much carnage and devastation. April-June, 1894.

SEPTUAGINT VERSION OF THE BIBLE. Lat. Septuaginta, "seventy," the Alexandrian and oldest Greek version of the Old Testament. So named from the story of its origin in the letter of Aristarchus, "purporting to have been written by a Greek of Alexandria at the time when the event occurred. Aristarchus states that Ptolemy Philadelpheus, king of Egypt (284-247 B.C.), who was making a collection of the laws of all nations for the great Alexandria library, was advised by his librarian, Demetrius Phalerus, to have the Jewish Scriptures translated into Greek; how the king sent an embassy to Jerusalem to request the help of the wise men of Israel; how 72 learned Jews, 6 from each tribe, came to Alexandria and were sent to labour in the translation of the Island of Pharos; and how in 72 days they dictated to Demetrius a translation of the whole Scriptures," which soon became the authorised Bible of the Greek-speaking Jews. Although this story is mythical, it is possible that the Septuagint was translated by Egyptian Jews from the Hebrew by command of Ptolemy, probably for the gratification of his own literary curiosity; modern criticism, however, affirms that the Septuagint version is the work not only of different translators, but of different periods, the Pentateuch being first translated, and subsequently the other books. The Septuagint was in use up to the time of Jesus Christ, when it had almost superseded the original Hebrew text. Most of the translations in the New Testament from the Old Testament are taken from the LXX. The principal MSS. of the Septuagint are the Alexandrine codex, in the British Museum; the Vatican codex, in Rome; and the Sinaitic codex, which is defective, in St. Petersburg.

3. Pergamos. Capital of the kingdom of the same name, founded by Philetæros, whom Lykomchos, one of Alexander’s generals, had made governor, 283 B.C. He was succeeded by the three sons of Attalus, who took the title of king: 247: Eumenes II. (who collected a great library), 157; Attalus II., 133. He bequeathed his kingdom to the Romans, 133. It revolted, was subdued, and made the Roman province Asia. Pergamos is still an important place, called Bergamo. Parchment is said to have been invented here. The explorations of the ancient cedars, instituted by the German government in 1874, resulted in the discovery of Greek marble statuary, which has been deposited in the museum at Berlin.

5. Sardis. Formerly the capital of Lydia, the kingdom of Crotus (560 B.C.); taken by Cyrus, 548; burnt by the Greeks, 499; it flourishing under the Roman empire; was taken by the Turks; and destroyed by Tamerlane about 1422; it is now a miserable village, named Sart.

6. Philadelphia was built by Attalus (III.) Philadelphus, king of Pergamos (159-138 B.C.). It was taken by Bajazet I. A.D. 1396. It is now called Allah Sheir, “The city of God,” and is a miserable town of 3000 houses.

7. Laodicea. In Phrygia, near Lydia; has suffered much from earthquakes. It is now a deserted place, called Eskehisar, “The old castle.”

SEVILLE (S.W. Spain), the HISPANIA of the Phoenicians, and the Julia of the Romans, was the capital until Philip II. finally established his court at Madrid, 1563. It opened its gates to the Saracens in 712, and was taken from them by the Christians in 1248, after an obstinate siege. The peace of Seville between England, France, and Spain, and also a defensive alliance to which Holland acceded, signed Nov. 1729. In the peninsular war, Seville surrendered to the French, 1 Feb. 1810; and was taken by assault by the British and Spaniards, after the battle of Salamanca, 27 Aug. 1812. It was besieged but not taken by Espartero, July, 1843. Visit of prince of Wales, 20 April, 1876. The ancient cathedral was much renovated. 1899-90. Population, 1871, 147,000; 1924, 150,000; 1910 (est.), 175,500.

SEVRES, see Porcelain.

SEVRES, see Chinae Maximae. An act was passed in 1847 enforcing the conveyance of the sewage of houses in London into the public sewers. The commissioners of sewers in London were superintended by the metropolis commissioners of sewers, nominated by the government. They abolished the large brick sewers, introducing pipe drains, and turned the contents of 30,000 cesspools into the river Thames. The necessity for purifying the defiled river led to the construction of a new system of drainage, under the superintendence of the Metropolitan Board of Works. The main drainage (the plan of Mr. J. W. Bazalgette) consisted of the northern high-level, middle-level, and low-level, and southern high-level and low-level. On 14 March, 1865, the works were said to be completed, except the low-level sewer on the north side, which was waiting for the completion of the Thames embankment, &c. On 4 April, 1865, the prince of Wales started the engines which commenced lifting the waters of the southern outfall, at Crossness Point, near Erith. The main drainage works of the metropolis (82 miles), were finally completed Aug. 1875. The sewage is carried 14 miles down the river. Total cost, 4,300,000l.

SHAKSPEARE'S PLAYS.

Royal commission appointed, May, 1852; third report, scientific investigation needed, 3 March, 1853. Royal Commission, 4th report, deals with methods of purification of sewage in towns, issued as a blue book, 31 Oct., 1858. The Metropolitan Main Drainage system is (1859) the most complete and costly scheme for the sewage of a great city ever accomplished. The whole cost of two entirely distinct series of intercepting sewers, one for the districts to the north of the river, the other for those in the south, each being carried to outfalls in the Thames at Harking and Crossness respectively. Capital cost has amounted to nearly twelve millions, and the yearly cost of maintenance, management, etc., is something like a quarter of a million pounds. Sewage treated 1838-9, 103,519,940,158 gallons; daily average 283,676,774 gallons; 24,992 tons of lime and 6,001 tons of Porto-phosphate of iron used; 2,851,000 tons of sludge sent to sea. Total capital outlay on main drainage of London up to 31 March 1899, £21,259, 383. Main drainage committee report March, 1899.

SEWING-MACHINE. It is said that Thomas Saint patented one for boots and shoes in 1790. Similar inventions are ascribed to Duncan (1804); Adams and Dodge (American, 1818); Thimmonies (French, 1834); and Walter Hunt (1834). The first really practical sewing-machine was the invention of Elias Howe, an American mechanic, of Cambridge, in Massachusetts, about 1841, who died at Brooklyn, 2 Oct. 1867, aged 47. It is now known under an improved form as Thomas's sewing-machine, by whom it was introduced into England in 1846. Many improvements have been since made and new machines invented.

SHAKERS, an English sect, now chiefly found in America, arose in the time of Charles I., and derived its name from their voluntary convulsion. It existed for a short time only, but was revived by James Wardlaw in 1747, and still more by Ann Lee (or Standless), expelled quakers, about 1757. The sect emigrated to America, May, 1772, and settled near Albany, New York, 1774. They denounce marriage and family life, and regard celibacy as necessary to war, dowsen baptism and the Lord's supper, and use dancing as part of their worship. Marsden. Above a hundred English persons, incorrectly termed shakers, settled in the New Forest, near Lymington, Hampshire, on property obtained for them by a Miss Wood in 1782: not paying the interest of a mortgage they were ejected in severe weather, and suffered much; end of Dec. 1784. They were called Gillingites, from Mrs. Girdling, a leader among them, who died 9 April, 1826. The community then gradually dispersed.

SHAKESPEARES PLAYS. William Shakspeare was born at Stratford-upon-Avon, Warwickshire, (23 April, 1564, and died 23 April, 1616. [An act to incorporate the Trustees and Guardians of Shakespeare's birthplace was passed 20 March, 1801.] The first collected edition of his works is dated 1623 (a facsimile of this edition was published, 1862-5); the second, 1632; the third, 1663; the fourth, 1685; all in folio.

Shakespeare's first plays were probably produced about 1590, and soon after represented, himself frequently taking a part at the "Theatre," or the "Curtain," near Shoreditch, E. London, and after 1594, at the new "Globe" theatre, Bankside, Southwark, of which Shakespeare himself was part proprietor. It was of a horse-shoe form, partly covered with thatch. After it was licensed, the thatch was removed, through the negligent discharge of a piece of ordnance, and the whole building was consumed, 29 June, 1613. The house was crowded to excess, to witness the play of Henry VII. But the audience escaped unhurt.

Shakespeare's Juliete, projected by David Garrick, was celebrated at Stratford-upon-Avon, 6 Sept. 1769. A similar festival was kept 23 April, 1836. The tercentenary of Shakespeare's birth was celebrated, with many festivities, at Stratford-upon-Avon, 23-29 April, 1874.

Shakespeare's House. In 1847, a number of persons of distinction interested themselves for the preservation of the house in which Shakespeare was born, and actually put up for sale; they held a meeting at the Thatchell-house tavern, London, 26 Aug. in that year, and took measures for purchasing a subscription set on foot by the Shakespeare Club at Stratford-upon-Avon, and a committee was appointed to carry out their object. In the old Shakespeare's house was sold at the American auction in the city of London, where it was "knocked down" to the United Committee of London and Stratford for the large sum of 5,000£. 16 Sept. 1847. In 1856, a learned oriental scholar, John Shakespeare (no relation of the poet) gave up 2,000£ to purchase the adjoining house, that it might be pulled down, in order to ensure the poet's house from the risk of fire.

His Wife's (Anne Hathaway) cottage and furniture purchased for 300£, 2 May, 1813.

Mr. Matthias Mull, a remarkable emulator of Shakespeare's text, died early Oct. 1893.

Shakespeare's Birthplace, in Church Street, Stratford-upon-Avon, Oct. 1851, to purchase Shakespeare's garden, birth-place estate, and to erect and endow a public library and museum at Stratford-upon-Avon. The catalogue of the library and museum has been published. First added to the gift was by Mrs. Cowden Clarke, and gifts by the late Mr. Halliwell-Phillips and others in 1897.

Shawls, of oriental origin, were introduced into Paris after the return of Napoleon Bonaparte from Egypt, 1801. The manufacture was introduced by Barrow and Watson, in 1783, at Norwich. It began at Paisley and Edinburgh about 1865.

Sheep were exported from England to Spain, and, the breed being thereby improved, produced the fine Spanish wool, which proved detrimental to our woolen manufacture, 1797. Anderson. Their exportation was prohibited on pain of fine and imprisonment, 1722. The number of sheep in the United Kingdom has been variously stated—by some at 13,000,000, by others at 40,000,000, and by more at 60,000,000. See under Cattle.

In Aug. and Sept. 1802, many sheep in Wiltshire died of small-pox, and on Sept. 11, government declared for enforcing the law for the prevention of contagion. The evil soon abated. In April, 1806, the disease reappeared and the regulations were reissued.

In 1855, 914,700 sheep and lambs were imported; in 1871, 916,790; 1879, 941,121; 1889, 358,458; 1900, 352,833; 1000, 297,263; 1894, 382,243; 1905, 353,397; 1906, 351,054; 1907, 358,070.

SHIP-BUILDING. &c., according to the Greek legends, began with the Egyptians, and ancient drawings of their rude vessels are extant. The Greeks, Phoenicians, and Carthaginians were skillful shipbuilders, and Solomon's "navy of ships" (1 Kings ix. 26), was doubtless constructed by Tyrians, 952 B.C. The ships of Tarshish (probably in Spain), are mentioned in Psal. xlvii. 7. Isaiah ii. 16, &c. The Romans built their first fleet of boats, by copying a Carthaginian vessel wrecked on their coast, 260 B.C. The dangers of navigation are described in Psal. cxviii. 23-30 and Acts xxvii. Strong vessels were constructed by the Normans for invasion and piracy in the 11th century A.D. et seq., and by the Venetians and other Italians, for commerce and war in the Middle Ages. The first double-decked ship built in England was of 1000 tons burthen, by order of Henry VIII., was called the Great Harry, and cost 14,000l. Stone, port-holes and other improvements were invented by Deschamps, a French builder at Brest, in the reign of Louis XII., about 1500. Ship-building was treated as a science by Hoste, 1667. In the second half of the 16th century great progress was made in ship-building. Wood gave place to iron and steel, and only small vessels are now constructed of wood alone.

Viking ship discovered in a grave mound at Gokstad, Norway (now preserved in the university of Christiania) in 1862. A prehistoric ship cut out of solid oak, 48 feet long, 4 feet 4 inches wide, and 2 feet deep, was found by the Brigg gas company while excavating near the old gasworks, in Limehouse Lane, April, 1885. Mr. Justice Chitty directed, 6 July, 1886, that the ship was the property of the owner of the land, Mr. Elles.

SHILLING. The value of the ancient Saxon coin of this name was fivepence, but it was reduced to fourpence about a century before the conquest. After the conquest the French soldis of twelve pence, in use among the Normans, was called shilling. The true English shilling was first coined, some say, in small numbers, by Henry VII., 1504. Ruding. A peculiar shilling, value fivepence, but to be current at twelve, was struck in Ireland, 1560; and a large but very base coinage in England for the service of Ireland, 1598. Milled shillings were coined 13 Chas. II. 1662; see Coins.

SHILOH, the word by which the followers of Jephthah tested their opponents the Ephraimites, on passing the Jordan, about 1413 B.C.; Judges xii. The term is now applied to any party watchword or dogma.

SHIBBOLETH, the word of which an ancient Greece had the same pronunciation as the Hebrew, was used as a test of loyalty by the Jews. After the conquest it was applied also to the term for a password, and was used by the Jews of the Middle Ages to indicate the status of a person in their community: a member of the newer faith was designated as one "who knows the Shibboleth," and a Jew of the old faith as one who "speaks in the old tongue."

SHIPKA, see Shipka.

SHIP-MONEY was first levied about 1007, to form a navy to oppose the Danes. This impost, levied by Charles I. in 1631-6, was much opposed, and led to the revolution. He assessed London in seven ships, of 4000 tons, and 1500 men; Yorkshire in two ships, of 600 tons or 12,000/; Bristol in one ship of 100 tons; Lancashire in one ship, of 400 tons. Among others, John Hampden refused to pay the tax; he was tried in the Exchequer in 1676. The judges declared the tax illegal, 12 June, 1678. Ship-money was included in the grievances complained of in 1641. The five judges, who had given an opinion in their favour, were imprisoned. Hampden received a wound in a skirmish with prince Rupert, at Chalgrove, 18 June, and died 24 June, 1643.

SHIPPI G, BRITISH. Shipping was first registered in the river Thames in 1786; and throughout the empire in 1788. In the middle of the 18th century, the shipping of England was but half a-million of tons. In 1830, the number of ships in the British empire was 22,785. The merchant shipping act of 1851 was amended in 1897; see Merchant Shipping Act, Navy, and Navigation Acts. Steam Navigation. Trials, 1893.

Some ground here, purchased in 1812 and 1855, by an act of parliament, 1862, was set apart as "ranges for the use and practice of artillery," and a school for gunnery was established; see Cannon, note. Experiments with Mr. Whitworth's projectiles on 12 Nov. 1862, showed their great improvement in form and material. Shells were sent through 41 inch plate and the wood-work behind it. It was objected, that they might not do this, with ships in motion. The National Volunteer Artillery Association began their annual meetings here in July, 1865.

During shell experiments with a new sensitive fuse, col. Francis Lyon (the inventor), col. Fox-Strangways, capt. Francis M. Goodfellow, and four others were killed, 26 Feb. 1865.

SHOES, among the Jews were made of leather, linen, rush, or wood. Moons were worn as ornaments in their shoes by Jewish women. Isaiah iii. 18. Pythagoras would have his disciples wear shoes made of the bark of trees; probably that they might not wear what were made of the skins of animals, as they refrained from the use of everything that had life. The Romans wore an ivory crescent on their shoes; and Caligula enriched his with precious stones. In England, about 1402, the people wore the backs or points of their shoes so long that they embarassed themselves in walking, and were forced to tie them up to their knees; the fine gentleman fastened their with chains of silver or siller gilt, and others with laces. This was prohibited, on the forfeiture of 20s. on pain of being cursed by the clergy; 7 Edw. IV. 1407, see Trees. Shoes, as at present worn, were introduced about 1673. The buckle was not used till 1688. Stowe. Mortimer. The buckle-makers petitioned against the use of shoe-strings in 1791. SILICON or SILICUM (from silex, flint), a non-metallic element, next to oxygen, the most abundant substance in the earth, as it enters into the constitution of many earths, metallic oxides, and a great number of minerals. The mode of procuring pure silicon was discovered by Berzelius in 1823. Gelatin. See Water-glass and Romane's Stone.

SILISTRIA, a strong military town in Bulgaria, European Turkey. It was taken by the Russians, 30 June, 1829, and held some years by them as a pledge for the payment of a large sum by the Porte; but was eventually returned. In 1854 it was again besieged by the Russians, 30,000 strong, under prince Paskieviitch, and many assaults were made. On 2 June, Mussa Pacha, the brave and skilful commander of the garrison, was killed. On 9 June, the Russians stormed two forts, which were retaken. A grand assault took place on 14 June, under prince Gortschakoff and general Seredec, which was vigorously repelled. On the 15th, the garrison assumed the offensive, crossed the river, defeated the Russians, and destroyed the siege works. The siege was thus raised, and the Russians commenced their retreat as Omar Pacha was drawing near. The garrison was ably assisted by two British officers, Capt. Butler and Lieut. Neithwright, the former of whom, after being wounded, died of exhaustion. They were highly praised by Omar Pacha and lord Hardinge, and lieutenant Nasmyth was made a major. Population, 1900, 12,133; 1910 (est.), 14,375.

SILK. The culture of the silkworm and the manufacture of silk is attributed to the Chinese. Ptolemy called the northern part of China (afterwards known as Cathay) Series ("the people who furnish silk"), from the Chinese name for the silkworm sze or sze, from which is derived the Greek word syr, "silkworm." A Chinese work, called the "Silkworm Classic," states that Si-lung-shi, the principal queen of the Emperor Hwang-te (2603 B.C.), was the first person to rear silkworms, and that the emperor invented robes and garments of silk. The Chinese themselves assign a still higher antiquity to the culture of the silkworms. Strabo wrote into Europe (55 B.C.) by two Persian monks, who brought them from China to Constantinople; and their culture was encouraged by the Roman emperor Justinian. Worm silk was brought from Persia to Greece, 325 B.C. Known at Rome in Tiborius's
SILVERS, 1258

SILVER BOOK.

SILVER exists in most parts of the world, and is found mixed with other ores in various mines in Great Britain. The silver mines of South America were at one time the richest in the world, but the mines discovered in the United States of North America in the last century have surpassed them in richness. Silver was discovered in the State of Nevada in 1858, and subsequently in most of the Pacific States and territories. In 1879, California, Utah, Arizona, and Nevada, the greatest producer being California, next being Nevada. The most celebrated mines in the United States are the Comstock lode, in Las Vegas, Nevada, and the silver mines in Utah, in the territory of Utah), and the Eureka and Rich mond mines, Nevada. The Comstock lode was discovered in 1859, and in 20 years had produced silver and gold valued at $35,000,000 dollars. Then its galleries and shafts were 250 miles in length. Bound this lode grew up Virginia City. A mine was discovered in the district of La Paz in 1600, and it was so rich that the silver of it was often cut out with a chisel. In 1734, one mass of silver weighing 730 lbs. was sent to Spain. From a mine in Norway, a piece of silver was dug, and sent to the Royal Museum at Copenhagen, weighing 50 lbs., and worth 1,680 d. In England silver plate and vessels were first used by Pliny, a Roman bishop, a love and pad- itious metal. They were first used in 1700. Silver knives, spoons, and cups were great luxuries in 1500; see Mirrors. The act of 1816 restricted the use of silver as legal tender to 40s. Estimated annual production of silver throughout the world, 1,777 tons; value, 5,790,000 (1910). Pattinson's process for obtaining silver from lead ore was introduced in 1829. See Silver :

Silk Book (Codex Argenteus), see under Bible.

SILVERS, a British tribe, occupying the counties of Monmouth and Hereford, was subdued by the Roman general Ostorius Scapula, 51; see Shropshire. From this tribe is derived the geological term "Silurian strata," among the lowest of the paleozoic or primary series, from their occurrence in the Silurian and Shropshire counties. Marchand's "Siluria" was published 1790.

In 1838, M. Guerin-Meneville introduced into France a Chinese worm termed the Conchonc, which feeds on the Abutilon glandulosum, a hardy tree of the oak kind. The Cynthia yields a silk-like substance termed Silicula. It was brought to Paris by Fanton in 1838.

SICILY, see Sicyon.

SIMONIANS, a sect named after the founder, Simon Magus, the first heretic, about 41. A sect of social reformers called St. Simonians, after their founder, Claude II. conte de St. Simon (born 1769), sprang up in France in 1819, and attracted considerable attention: the doctrines were advocated in England, particularly by Dr. Prati, who lectured upon them in London, 24 Jan. 1834. St. Simon died in 1825, and his follower, Père Enfantin, died 1 Sept. 1864.

SIMONY (trading in church offices) derives its name from Simon desiring to purchase the gift of the Holy Spirit (Acts viii. 18, 19). It is forbidden by England in the canon law, and by statute 31 Eliz. c. 6, "for avoiding the sin of simony and corruption in presentations, collations, and donations of and to benefices," &c., 1598-9; and by statute of 12 Anne 2, stat. 12 (1713). The rev. James John Merrett had been convicted of simony, 26-29 Nov. 1699, and deprived.

The bishop of Peterborough (Dr. Magee) moved for a committee on the laws relating to simony: appointed 21 April, 1874.

SIMPION, a mountain road, leading from Switzerland into Italy, constructed by Napoleon in 1801-7. It winds up passes, crosses cataracts, and passes by galleries through solid rock, and has eight principal bridges. The number of workmen employed at one time varied from 30,000 to 40,000. The new Simpion tunnel boring operations began 13 Nov. 1898. Herr Brandt, the chief engineer, died, Nov. 1899. The piercing of the tunnel completed 24 Feb. 1907. The new tunnel, which is 21,570 yards, or a little over 12 1/4 miles in length, is the largest in the world. It is almost straight from end to end, from Brigue, in Switzerland, to Iselle, in Italy. The portion finished is one of the two tunnels. The finished tunnel is egg-shaped, about 6 yards high and 43 broad. The distance apart of the two tunnels about 30 yards. The frontier line passes almost exactly in the middle of the tunnel. The average height of the mountain above the tunnel is 3,470 ft., the highest point, situated on the Swiss-Italian frontier, being 7,001 ft. above the level of the tunnel. The original cost of the tunnel was estimated at 2,800,000l., but in view of the enormous difficulties encountered, the price was raised to 3,140,000l. The new tunnel shortens the journey between Calais and Milan most materially. The distance by the Mont Cenis Tunnel is 680 miles, and by the St. Gotthard Tunnel 665 miles, whereas by the Simplon Tunnel it is reduced to 585 miles.

The first train for ordinary passenger service passed through the tunnel, 25 Jan.: formal opening by the king of Italy and the president of the Swiss republic 19 May, 1906.

Second Swiss Tunnel to be a foot wider than the first decided upon 26 Aug. 1907

Electric traction tried and found very successful in Simplon tunnel 19 Aug. 1908

Dispute between the government and builders re. the second tunnel: no settlement arrived at, Dec. 1909.

SINAI. Here the ten commandments were promulgated, 1491 B.C. Exod. xx.

After much investigation and discussion by many persons, Dr. Beke stated that he had discovered the true Sinai, Feb. 1874.

SINALUNGA or ASINALUNGA (near Siena, Italy). Here Garibaldi, when about to enter the papal territory, was seized and conveyed to Alessandria, 23 Sept. 1867; see Italy.

SINDE (N.W. India), was traversed by the Greeks under Alexander, about 326 B.C.; conquered by the Persian Mahometans in the 8th century A.D.; tributary to the Ghaznevide dynasty in the 11th century; conquered by Nadir Shah, 1739; reverted to the empire of Delhi after his death, 1747; after various changes of rulers, Sinde was conquered by the English in 1849.

SINKING FUND. First projected by sir Robert Walpole to redeem the debt to the bank of England, 1737, passed in 1740. The act establishing the sinking fund of Mr. Pitt, devised by Dr. Price, was passed in March, 1780. A then estimated surplus of 900,000l. in the revenue was augmented by new taxes to make up the sum of 1,000,000l., which was to be invariably applied to the reduction of the national debt. The fallacy of the scheme was shown by Dr. Hamilton in 1813. In July, 1825, the sinking fund was limited to one-fourth of the actual surplus of revenue.

A new sinking fund was established by act passed 2 Aug. 1875. The annual charge of the national debt of the year ending 31 March, 1876, was 27,700,000l.; subsequent years to be 28,000,000l. This act was temporarily suspended in 1897: again during the S. African war in 1900 and 1901: restored 1902. 35,000,000l. was taken from the sinking fund by the budget of 1909-10.

SINOPE, an important Greek colony on the Bosphorus, after resisting several attacks was conquered by Mithridates IV., king of Pontus, and made his capital. It was the birthplace of Diogenes, the cynic philosopher. On 30 Nov. 1853, a Turkish fleet of seven frigates, three corvettes, and two smaller vessels, was attacked by a Russian fleet of six sail of the line, two sailing vessels, and three steamers, under admiral Nachimoff, and totally destroyed, except one vessel, which conveyed the tidings to Constantinople. Four thousand lives were lost by fire or drowning, and Osman Pacha, the Turkish admiral, died at Sebastopol of his wounds. In consequence of this act (considered treacherous) the Anglo-French fleet entered the Black Sea, 3 Jan. 1854.

SION COLLEGE AND HOSPITAL, situated on the site of a monastery, which, having fallen to decay, was purchased by William Elsyng, a citizen and mercer, and converted into a college and hospital, called from his name Elyseng Spital. In 1350 he changed it to an Almshouse, which was afterwards granted by Henry VIII. to sir John Williams, master of the jewel-office, who, with sir Roland Hayward, inhabited it till its destruction by fire. In 1623, Dr. Thomas White having beenqueathed 3000l. towards purchasing and building a college and almshouse on the ancient site, his executors erected the present college. SLAVERY IN ENGLAND.

Law respecting the sale of slaves were made by Alfred. The English peasantry were commonly sold for slaves in Saxon and Norman times; children were sold in Bristol market like cattle for exportation. Many were sent to Ireland and to Scotland. Under the Normans the vassals (termed villeins, of and pertaining to the vill) were devisable as chattels during the feudal tenure.

Several statutes were passed in the reign of Richard II., 1377 and 1385; the rebellion of Wat Tyler, 1381, arose partly out of the evils of serfdom.

A statute was enacted by Edward VI. that a runaway, or any one who lived idle for three days, should be brought before two justices of the peace, and marked V. with a hot iron on the breast, and adjudged the slave of him who bought him. He was to be sold and given bread, water, or small drink, and refuse meat, and cause him to work by beating, chaining, or otherwise; if he proved a bad slave, he should himself fourteen days, was to be marked on the forearm or cheek, by a hot iron, with an S, and be his master's slave for ever; second de- sertion, he was lawful to put a ring of iron round his neck, arm, or leg. A child might be put apprentice, and, on running away, become a slave to his master.

Queen Elizabeth ordered her bondmen in the western counties to be made free at easy rates.

Serfdom was finally extinguished in 1600, when tenures in capite, knight's service, &c., were abolished.

A slave named Somerset, brought to England, was, because of his ill state, turned a lift by his master. By the charter of Mr. Granville Sharpe he was restored to health, when his master again claimed him. A suit was the conse- quence, which was established, by decision of the Court of King's Bench, in favour of the plaintiff, that slavery could not exist in Great Britain.

SLAVERY IN UNITED STATES.

Before the war of independence all the states contained slaves. In 1783 the statement in the Massachusetts Bill of Rights, "All men are born free and equal," was declared by the supreme court of Boston to bar slave-holding in that state. Slaves in the United States in 1790, 697,897; in 1810, 1,191,384; in 1820, 2,009,031; in 1830, 3,243,123; in 1840, 4,002,999. In 1830, 4,880,195, free coloured persons; 1900 (latest census), 9,314,39.

Congress passes unanimously the celebrated ordi- nance "for the government of the territory to the N.W. of the Ohio," which contained in one of its pro- visions the word "free," forbidding slavery or involuntary servi- tude in the said state, 13 July, 1857; after 1860, several states of the west, without effect, to be relieved from this provision.

Louisiana purchased, which was considered by many as fatal to the constitution. The enormous increase in the growth of cotton in the southern states (see Cotton) led to a corre- sponding increase in the demand for slave labour. The MISSOURI COMPROMISE (drawn up by Henry Clay, by which slavery was permitted in that state, but was prohibited in all that part of it to the north of 36° 30' N. lat.), carried Feb. 1850.

Conflict between the slave-holders and their oppo- nents, on the question of the annexation of Texas, a main, division to that of Missouri obtained 25 Dec. 1845.

Another compromise effected; California admitted as a free state; but the Fugitive Slave act passed (see Compromise). The Missouri compromise was abrogated by the admission of Nebraska and Kansas as slave- holding states; civil war ensued (see Kansas). 6 Dec., 1854.

SLAVE TRADE. The slave trade from Congon and Angola was begun by the Portuguese in 1482. From then the commerce in human beings continued a tract fifteen degrees on each side of the equator, and forty degrees wide, or of 4,000,000 of square miles; and men and women were bred for sale to the Christian nations, and war carried on to make prisoners for the Christian market. The Abbé Raynal computed (1777) that, at the time of his writing, 9,000,000 of slaves had been consumed by this traffic. The slave trade is now approaching extinction.

In 1818 the slaves taken from Africa amounted to 104,160. In 1857 it was shown by documents, produced by government, that since 1752 upwards of 89,000,000 Africans had been sold from their country, and had either perished on the passage or been sold in the West Indies.

SLAVE TRADE or ENGLAND: begun by Sir John Hawkins. His first expedition, with the object of procuring slaves, was in 1562. He made a voyage to the coast of Africa, and conveying them for sale at the West Indies, took place in Oct. 1562; see Guiana and America.

In June, 1856, the French government gave permission to M. Regnault to convey five negroes from Africa to the island of Mauritius, French colony.

This having led to abuses and consequent troubles (see Slavonia), was eventually given up in Jan., 1857.

A treaty between Great Britain and the United States for the abolition of the slave trade, was signed 7 April, ratified 29 May, 1818.

Sir Samuel Baker headed an expedition to put down slave-traders on the Niger; reports made his expedition successful, 29 June, 1871. He published a history of the expedition, 1872.

A species of slave trade arose in the South Sea coast consequent upon natives being enticed on board certain British vessels and shipped to Queensland, Australia, and the Fijis, and the subject was brought before parliament (see Mawson, 1872). The ship "Cedric" under Dr. James P. Murray, master, Joseph Armstrong, &c.; Mawson for South Seas; Thos. Mawson for the Falkland, New Zealand, and the South Sea Islands, and kidnapped many natives as labourers for the Fullers; while about 20 miles from land, the prisoners rose and attempted to set fire to the ship; were fired on; about 54 killed and 20 wounded were cast into the sea. At Melbourne Murray gave evidence, and Armstrong was committed for trial, 16 Aug.; the master and mate sentenced to death, Nov., 1872.

SLAVONIA or SLAVONIA, a province of Austria, derives its name from the Slavs, a Sarmatian people who replaced the Avars in Pannonia early in the 7th century. In 864 Cyril and Methodius, Greek missionaries, preached here, and adapted the Greek alphabet to the Slavonic language; the letters of which have since been a little altered.

The country, after having been held at times by the Greeks, Turks, and Hungarians, and the cause of singular conflicts, was ceded finally to Hungary in 1697, at the peace of Carlowitz. Deputies from the Slavonian provinces of Austria were entertained at Moscow and St. Petersburg, May, 1867. The Croatian-Slavonian diet, at Agram, was dissolved, May, 1867. It protected against incorporation with Hungary. The Slavonians, particularly the Croats Russian, Polish, Servian, Bohemian, Bulgarian, Wenden, Slovak, and Polabic. For the war, see Turkey, 1875-6.

SMALL HOLDINGS, See Agricultural.

SMALLPOX, variola (diminutive of varus, a pimple), a highly contagious disease, supposed to have been introduced into Europe from the East by the Saracens, the Arabians, and the Germans. In 1532, according to the best authorities, it appeared in Europe, and was carried to America, soon after its discovery, and raged there with great severity, destroying the Indians by thousands. In 1544, there appeared in Europe a disease of smallpox, as did in 1514 and 1712 the emperor of Germany, the dauphin and dauphiness of France, and their son, in 1730 the emperor of Russia, in 1741 the queen of Sweden, and in 1774 Louis XV. of France. It is stated that in the middle of the 18th century two millions perished by it in Russia. In England in 1801, one out of fourteen deaths was caused by smallpox, and in France in 1754 the rate was one in ten. For the attempts to alleviate this scourge, see Inoculation, introduced into England in 1722, and Vaccination, announced by Dr. Jenner in 1798. Smallpox Hospital, established 1749. Smallpox raged in parts of London, and thousands died, 1870-1; a temporary hospital was established at Hampstead (which see). Many parents were fined for opposing the vaccination of their children, 1870-98. In Sept. and Oct. 1892, a great many sheep died of smallpox in the West of England, till successful preventive measures were resorted to. Many cases and deaths, adults and children, in London, 1876-8; and in 1901-2. The Vaccination Act of 1798 gave great importance to the law previously existing. It provides for domiciliary vaccination, the use of glycerinated calf lymph (supplied by the Local Government Board), and exempts the conscientious objector from penalties, see Vaccination.

Smallpox in London, 1893-4, 974 cases, 229 deaths; 1894-5, 1,151 cases, 262 deaths; 1895-6, 1,047 cases, 270 deaths; 1896-7, 1,050 cases, 274 deaths; 1897-8, 1,078 cases, 264 deaths; 1898-9, 1,046 cases, 249 deaths.

In Scotland, 1893-4, 227 cases, 27 deaths; 1894-5, 229 cases, 32 deaths; 1895-6, 231 cases, 34 deaths; 1896-7, 193 cases, 30 deaths; 1897-8, 172 cases, 37 deaths.

In Ireland, 1893-4, 65 cases, 6 deaths; 1894-5, 104 cases, 17 deaths; 1895-6, 96 cases, 13 deaths; 1896-7, 40 cases, 6 deaths; 1897-8, 39 cases, 4 deaths; 1898-9, 42 cases, 6 deaths; 1899-1900, 80 cases, 10 deaths.

In the United States, 1893-4, 80 cases, 2 deaths; 1894-5, 154 cases, 4 deaths; 1895-6, 200 cases, 7 deaths; 1896-7, 110 cases, 3 deaths; 1897-8, 87 cases, 2 deaths; 1898-9, 81 cases, 2 deaths; 1899-1900, 128 cases, 4 deaths.

In the United Kingdom, 1893-4, 213 cases, 8 deaths; 1894-5, 153 cases, 12 deaths; 1895-6, 125 cases, 16 deaths; 1896-7, 103 cases, 20 deaths; 1897-8, 81 cases, 10 deaths; 1898-9, 59 cases, 18 deaths; 1899-1900, 72 cases, 17 deaths; 1900-1, 72 cases, 24 deaths.
The former object having become obsolete, an act was passed in 1837 to divert all the property to the poor kinsmen. In 1868 these were 412 in number. The value of the property was 17,000, a year in 1859. The master of the rolls decided in Dec., 1857, that the funds should be applied to general charitable purposes. On appeal, the decision was in favour of the "poor Smiths." 12 Feb., 1878.

SMITHFIELD, WEST, in the heart of London, was once a favourite walk of the London citizens, outside the city walls. Sir W. Wallace was executed here, 23 Aug., 1303. On 15 June, 1381, Wat Tyler was met by Richard II. at this place, and was stabbed by Walworth the mayor. Many tournaments were also held here. In the reign of Mary (1553-8), many persons perished by fire; and Bartholomew Leggett, an Arian, was burnt here, 18 March, 1612. Bartholomew fair was held here till 1853. This place is mentioned as the site of a cattle market as far back as 1150. The space devoted to this purpose was enlarged from about three acres to four and a half, and in 1834 to six acres and a quarter. These ancient regulations were called the "statutes of Smithfield." In one day there were sometimes assembled 4,000 beasts and 30,000 sheep. The annual amount of the sales was about 7,000,000.

SMOKE NUISANCE. An act was passed in 1853 to abate this nuisance, proceeding from chimney shafts and steamers above London bridge. In 1856 another act, obtained for its further application to steamers below London bridge, and to potteries and glass-houses previously exempted, came into operation, 1 Jan., 1858; enactments have been made for all the kingdom.

The Thompson smoke consuming furnace tried successfully on the Thames, 15 July, 1856. Messrs. Ashworth and Kneen patent a furnace which saves about 45 per cent. of coal and consumes smoke, autumn, 1857.

A bill to abate the nuisance was rejected by the lords, 2 March, 1857.

The London county council authorised to deal with the smoke nuisance by the Public Health Act of 1873.

A smokeless fuel, invented by Herr Koopmann, was exhibited at Messrs. Brewis' premises, King's cross, London, N., 7 April, 1891. The fuel consists of coal dust incorporated with pitch and other mineral substances in smokelesswards.

Smoke abatement committee appointed—the duke of Westminster, sir Frederick Abel, lord Rayleigh, and other scientists—at Manchester, 3 Nov., 1880.

Other committees formed at Glasgow and other places; many reports with recommendations issued (Times) 3 Aug., 1896.

Coal smoke abatement society formed through the exertions of sir W. B. Richmond, 1893; in 1900, 1,176 cases of smoke pollution were considered by the committee.

SMOLENSKO (Russia). The French in most conjurious engagements here were three times repulsed, but ultimately succeeded in entering Smolensk, and found the city, which had been bombarded, burning and partly in ruins, 16, 17 Aug., 1812. Barclay de Tolly, the Russian commander-in-chief, incurred the displeasure of the emperor Alexander because he retreated after the battle, and Kutusov succeeded to the command.

SMUGGLING. The customs duties, instituted to enable the king to afford protection to trade against pirates, afterwards became a branch of public revenue, and gave rise to much smuggling. The Smugglers' act was passed in 1736, and its severity was mitigated in 1781 and 1784. A revision of these statutes took place 1826 and 1835.

SMYRNA, see Seven Churches.

SNEEZING. The custom of saying "God bless you" to the sneezer originated, according to Strabo, among the ancients, who, through an opinion of the danger attending it, after sneezing made a short prayer to the gods, as "Jupiter, help me." The custom is mentioned by Homer, the Jewish rabbis, and others, and is found among savages. Polydore Vergil says it took its rise at the time of the plague, 558, when the infected fell down dead sneezing, though seemingly in good health.

SNOWDON, see Railways, 1809; Wales, 1902.

SNUFF-TAKING took its rise in England from the captures of vast quantities of snuff by sir George Rook's expedition to Vigo in 1702, and the practice soon became general. In 1839 there were imported 1,622,493 lbs. of snuff, of which 196,305 lbs. were entered for home consumption; the duty was 88,267d. per Tobaco. Snuff used to be manufactured from tobacco leaves, but is now prepared from the stalks, &c., not used by the tobacco manufacturers. In 1909, tobacco and snuff, value 4,991,080l., imported.

SOANE MUSEUM, &c. No. 13, Lincoln's-inn-fields, was gradually formed by sir John Soane, the architect, who died in 1837, after making arrangements for its being open to the public by an act passed in 1833. It contains Egyptian and other antiquities, valuable paintings, rare books, &c. 130l. are distributed annually to distressed architects or their widows and children.

One of two sealed closets in the museum was opened 29 Nov. 1838; chiefly private legal documents discovered.

SOAP is a salt, a compound of a fatty acid with an alkali, soda or potash. The Hebrew bethir, translated soap, is merely a general term for cleansing substances. Job ix. 30; Jer. ii. 22. Pliny declares soap to be an invention of the Gauls, though he prefers the German to the Gallic soap. Nausicaa and her attendants, Homer tells us, washed clothes by treading upon them with their feet in pots of water. Odyssey, book vi. The Romans used fuller's earth. Savon, the French word for soap, is ascribed to its having been manufactured at Savona, near Genoa. The manufacture of soap began in London in 1524, before which time it was supplied by Bristol at one penny per pound. The duty upon soap, imposed in 1741, after several reductions from 3d. per pound, was totally repealed in 1853. It then produced, according to the chancellor of the exchequer, Mr. Gladstone, about 1,129,000l. annually. Exported from the United Kingdom: 1868, 391,808 cwt.; 1890, 496,930 cwt.; 1899, 874,214 cwt.; 1905, 1,230,920 cwt.; 1908, 1,205,420 cwt.

"Combine" of soap-makers of the United Kingdom proposed. It was not completed, partly owing to attacks by the press, and was finally dissolved on...

SOFRAOON (N.W. India). The British army, 35,000 strong, under sir Hugh (afterwards viscount) Gough, attacked the Sikh force on the Sutlej, to Feb. 1846. The fund was expended after a dreadful contest, and all their batteries taken; and in attempting the passage of the river by a floating bridge in their rear, the weight of the masses that crowded upon it caused it to break down, and thousands of Sikhs were killed, wounded, or drowned. The British loss was 2,338 men.

SOCIALISM, which proposes the re-organisation of society for the benefit of the community, and advocates the doctrine of the equal right of all to the material conditions of existence, was warmly advocated in London, 21 Jan. 1834, by Robert Owen. He had begun at New Lanark, in Scotland, about 1801, established a settlement at New Har-
SOCIAL SCIENCE.

SOCIAL SCIENCE. The National Association for the Promotion of Social Science originated in a meeting at Lord Brougham's in May, 1857. Its object was to promote improvements in the administration of law, in education, in public health, and in social economy. It held annual meetings, and published its proceedings. Mr. W. Ellis and Mr. John Stuart Mill began to promote the study about 1823. The last congress was held at Birmingham on Sept. 17, 1884.

SOCIETIES.

SOCIETIES, AND INSTITUTIONS, LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC, in Great Britain. Further details of many of these will be found under their respective heads. All in the list below are in London, except otherwise stated. An act was passed in 1819, entitled "for affording facilities for the establishment of institutions for the promotion of literature and science," by grants of land, &c.; and for their regulation. The Royal and London Institutions were exempted from the operation of the act. See Scientific Papers.

SOCIETY ISLANDS, Pacific Ocean, discovered by De Quirós in 1606; re-discovered by Capt. Wallis, 1767, who gave Otaheite or Tahiti the name of King George's Island. Capt. Cook, who visited them in 1769 and 1777, named them Society Islands in honour of the Royal Society; they now belong to France. An insurrection in Raiatea suppressed, 3 Jan., 1897. Destructive hurricane and huge wave; about 1,000 natives killed and islands devastated, 13 Jan., 1903. See Otaheite.

SOCINIANs, persons who accept the opinions of Faustus Socinus (died 1562), and his nephew Lelius (died 1604). Sienese noblemen. They held — 1. That the Eternal Father was the one only God, and that Jesus Christ was no otherwise God than by his superiority to all other creatures; 2. That Christ was not a mediator; 3. That hell will endure for a time, after which the soul and body will be destroyed; 4. That it is unlawful for princes to make war. Hook. The Socinians established a church at Rakow, in Poland, and made proselytes in Transylvania, 1563. They were expelled from Poland in 1659. The Rakovan catechism was published in 1574; see Unitarians.

SOCIOLOGY, a term applied by Comte to the study of mankind in their social relations; it recommends the prevention of national wars by arbitration, and the settlement of the war of classes by boards of conciliation. Schools or departments for the study of sociology are in operation in Edinburgh, Paris, and the United States.

International Institute of Sociology, first congress held at Paris, Sir John Lubbock, president, 1 Oct. 1894 (others since).

Sociological society formed, 1903; the British institute of social service established 1904; 368 members 1910

[Sociological Review is published quarterly.]

SOCOTRA (Dioeceras insula), an island in the Indian ocean, belonging to the imam of Muscat, 120 miles E. of Cape Guardafui, Eastern Africa. In the summer of 1873, it was said to have been given up to the British; formally annexed, Nov. 1886. The island explored by Mr. Theodore Bent and Mr. E. N. Bennett, British resident, reforms needed, slavery existing, Times, 13 March, 1897. Results of a scientific expedition under Mr. W. R. Ogilvie-Grant and others, 7 Dec. 1898-22 Feb. 1899, reported in Nature, 1 June, 1899.

SODIUM, a remarkable metal, first obtained in 1807 by sir Humphry Davy, from soda (which was formerly confounded with potash, but proved to be a distinct substance by Duhame1 in 1756). This metal, like potassium, was obtained by the agency of the electric battery. In consequence of Deville's improved processes, sodium manufactured by Bell Brothers, of Newcastle, at 10s. a pound (1868). It is an important agent in the modern production of aluminium. Common salt (chloride of sodium) is a compound of sodium and chlorine. Mr. H. H. Kastner's (of New York) new process for the enlarged production of sodium, and through sodium of aluminium and magnesium, announced in June, 1887. His works were set up at Oldbury, near Birmingham; he died Oct. 1890. See Alkalies and Aluminium.

SODOM AND GOMORRAH (Palestine), with their inhabitants, were destroyed by fire from heaven, see Gen. xix.

SODOR, said to be derived from Sodor-cys, or south isles (the Frybreds or Hebribes), in distinction from Orkneys, the north isles. The southern or western isles were made an episcopal diocese by Magnus, king of Norway, 1098, and joined to the isle of Man about 1113. See Man.

SOFAS, a West African tribe, see Sierra Leone and Senegal.

SOFFARIDES DYNASTY reigned in Persia, 872-902.

SOFIA, a manufacturing town in Bulgaria; founded by Justinian on the ruins of the ancient Sarkia; became the capital of the new principality. A palace and other buildings were erected, Aug., 1881. It contains 30 mosques and 10 churches.
Destructive thunderstorm with loss of life, 31 May, 1890; see Bulgaria. Pop., 1910 (est.), 100,000.

SOFIAS. Mahometan students devoted to the Koran only. See Turkey, May, 1870.

SOISSIONS (France), capital of the Gallic Successions, was subdued by Julins Cesar, 57 B.C. It was held by Syagrius, after his father Agidius, till his defeat by Clovis, A.D. 496. Several councils have been held at Soisson, (in 744, 1092, 1122.) Its academy was established in 1674. During the Franco-Prussian war, Soissons, after three weeks' investment and four days' bombardment, surrendered to the Germans under the grand-duke of Mecklenburg, 16 Oct., 1870. 99 officers, 4,653 men, 125 guns, &c., were said to be taken.

SOLAR SYSTEM, nearly as now accepted, is said to have been taught by Pythagoras of Samos, about 529 B.C. He placed the sun in the centre, and all the planets moving in elliptic orbits round it—a doctrine superseded by the Ptolemaic system. The system of Pythagoras was revived by Copernicus (1513), is called the Copernican system. Its truth was demonstrated by sir Isaac Newton in 1687. See Planets.

SOLDIERS' DAUGHTERS' HOME was established at Hampstead, London, in Aug., 1857.

THE SOLDIERS AND SAILORS FAMILIES' ASSOCIATION, founded 1885, with the object of aiding the wives and families of men of all branches of the army and navy.

Total receipts during 1899 (inclusive of legacies amounting to 4,200l., 2,550l. net expenditure, 10,000l.
Number of cases dealt with—wives, 2,078, children, 2,138, widows and others, 241, total 7,457.

Nursing Branch, established 1893. 49 nurses were employed in 1899 to attend the wives and families of soldiers and sailors in garrison and seaport towns at a total cost of just over 4,200l.

Clothing Branch, established 1895, for supplying clothing to the wives and families of soldiers and sailors, especially those coming home from India and hot climates. During the year 2,400 garments were received at central office, and 3,300 were distributed, having there been a balance in hand at the beginning of the year.

Officers' Branch, established 1886. Royal homes established at Wimborne, 1899.

SOLEBAY or SOUTHWOLD BAY (Suffolk), where a fierce naval battle was fought between the fleets of England and France on one side, and the Dutch on the other, at the same time commanded by the duke of York, afterwards James II., 25 May, 1672. The English lost four ships, and the Dutch three; but the enemy died, and were pursued to their coasts. The earl of Sandwich was blown up, and thousands were killed and wounded.

SALERNO (in Lombardy), the site of the chief struggle on the great battle of 23 June, 1259, between the allied French and Sardiniain army commanded by their respective sovereigns, and the Austrians under general Hess; the emperor being present. The Austrians, after their defeat at Marcutta, gradually retreated across the Mincio, and, in the meantime, the event of the battle and the advance of Garibaldi on one side, and of prince Napoleon and the Tuscan on the other, caused them to recross the Mincio and take the offensive, on 23 June. The conflict began early on the 24th, and lasted fifteen hours. At first the Austrians had the advantage: but the successful attack of the French on Cavirana and Salerno changed the fortune of the day, and the Austrians, after desperate encounters, were compelled to retreat. The French attribute the victory to the skill and bravery of their emperor and the generals MacMahon and Niel; the Austrians, to the destruction of their reserve by the riddled cannon of their adversaries. The Sardinians maintained a fearful contest of fifteen hours at San Martino, it is said against double their number. Loss of the Austrians, 630 officers, and 19,311 soldiers; of the allies, 8 generals, 936 officers, and 17,305 soldiers killed and wounded. This battle closed the war; preliminaries of peace being signed at Villa France, 12 July. On 24 June, 1870, on the site of the battle, three ossuaries, containing the bones of thousands of the slain, were consecrated in the presence of representatives of Austria, France, and Italy. The Osmary tower inaugurated, and a colossal statue of king Victor-Emmanuel, unveiled by king Humbert, 15 Oct., 1893.

SOLICITOR, see Attorney. By the Supreme Judicature Act, attorneys in future are to be styled solicitors; an act for regulating their examination was passed, 23 July, 1877; amended in 1894; another bill passed, 5 June, 1897. See Trials, Jan. 1901.

SOLICITOR-General, the legal officer next in rank, and deputy to the attorney-general, whom he frequently succeeds.

SOMERS-TOWN.

GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS.-The great Government buildings at 1270.

design by sir William Chambers, was erected for public offices. The Royal Academy of Arts first assembled in the apartments given to the members by the king, 17 Jan. 1771. The Royal Society met here, 1788-1857; and apartments here were also held by the Society of Antiquaries and the Geological Society; all three now at Burlington House. Large suites of government buildings were erected in 1774. The Navy-office, Pipe-office, Victualling and other offices, were removed herein 1788, and various government departments since. The east wing forming the King's College (see King's College) was completed in 1833. By an act passed in 1854, the offices of the duchy of Cornwall were transferred to Finsico.

SOMERS-TOWN, a populous district in St. Pancras parish, N. London; named after earl Somers, whose family acquired the property about 1695. The building began about 1780; and many French refugees settled in it. Much of the district has been occupied by the railway companies.

SOMNATH GATES, the gates of an ancient Hindoo temple at Guzerat, which was destroyed by Mahmoud of Ghuznee in 1025. The priests wished to preserve the idol; but Mahmoud broke it to pieces and found it filled with diamonds, &c. He carried the gates to Ghuznee. When that city was taken by general Nott, 7 Sept. 1796, lord Ellenborough ordered the gates to be restored after an exile of 800 years, and issued a proclamation much censured at the time. The gates are made of sandal wood, and are described and figured in the Archeologia of the Society of Antiquaries, vol. xxx.

SOMOFORM, an anesthetic composed of chloride, bromide, and iodide of ethyl, possesses the property of producing complete insensibility in 30 to 60 seconds. First used 1892.

SONATA (Italian, sound-piece), the highest form of instrumental music, consisting of three or four movements, intending to express diverse kinds of human feelings.

It was developed from the solo, varied dance music (Toccata, 1624, and others). The form fixed by Corelli (1653-1713), was adopted and modified by Scarlatti, the Bachs, Handel, Mozart, Haydn, and culminated in the masterpieces of Beethoven. Five sonatas have been composed by Dussek, M. Clementi, Weber, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Wm. Sterndale Bennett, Chopin, Liszt, and Rubinstein.

SONNET, a poem in fourteen lines, with rhymes adjusted by rules, was invented, it is said, by Guido d'Arezzo, about 1024. The most celebrated sonnets are those by Petrarch (about 1327), Shakespeare (1609), Milton (about 1659), and Wordsworth (1820).

SONNITES, the orthodox Mahometans who now possess the Turkish empire; see Mahometanism.

SONTHALS, a tribe of Northern India, brought to Bengal about 1830, where they prospered, till, partly from the instigation of a fanatic, and partly from the exactions of money-lenders, they were ejected in this reign, in July, 1853, and committed fearful outrages. They were quite subdued early in 1856, and many were removed to the newly-conquered province of Pegu.

SOPHIA ST. (in Constantinople). The first church was dedicated to St. Sophia (holy wisdom) by Constantius II, 309; this having been destroyed, the second, the present edifice, was founded by Justinian, 531, and dedicated 537. Since the Mahometan conquest in 1453, it has been used as an imperial mosque. Its length is 269 feet, and its breadth 213 feet. Six of its pillars are of green jasper, from the temple of Diana, at Ephesus; and of porphyry, from the temple of the Sun, at Rome. Four minarets were added by Selim II., who reigned in 1566. The interior of the dome is beautifully ornamented with mosaic work.

SOPHISTS, teachers of youth in Athens, who were censured by Socrates, and consequently were instrumental in causing his judicial murder, 399 B.C. The controversy against them was carried on by Plato and his disciples.

SORBONNE, a society of ecclesiastics at Paris, founded by Robert de Sorbonne in 1252. The members lived in common, and devoted themselves to study and gratuitous teaching. They soon attained a European reputation as a faculty of theology, their judgment being frequently appealed to, from the 14th to the 17th centuries. The influence of the Sorbonne was declining when the society was broken up in 1789 and the buildings were now devoted to education. The new Sorbonne buildings were opened on 5 Aug. 1889; this is the virtual reconstruction of the university of Paris. Gymnastic education introduced, 1892.

SORCERERS AND MAGICIANS. A law was enacted against their seductions, 33 Hen. VIII. 1541; and another statute equally severe was passed, 5 Eliz. 1563. The pretension to sorcery was made capital, 1 James I. 1603; see Witchcraft.

Soudan or Souliah, the title of the lieutenant-generals of the caliphs, which they bore in their provinces and armies. The officers afterwards made themselves sovereigns. Saladin, general of the forces of Nonredden, king of Damascus, was the first that took upon him this title in Egypt, 1165, after having killed the caliph Caym.

Soudan or Nigritia, a region of Central Africa, partly subjected to the Khedive of Egypt since 1874, capital Khartoum. It was well governed, by col. Gordon, till 1879. See Egypt. For French Soudan, see Soudan.

SOUTH AFRICA

The Cape of Good Hope, Natal, Transvaal, and Orange River Colony were united under the South Africa Union Act of 1909. Executive power was to be exercised by a governor-general, with the help of an executive council and ministers of state limited to ten. Legislation vested in the king, a senate, and a house of assembly. Each province is to be represented in the senate by 10 senators, to hold office for 10 years, half to be nominated by the governor-general in council, and half by the two houses sitting together. Constitution of the senate to be subject to revision after 10 years by parliament. The house of assembly—Cape of Good Hope, 51 members; Natal, 17 members; Transvaal, 30 members; Orange River Colony, 17, popularly elected, subject to revision proportionate to European population, franchise to be the same as that previously existing in the separate colonies. Each province is to have an administrator appointed by the governor-general for five years, and a council elected for three years, each council to have an executive committee of four. A supreme court and other courts of justice are provided for. English and Dutch languages are to be used in all official business. The premiers of Cape Colony, Natal, Transvaal, and Orange River colony and other delegates arrived in London to discuss the South African Constitution bill with the government 13 July, 1910. SOUTH AUSTRALIA was visited by cap. Sturt in 1839, and explored shortly after by cap. Parker and Mr. Kent, the former of whom was killed by the natives. The boundaries of the province were fixed by 4 & 5 Will. IV, c. 95 (1834); and it was proclaimed 20 Dec. by lord Hindmarsh, the first governor. It was colonised according to Mr. E. Gibbon Wakefield's scheme, which was carried out by the South Australian Colonisation Association. The colony for several years underwent severe trials through the great influx of emigrants, land-jobbing, building speculations, &c., which produced almost universal bankruptcy in 1833. In five years after, by the energy and liberality of Sir George Grey, the colonists had overcome their difficulties, and the prosperity of the colony appeared fully established. In 1842 the highly productive Barra Barra copper mines were discovered, and large fortunes were suddenly realised; but in 1851 the discovery of gold in New South Wales and Victoria almost paralysed this province by drawing off a large part of the labouring population. Very little gold was found in South Australia; but a reaction took place in favour of the copper mines and agriculture, &c. Before the discovery of gold, little trade existed between Adelaide and Sydney; but in 1852 was the discovery of gold in New South Wales and Victoria, the produce of the mines was brought to Adelaide, and thence forwarded to Victoria, for distribution.

SOUTHERN CONTINENT. The Southern Ocean was first traversed by Magellan in 1520; and explored by Wallis and Carteret in 1766; and by Cook in 1772 and 1774. Of the southern continent little more is known than that it is ice-bound, and contains active volcanoes. It was discovered in the first instance by capt. John Bissee, on 27 Feb. 1831, in lat. 65° 57' S., long. 47° 20' E., extending east and west 200 miles,—this he named Enderby Land, after the gentleman who had equipped the voyage. Capt. Bissee also discovered Graham's Land on 15 Feb. 1832, situated in lat. 67° 1' S., long. 71° 48' W. The Messrs. Enderby equipped three other expeditions in search of the southern continent, the last (in connection with some other gentleman) in 1838, when capt. Balleny had command, who, on 9 Feb. 1839, was launched at 65° 57', long. 119° 10' E. In 1840, a French expedition, under the command of admiral D'Urville, and an American expedition, under the command of commodore Wilkes, greatly added to our knowledge in respect to the existence of a southern continent, and this was again increased by the expedition which sailed from England in 1839, under the command of capt. sir James Clark Ross, who discovered Victoria Land in 1841, and subsequently penetrated as far south as 78° 11'. Antarctic expedition proposed by the Argentine republic and the Genoese, Sept. 1881; the objects collected. It was in the expedition under bent, Booe, 1881-2. See Antarctic Pole.

SOUTHPORT, Lancashire, a watering place, founded in 1792 on a sandy waste, has rapidly progressed, now possessing an esplanade 3 miles long and many fine buildings. It was made a municipal borough in 1807. Population, 1861, 18,085; 1891, (est.), 34,069.

South-Sea Bubble commenced with the establishment of the South-Sea company in 1717, which at first unwisely and afterwards dishonestly managed. It exploded in 1720, ruining thousands of families; and the directors' estates, to the value of 2,014,000/., were seized in 1721 and sold. Mr. Knight, the cashier, absconded with 100,000/.; but he compounded the fraud for 10,000/., and returned to England in 1743. Almost all the wealthy persons in the kingdom had become speculators; the artifices of the directors having raised the shares, originally 100/., to the price of 1000/.

A parliamentary inquiry took place in Nov. 1720, and Aislabie, chancellor of the exchequer, and several members of parliament were expelled the house in 1721; see Lady's Bubble.

SOUTHWARK (S. London) was governed by its own bailiffs till 1537. The city, however, found great inconvenience from the number of malfeactors who escaped thither, in consequence of the high and extravagant charges of the city magistrates; and a grant was made of Southwark to the city of London by the crown, for a small annuity. In Edward VI.'s reign it was formed into a city, and was named Bridge Ward Without, 1550.—Southwark bridge was designed by John Rennie, and built by a company, 1815-19, at an expense of 800,000/.. It consists of three great cast-iron arches, resting on massive stone piers and abutments; the distance between the abutments is 708 feet; the centre arch is 290 feet span, the two others 210 feet each; and the total weight of iron 538 tons. The bridge was freed from toll on 8 Nov. 1804, the company receiving a contribution from the city. An act for the payment of dividends to shareholders was passed in 1872.—Southwark park was opened, 16 June, 1896. The Roman Catholic diocese of Southwark formed, 1840. By the Seals act (1835), Southwark sends three members to parliament. Municipal borough, by London Government act, 1899 (10 aldermen, 40 councillors).
the united parishes of St. Margaret and St. Mary Magdalen, and became the parish church as St. Savior's. The numerous and many changes have been made: Mr. G. Twight repaired the tower, the lady chapel, and the choir, 1813 et seq. The roof of the nave was removed in 1814, and in 1839 re-plastered. The present of Wales laid the memorial stone of a new nave, 24 July, 1839; the church re-opened after restoration at a total cost of 95,000, the prince of Wales, the archbishop of Canterbury and others present, 16 Feb. 1839; memorial windows to the prince consort and others unveiled, new eoc and bells 3 May, 1883. Excavations by the British school reveal the discovery of the temple of Artemis Orthia, believed to date from the eighth century, May, 1868. "SPASMODIC SCHOOL" of poetry, a name sarcastically given to Philip James Bailey ("Festus," 1839). Alex. Smith, Sydney Dobell (died in Aug. 1874), and others (precursors of Morris, Alcman Winburne, and Rosetti, sarcastically termed the "Redsh school") ridiculed by professor Aytoun in his "Firmilian," published 1851.

SPARKS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS. Peter de Montfort, afterwards killed at the battle of Evesham, was the first speaker, 45 Hen. III., 1260; sir Thos. Hungerford is said to have been the first named "Speaker," 1372; but sir Peter de la Mare is supposed to have been the first regular speaker, 50 Edw. III., 1376. The king refused his assent to the choice of sir Edward Sizewell, as speaker, 6 March, 1678; and sergeant William Gregory was chosen in his room. Sir John Trevor was expelled the chair and the house for taking a gratuity after the act for the benefit of orphans had passed, 12 March, 1693-5; a deputy speaker was taking appointed Aug. 1853.

SPEAKER'S COMMENTARY, a name given to an edition of the Bible with a revised text and a commentary by several bishops and other theologians, edited by F. C. Cook. The undertaking originated, it is said, chiefly with Mr. John Evelyn Denison, speaker of the house of commons, with the view of supplying the imperfect translations of Dr. Colenso, and was announced in Nov. 1863. The publication, begun in 1871, was completed in 1881. The Apocrypha published in 1888.
SPELLING-TRUMPET, used by ships at sea. One is said to have been used by Alexander, 335 B.C. One was constructed from Kircher's description by Saland, 1652; philosophically explained and brought into notice by Morland, 1670.

SPECIAL COMMISION ACT, passed 13 Aug. 1883. A commission constituted to try certain charges and allegations against certain members of parliament. See Parnellites and Ireland, 1888.

SPECIAL CONSTABLES are sworn in for the preservation of the public peace when disturbances arise feared. Their appointment were amended in 1831 and 1835. Louis Napoleon, afterwards emperor, aided as a special constable in London, 10 April, 1848; see Chartists and London, Dec. 1867. Instructions for their organisation were issued, 13 Jan. 1868. On 28 Jan. 52,074 in the metropolis, and 113,674 in the United Kingdom, had been sworn in. Their services were required, and they were honourably dismissed by an order issued 31 March, 1868.

Special constables were sworn in relation to the disturbances in Trafalgar-square (see Riot) 17 Nov. et seq.; 1,500 held Trafalgar-square, Sunday, 26 Nov. 1827; served till 25 Jan. 1828, and thanked.

SPECIES. Much controversy among naturalists arose in consequence of the publication, in 1859, of Mr. Charles Darwin's "Origin of Species," in which he suggests that all the various species of animals were not created at one time, but have been gradually developed by what he terms "natural selection," and the struggle for life in which the strong overcome the weak.

"This preservation of favourable individual differences and destruction of those which are injurious, I have called natural selection, or the survival of the fittest."—Darwin.

The idea was put forth by Lamarck in his "Philosophic Zoologie," 1809. Similar views appear in the "Vestiges of Creation," 1844. Mr. Darwin says that he infers "from analogy that probably all the organic beings which have ever lived on the earth have descended from some one primordial form, into which life was first breathed by the Creator." See Development and Evolution.

Charles Darwin was born 12 Feb. 1809, and died 19 April, 1882.

Statue of Darwin by J. E. Boehm, paid for by universal subscription, received at the British Museum of Natural History by the prince of Wales, and uncovered by professor Huxley, 4 June, 1882.

His Life and Letters, edited by his son Francis Darwin, published Nov. 1887.

Professor G. J. Romane's elaborate work, "Darwin and after Darwin," was published in 1892.

SPECIFIC GRAVITIES. See under Weights.

SPECTACLES, unknown to the ancients, are generally supposed to have been invented by Alexander de Spina, a monk of Florence, in Italy, about 1285. Apart, they were invented by Roger Bacon, about 1280. Manni attributes them to Salvino, who died 1317. On his tomb at Florence is the inscription, "Qui giace Salvino degli Armatti, inventore degli ocelliali: Dio gli perdoni le peccati." (Here lies Salvino degli Armatti, inventor of spectacles: May God pardon his sins).

SPECTATOR. The first number of this periodical appeared on 1 March, 1711; the last was No. 635, 20 Dec. 1714. The papers by Addison have one of the letters c 1 1 0 at the end.

The most of the other papers are by sir Richard Steele, a few by Hughes, Budgell, Eusden, Miss Sheppard, and others.—The Spectator newspaper (philosophical, whig), begun 5 July, 1712. Mr. Richard Holt Hutton, an able scholar, was editor from 1861 for 40 years; he died 9 Sept. 1897. Present editor, Mr. J. St. Loe Strachey, 1910.

SPECTRUM, the term given to the image of the sun or any other luminous body formed on a wall or screen, by a beam of light received through a small hole or slit, and refracted by a prism. The colours thus produced are red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet. The phenomena were first explained by Newton, whose "Optics" was published in 1704. Several of these colours are considered to be compounds of three primary ones:—by Mayer (1775), red, yellow, and blue;—by Dr. Thomas Young (1801), red, green, and violet;—by Prof. Clerk Maxwell (1860), red, green, and blue. As the colour of a flame varies according to the substance producing it, so the spectrum varies. This led to the invention of a method of chemical analysis by professors Bunsen and Kirchhoff (1860), by which they discovered two new metals, and drew conclusions as to the nature of the atmosphere of the sun and stars, and of the light of the nebulae, by comparing the spectrum with that produced by flames into which the spectrum varies. For the invisible rays of the spectrum, see Coblence, Fluoriscence, Fluorescent, Luminoir, and König's Rays.

Fraunhofer's Lines. In 1862 Dr. Wollaston observed several dark lines in the solar spectrum; in 1853 Joseph Fraunhofer noticed red lines in the map of them, giving 560 lines or dark bands. By the researches of Brewster and others the number observed is now above 2000.

Mr. Fox Talbot observed the orange line of strontium in the spectrum in 1826; and Sir David Brewster observed other lines, 1832-3. In 1882-3, Mr. William Huggins analysed the light of the fixed stars and of the nebulae; and in 1882 Mr. Bruce Jones, by means of the spectroscope, detected the presence of minute quantities of metals in the living body, introduced only a few minutes previously.

Spectroscopic society in Italy published a journal early in 1872.

Oxygen detected in the solar spectrum by Mr. Draper.

The experiments of professor Dewar and others have shown that the spectrum of various gases are affected by temperature and pressure, 1838-9.

SPIRITUAL COMBATTANTS.

SPIRIT-MOTOR. Mr. Yarrow explained to the Institute of Naval Architects his method of employing vaporised spirit instead of steam in the propulsion of steam launches, thus dispensing with the use of a boiler, &c. In March, 1888, Petroleum was used as fuel in some railway locomotives, and petrol as the generating power for driving motors.

SPIRITS, see Distillation. In all nations spirituous liquors have been considered as a proper subject of heavy taxation for the support of the state; the duty imposed on spirits in 1740 led to much smuggling, which see; see Alcohol, Brandy, Rum, Methylated Spirits, Whisky, &c.

In 1890 England made about ten millions of gallons of spirits, Scotland about seven millions of gallons, and Ireland about nine millions of gallons.

In 1883 the number of gallons on which duty was paid for home consumption was 23,097,996. The total amount paid was £5,017,815, of which £3,758,897 were paid by Ireland, 1,352,307 by Scotland, and 1,006,792 by England.

The total duty on home consumption paid in 1863 was £9,200,452.

In 1850, 3,105,144, were paid as duty on 27,979,914 gallons.

In 1855, methylated spirits of wine, for use in the arts and sciences, were made duty-free.

In 1853, 29,619,840 gallons of spirits were distilled in the United Kingdom. The uniform duty of 8s. per gallon was paid on 24,524,063 gallons for home consumption, producing £9,721,761. In the year 1855-6 the tax produced about £1,500,000, being the largest sum theretofore raised by indirect taxation.

In 1871-2, 16,708,341 (customs and excise); 1872-3, 21,055,661; 1873-4, 20,675,928; 1874-5, 18,145,957; 1875-6, 17,312,594; 1876-7, 18,406,597; 1877-8, 19,356,421; 1878-9, 20,756,490; 1879-80, 21,758,309; 1880-1, 22,583,871; 1881-2, 22,946,593.

In 1840 an act was passed repealing wholly or in part 20 previous acts, and embodying all regulations for the guidance of manufacturers and dealers in spirits.

Proof spirits distilled in the United Kingdom in 1873, 36,476,648 gallons; 1874, 45,157,253; 1890, 57,228,031; 1895, 45,810,045; 1896, 40,907,021; 1897, 49,019,149; 1898, 49,133,345.

British-made spirits exported from the United Kingdom: 1876, 1,982,356 gallons; 1882, 2,000,163; 1883, 2,708,001; 1889, 2,638,628; 1894, 3,068,680; 1898, 5,219,752; 1900, 6,005,242; 1904, 6,569,807; 1908, 6,735,741.

Additional duty of 6d. per gallon on spirits imported, July 1840; increase of duty to 1s. per gallon.

Eight distilleries at work in England, 13 in Scotland, and 2 in Ireland, in the year ended 30 Sept. 1894.

SPIRITS ACT (43 & 44 Viet. c. 24), passed 26 Aug. 1890.

SPIRITUAL COMBATTANTS (Dukhoborts). A Russian communist religious sect formed by a quaker missionary near the end of the last century, now settled in the Caucasus, about 3,000 members. Its leading preacher, the refusal of all military service, so important in a country like Russia, has led to its repression and severe punishment. The sect also opposes legal tribunals, oaths, &c. Peter Vergunin, their energetic leader, was exiled to Siberia, 1894-5; count Leo Tolstoi gave a description of the sect and its sufferings, Times, 1890, 1891. Continued present to Oct. 1897. 1,102 exiles land at Larnaka, Cyprus, under British protection, 30 Aug. 1897; the climate being un-natural about 7,000 leave for Manitoba, Canada, 1888-9; count Tolstoi gives 5,000 dols. for their relief, Dec., 1897; deeming it wrong to keep animals in servitude, they turn their horses, cows, SPIRITUALISM.

Their petition for land to live in under no authority than that of God, refused by the British Columbia Government, 22 Oct. 1902; they leave their homes to christianize the world, about 28 Oct.; great suffering and distress; their march stopped at Minnedosa by mounted police; all sent back by special trains to their homes, 9-12 Nov. 1902.

Large number of fanaticcl Dutchers, settled in the Saskatchewan district, turned their cattle and horses loose, and began a fresh march to meet the Messiah, reported 27 Sept. 1904. They were turned back by the police.

SPIRITUALISM or SPIRIT-RAPPING.

Spiritual manifestations (so called) began, it is said, in America about 1838, and attracted attention in this country about 1851, in the shape of rapping, table-turning, &c. Many inquisitive or credulous persons visited the Daniel Douglas Home or House of God, and Mr. Forster, noted "spiritual mediumists." Mr. Home, secretary of the Spiritual Atheneum, Sloane-street, Chelsea, published, in 1893, "Incidents of my Life," in which he states that the only benefit he derived from the "gift" was the convincing many unbelievers of the certainty of a life to come; see "Quarterly Journal of Science," July and Oct. 1891; "Spirits Magazine," Jan. 1896; the "Spiritualist," 9 Nov. 1899. The London Dialectical society published a report on spiritualism in Nov. 1871. Mr. (afterwards sir) Wm. Crookes, in 1871, investigated the phenomena, and ascribed them to "psychic force" ("Quarterly Journal of Science," July and Oct. 1871). Mr. Kate Fox, said to be the carrier of American spiritualism (about 1852), was married to Mr. H. J. Deeneke, in London, Dec. 1872. London Spiritualist Alliance founded, 1884, Incorporated 1890; official organ, Light, weekly, 2d., started in 1881. The first president of the Alliance and editor of Light was Mr. W. Stainton-Moore; president and editor (1910), Mr. E. Dawson Rogers. In connection with the Alliance is an extensive library of works on psychic science. The Spiritualists' National Union, founded in 1890 as the Spiritualists' National Federation, incorporated 1902. One hundred and fifty societies are represented in this union; official organ, The Two Worlds, weekly, 2d; there are one hundred and seventy other societies in the United Kingdom. The Chili of London Spiritualists, founded 1865, consists of representatives of twenty societies. The British Spiritualists' Lyceum Union consists of two hundred lyceums (children's Sunday schools); official organ, The Lyceum Banner, monthly, 1d.

The imposts of the Davenport brothers, exposed in 1865. Spiritualism discussed by a section of the British Association at Glasgow (supported by Messrs. Wm. Crookes, A. Russell Wallace, and other eminent men), without result, 12 Sept. 1876.

SPIRALFIELDS (East London), so named from the priory of St. Mary Spittle, founded by Walter Brune and his wife Rosine, 1497; dissolved 1534. Here the French protestant refugees, after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, settled and established the silk manufacture in 1685.

SPITHEAD, a roadstead near the Spit, a sandbank between Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight. See Naval Reviews, under Navy of England. Here in 1757, the sailors of the channel fleet mutinied for higher pay.

SPITZBERGEN, an archipelago in the Arctic ocean, discovered in 1553 by sir Hugh Wil-} loquently, who called it Greenland, supposing it to be a part of the western continent. In 1595 it was visited by Barents and Cornelius, two Dutchmen, who pretended to be the original discoverers, and called it Spitzbergen, or sharp mountains, from the many sharp pointed and rocky mountains with which it abounds; see Phillips.

A scientific expedition to Spitzbergen organized by Herr Stanzlig of Stuttgart, left Bremen about 29 July; returned 28 Aug. 1851. An expedition under Mr. Martin Conway, Mr. Trevor-Batty, and others arrived at Advent Bay, 25 June; crosses from west to east, reaching Angivik bay, 15 July; 1852; Hornsund Fjord ascended, 17 Aug.; arrives at Hammerfest, 18 Aug. 1852; another expedition, June, 1897. Russian-Swedish scientific expedition arrived Horn Sound, reported . . . . 2 Aug. 1899.

SPITZCAP, see Mosjouk.

SPITZER, COLLECTION, formed by Frederick Spitzer, a Jew, consisted chiefly of articles of curios connected with the Middle Ages and Renaissance with some antiques but no paintings. It included metal work, faience, and majolica ware, arms and jewellery. He built an hotel at Paris to receive them, and died in 1890, aged about 75. The collection, valued at about 500,000£, was sold for about 400,000£, 15 April—17 June, 1893.

SPONGE, the name applied to a class of animals, Porifera, intermediate between the protozoa and echinodermata. Sponges are in general composed of an internal supporting framework of horny fibres interlaced with calcareous or siliceous spines (spicules) covered with a soft gelatinous substance, called sarcod. Their food consists chiefly of microscopic organisms contained in the water which constantly circulates through the minute pores of the sponge, and finds its outlet by the larger apical openings. Sponges exist in a variety of forms; one is the beautiful Venus's flower-basket. Several species of sponges are used for economic purposes; two species are chiefly brought from the Levant, and one of a corner kind from the West Indies and Florida, artificially cultivated in the Adriatic by planting cuttings in waters favourable to their growth. A considerable trade is carried on in sponges, about 600 boats and some 5,000 men being employed in the Levant, and a similar number in the W. Indian trade, to the annual value respectively of 100,000£ and 75,000£.

SPONTANEOUS GENERATION.

The origin of the germs of infusionary animals developed during putrefaction, &c., has been warmly debated by naturalists. Spallanzani (about 1766), and especially M. Pasteur and others, assert that these germs are really endowed with organic principles, formed in the atmosphere. Needham (about 1747), and especially M. Pouchet and his friends in our day, assert that these germs are spontaneously formed out of organic molecules.—Pouchet's "Heterogonia" appeared in 1859. Bastian's "Beginnings of Life," 1872. The researches of professor Tynndall, supporting Pouchet, and opposing Bastian, were published 1875-8. The late professor Huxley, in his presidential address to the British Association at Liverpool, 1870, affirmed that the doctrine of biogenesis (that life proceeds only from life) "was victorious all along the line. "Spontaneous generation" falsly termed "generatio equiplrophica," or "generatio per accidens" is no longer regarded as a practical proposition, but is still further disproved by the fabulous microscopic investigations of Dr. W. H. Balling, 1875-8. He found germs to stand a much greater heat than perfect organisms.
STAMP-DUTIES.

Experiments, carried out by Mr. J. Butler Burks in the Cavendish laboratory, Cambridge, on the action of radium chloride and radium bromide upon a gelatine medium commonly used for bacteriological cultures, result in the production of microscopical growths, which, in Mr. Burks's opinion, after careful study, were highly characteristic of the substance ; hence he applied the name of radieres (whence xer), announced in Nature, May, 1905.

M. Raphael Dubois, in a lecture at Lyons university, Nov. 19, 1904, referring to experiments he had made of a similar kind, calls the growths radieres. M. Dubois states (1904) that the same results are obtainable by non-radiumous chloride of barium. Experiments with pure barium salts on gelatin medium by Prof. Bridge, see Nature, Oct. and Nov. 1904.

SPORTING NEWSPAPERS: Bell's Life in London, began 1820; The Field, 1833; Sporting Life, 16 March, 1859; Sporting Times, 1862; Sportsman, Aug. 1865; Sporting Chronicle, 1871; Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News, 1874; Athletic News, 1875; Bower's Weekly, 1899. Several London newspapers also contain sporting news.

SPORTS. The first "Book of Sports," under the title of "The King's Majestic's Declaration to his Subjects concerning Lawful Sports to be used on Sundays after evening prayers, was published by king James I., 1618. The second "Book of Sports," with a ratification by his majesty Charles I., is dated 18 Oct. 1653. On the publication of the first "Book of Sports," there arose a long and violent controversy among English divines on certain points; see Sabbatarians, Sunday, &c. The book was ordered to be burnt by the hangman, and the sports every imposed by the parliament. The "Sporting League" was established to maintain British sports in opposition to the Anti-Gambling league, first meeting in London, earl of Coventry in the chair, 19 Dec. 1891.

SPRINGFIELD (Missouri), near which was fought the famous battle of Wilson's Creek, in which the federals had the advantage over the confederates, but lost their brave general, Nathaniel Lyon, 10 Aug. 1861.

SPURS. Anciently the difference between the knight and esquire was that the knight wore gilt spurs (spues auratos), and the esquire silver ones. Two spurs have been in use at the time of the Conquest; one called a pryeck, having only a single point, the other a number of points of considerable size. Spurs nearly of the present kind came into use about 1500; see Plating.

SPURS, BATTLE OF. Henry VIII. of England, the emperor Maximilian, and the Swiss, in 1513, entered into an offensive alliance against France. Henry VIII. landed at Calais in the month of July, and soon formed an army of 30,000 men. He was joined by the emperor with a good corps of horse and some foot, the emperor as a mercenary to the king of England, who allowed him a hundred ducats a day for his table. They invested Tournay with an army of 50,000 men; and the duc de Longueville, marching to its relief, was signally defeated on the 19th of August, at Guinegate. This battle was popularly called the battle of Spurs, because the French used their spurs more than their swords. The English king fled to Tournay, which submitted in a few days. Henr. viii. See Courtrai, for another "battle of spurs."

STABAT MATER, a Latin hymn, by Jacob- pone, 14th century, sung during Passion week in Catholic churches. Rossini's music to this hymn (1842) is often performed.

STADE DUES. At a castle near the town of Stade, in Hanover, certain dues on goods were charged by the Hanoverian government. The British government settled these dues in 1814. They were resisted by the Americans in 1855, and were abolished in June, 1861. Great Britain paid 100,000 l. as her share of the compensation (1,000,000 l.).

STADTHOLDER, see Holland.

STAFFA, a small uninhabited island in the Hebrides, 6 miles distant from Iona, celebrated for its caves and the columnar basalt cliffs. Here is the famous Fingal's Cave, the sides of which are formed of basaltic columns, while from the roof, 67 feet in height, hang clusters of short columns, whitened with calcareous stalactite. The cave is 227 ft. in length and 42 ft. wide at the entrance.

STAFF COLLEGE (Sandhurst), for providing an education to qualify military officers for the duties of the staff. The foundation stone was laid by the duke of Cambridge on 14 Dec. 1835.

STAFFORD, Staffordshire, a municipal and parliamentary borough, returning, since 1885, one M.P. A castle was erected here by Ethelberga, countess of Mercia, 913: taken by the parliamentary forces in 1643, it was demolished; a new castle, not completed, built by Sir G. Jerningham, 1810-15. A charter was granted by king John, 1207, and the grammar-school was rebuilt and endowed by Edward VI., 1550. The two old churches of St. Mary and St. Chad are of interest. Isaac Walton was baptised in the former. Principal industries are boot and shoe manufacture and brewing. Population, 1881, 19,977; 1901, 20,844; 1911(est.), 21,604. Fire at the workhouse infirmary, 7 deaths, 16 May, 1901.

STAGE COACHES, so called from the stages or inn at which the coaches stopped to refresh and change horses. Bailey. The stage-coach duty act passed in 1785. These coaches were made subject to salutary provisions for the safety of passengers, in 1810; to mileage duties, 1815. The acts were consolidated in 1832, and amended in 1833 and 1842. See Mail Coaches, &c.

STAGYRTE, properly Stagirite, see Aristotle.

STAMFORD BRIDGE (York). In 1066 Tosti, brother of Harold II., rebelled against his brother, and joined the invading army of Harold Hardrada, king of Norway. They defeated the northern earls and took York, but were defeated at Stamford Bridge by Harold, 25 Sept., and were both slain. The loss by this victory no doubt led to his defeat at Hastings, 14 Oct. following. The claim of Mr. William Grey for the earldom of Stamford, was granted by the house of Lords, 3 May, 1832.

STAMP-DUTIES. By 22 & 23 Charles II. (1670-1) duties were imposed on certain legal documents. In 1694 a duty was imposed upon paper, vellum, and parchment. The stamp-duty on newspapers was commenced in 1711, and every year added to the list of articles upon which stamp-duty was made payable.

Stamp act, which ordered a stamp to be affixed to all legal documents, in the colonies, and thereby to assist the revenue of Great Britain, was passed 22 March, 1765. It excited great opposition in STANDARD.

N. America, with rioting, and consequently was repealed, 21 Feb. 1766. The resistance of the colonists to taxation, without representation in parliament, led to the American war, 1775-83.
Stamp duties in Ireland commenced in 1774.
Stamp duties on newspapers were imposed in 1732, a revenue of 3,126,532.

Many alterations made in 1853 and 1857. In June, 1855, the stamp duty on newspapers as such was totally abolished; the stamp on them being henceforth for postal purposes.
In July and Aug., 1854, 12,115,000 newspaper stamps were issued; in the same months, 1855, only 6,370,000.

Drafts on bankers to be stamped in 1774.

Additional stamp duties were enacted in 1856 (on leases, bills of exchange, and dock warrants), extracts from registers of births, &c.; in 1861 (on leases, licences to house-agents, &c.).
Stamp duties reduced in 1864, 1865.
All fees payable in the superior courts of law, after 31 Dec. 1865, are to be collected by stamps, by an act passed in June, 1865. Also in Public Record Office.

By the Stamp acts, 10 Aug. 1857, newspaper stamps were abolished after 1 Oct. 1870.
New stamp duties imposed; came into effect 1 Jan. 1871.

Stamp duties imposed on foreign or colonial share certificates, bonds, &c., by Customs act, 1835.
A new consolidating act relating to stamps passed 21 July, 1871.

Certain exemptions made by the Finance act, 31 July, 1874.
The changes are noticed in the Finance act passed annually.

STANDARD.

STANDARD, for gold and silver in England as fixed by law, 1830. Standard gold is 22 parts out of 24 of pure gold, the other two parts or carats being silver or copper. The standard of silver is 11 oz. 2 dwts. of fine silver alloyed with 18 dwts. of copper, or 37 parts out of 40 pure silver, and three parts copper. In 1300 these 12 oz. of silver were coined into 20 shillings; in 1412 they were coined into 22 shillings and 52d.; in 1552 into 45 shillings. In 1555 Henry VIII. coined 6 oz. of silver and 6 oz. of alloy into 48 shillings; and the next year he coined 4 oz. of silver and 8 oz. of alloy into the same sum. Elizabeth, in 1560, restored the old standard in 60 shillings; and in 1601 in 62 shillings. The average proportions of silver to gold at the royal mint are 154 to 1. The standard of plate and silver money was affirmed, 6 Geo. I. 1719 et seq.; see Gold, Goldsmiths, Silver, Coinage, and Currency.

"STANDARD," td. conservative newspaper; begun, morning, 1827; evening, 29 June, 1857 (the latter amalgamated with the St. James’s Gazette, with the title of The Evening Standard and St. James’s Gazette, 1853).

STANDARD, BATTLE OF THE, see Northallerton.

STANDARD MEASURES. In the reign of Edgar a law was made to prevent frauds arising from the diversity of measures, and for the establishment of a legal standard measure to be used in every part of his dominions. The standard vessels made by order of the king were deposited in the city of Winchester, and hence originated the well-known term of Winchester measure of the time of Henry VII. (1487). The bushel so made is still preserved in the museum of that city. Henry I. also, to prevent frauds in the measurement of cloth, ordered a standard yard of the length of his own arm to be made and deposited at Winchester, with the standard measures of king Edgar. The Guildhall contains the standard measures of succeeding sovereigns (George). The standard weights and measures were settled by parliament in 1824. The pound troy was to be 5760 grains, and the pound avoirdupois 7000 grains. The "standard yard of 1760," in the custody of the clerk of the house of commons, was declared to be the Imperial Standard yard and the unit of measures of extension. This standard having disappeared (it was supposed to have been destroyed by the fire in 1834), a new commission was appointed to reconstruct it, and researches for this purpose, in conformity with the act, which directed the comparison of the standard with a pendulum vibrating seconds of time in the latitude of London, were begun by Francis Baily (died in 1844), continued by the Rev. R. Sheepshanks till his death in 1855, and completed by G. B. Airy, astronomer royal. In 1855 was passed "an act for legalising and preserving the lost standards of weights and measures." The parliamentary copies of the standard pound and yard are deposited at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich. The standard weights and measures act was passed Aug. 1866. The Standard Commission published reports, 1860 et seq.

The old standard yard and other measures and weights, supposed to have been burnt at the tire of the parliament houses in 1834, were discovered by Mr. Bull’s agents in the Journal Office, where they had been deposited and let unnoticed, July, 1851. The rules of standards of the reign of Henry VII. and Elizabeth are still in existence.

STANDARDS, see Banners, Flags, &c. The practice in the army of using a cross on standards and shields is due to the asserted miraculous appearance of a cross to Constantine, previously to his battle with Maxentius; Eusebius says that he received this statement from the emperor himself, 312. The standard was named in honor of the celebrated French standard, see Avretillemont. STANDARD OF MAHOMET; on this ensign no infidel dared look. Christians have been massacred by the Turkish populace for looking on it.—The British Imperial Standard was first hoisted on the Tower of London, and on Bedford Tower, Dublin, and displayed by the Foot Guards, on the union of the kingdoms, 1 Jan. 1801.

STANFORD COURT, Worcestershire, the ancient mansion of sir Francis Wrinington, burnt Dec. 1822; valuable portraits, books, MSS. &c., destroyed.

STANHOPE ADMINISTRATION was formed by James (afterwards earl) Stanhope and the earl of Sunderland, 15 April, 1717. Stanhope was premier and chancellor of the exchequer; lord (afterwards earl) Cowper, lord chancellor; earl of Sunderland and Joseph Addison, secretaries of state, &c. In March, 1718, Addison resigned, and the earl of Sunderland became premier.

STANNARY COURTS of Devon and Cornwall for the administration of justice among the tin miners, whose privileges were confirmed by 33 Edw. I. 1305. They were regulated by parliament in 1641, and at many times since. A "Stan-neries act" was passed in 1861; another act in 1887. The Statute's Court abduction act, passed 14 Aug. 1890, came into force 1 Jan. 1897.

STAPE (literally that which is fixed). The chief English staple commodities which were traded in by privileged merchants, and on which customs were levied, were wool, skins, leather, tin, lead and sometimes cloth, butter, and cheese; certain duties were appointed for the collection of the duties; statutes relating to the staple were passed by Edward III., Richard II., and Henry VI. Edward III.'s "ordinatio stapulorum" (ordinance of the staple) was enacted in 1353.

STARCH is a sediment produced at the bottom of vessels wherein wheat has been steeped in water, it is soft and friable, easily broken into powder, and is used to stiffen and clear linen, with blue; its powder is employed to powder the hair. The art of starching linen was brought into England by Mrs. Dinghein, a Flemish woman, 1 May, 1555. Now, Patents for obtaining starch from other substances have been taken out: from potatoes by Samuel Newton and others in 1707; from the horse-chestnut by Wm. Murray in 1790; from rice by Thomas Wickham in 1823; from various matters by Orlando Jones in 1839-40.

STAR-CHAMBER, COURT OF. So called haply from its roof being garnished with stars. Coke, Thynne and Justice, was called Star-Chamber, not from the stars on its roof (which were obliterated even before the reign of Queen Elizabeth), but from the Starra, or Jewish covenants, deposited there by order of Richard I. No star was allowed to be valid except found in these repositories, and here they remained till the banishment of the Jews by Edward I. That court was instituted or revived, 3 H. VII. 1357, for trials by a committee of the privy council, which was in violation of Magna Charta; as it dealt with civil and criminal cases, uncontrolled by the rules of law. In Charles I.'s reign it exercised its power upon several bold innovators, who gloried in their sufferings, and contributed to render government odious and contemptible in the public estimation. There were trials in this court from 26 to 32 judges, the lord chancellor having the casting voice. The judicial committee of the privy council is the Star-chamber revived under another name.

STAR OF INDIA, an order of knighthood for India, instituted by letters patent 23 Feb., gazetted 23 June, 1884, enlarged in 1897 and 1903. It comprised the sovereign, the grand master, 25 knights (Europeans and natives), and extra or honorary knights. The prince of Wales (now king) held a grand chapter at Calcutta, 1 Jan. 1877.

STARS, THE FIXED. They were clasped into constellations (teach see), it is supposed about 2500 B.C. Hecates, of Syracuse, taught that the sun and the stars were motionless, and that the earth moved round them, about 344 B.C. (this is mentioned by Cicero, and perhaps gave the first hint of this system to Copernicus). Job, Hesiod, and Homer mention several of the stars. The description of Priam contains a Chinese chart of the heavens, of which, not less than 1600 B.C., in which 1,760 stars are correctly inserted. The aberration of the stars was discovered by Dr. Bradley, 1727; see Astronomy, and Solar System. Maps of the stars were published by the Society for the Investigation of Useful Knowledge in 1830, and by the Geological Survey under the superintendence of the Royal Prussian Academy, completed in 1859. See Photometry.

Tycho Brahe discovered a new star in Cassiopeia in 1572. Temporary stars were observed in 1576 and 1585. A list of about 30 stars, which vary in their brightness and sometimes disappear, has been published by Mr. G. F. Chambers in his "Handbook on Astronomy," 1859-60. A variable star, named a Ceti, or Mira Ceti, observed by David Fabricius in Aug. 1595, disappeared and reappeared in 1603. It was observed again in 1605 and 1626, and since.

Bessel discovered the annual parallax of star 6 Ceti (there he calculated its distance from the earth to be about 60 millions of miles) 12 Feb. 1841. Stars move 100 millions [supported by Brummow and R. S. Ball] 1853.

The calculations of T. Henderson (at the Cape) 1832 supported by B. Gilb and others showed that probably a Centauri, is the star nearest to the earth 1837. A new star in Auriga in the Milky Way was discovered at Edinburgh, by Dr. Anderson, 1 Feb. 1857. It had been photographed by prof. Dickering, 11, 12, 13, Dec. 1861. It has been named Nova Aurigae. Its brilliancy diminished, May; revived Aug. 1859. Dr. (after sir) Wm. Higgins reported his spectroscopic observations on the star to the Royal Institution 3 May 1876.

A new star in Centaurus discovered by Mr. Fleming 1 Dec. 1835. Four variable stars discovered by Mr. E. T. Innes at the Cape Observatory, reported, 26 Aug. 1887. A new one in Andromeda discovered by Mr. T. Anderson, 26 Jan. 1894. Another in Cassiopeia, by Mrs. Fleming, from the Pater memorial photos, 1897 or early 1898 (5 by her since 1881. May, 1899. A new variable of Abell type discovered by photography by M. Crisci in Cepheus, May-June, 1896. Two new variables, one in Hermaez and the other in Cepheus, 24 and 28 Aug. 1899, discovered by Dr. T. Anderson, Edinburgh.

A new star, Nova Persei, of the first magnitude, discovered by Mr. Anderson, Edinburgh, in Persseus, and by M. Bereskiak, at Kiel, 21 Feb. 1904. Much studied and photographed. Gradual decrease of magnitude; in June, 1902, and since its spectrum showed the characteristics of planetary nebula; on Dec. 1 its magnitude had diminished 1905.

Variable star in the region of the Milky Way discovered by Mr. T. H. Ashbury 1905.

STATE MEDICINE. see under Sanitation, 2 May, 1885.

STATE PAPER OFFICE was founded in 1578, now merged into the Public Record office. In 1836 the British government began the publication of Calendars of State Papers, invaluable to future historians; brought down to William and Mary, 1688.

STATES-GENERAL OF FRANCE. An ancient assembly of France, first met, it is said, in 1322 to consider the exactions of the Pope. Previous to the Revolution, it had not met since 1614. The states consisted of three orders, the clergy, nobility, and commons. They were convened by Louis XVI., and assembled at Versailles, 5 May, 1789 (318 ecclesiastics, 285 nobles, and 621 deputies of their clot, third estate). A contest arose whether the three orders should make three distinct houses, or but one assembly. The commons were supported by the latter, and assuming the title of the National Assembly, declared that they were competent to proceed to business, without the concurrence of the two other orders, if they refused to join them. The nobility and clergy found it expedient to concede this point, and they all met in one hall; see National Assembly.

Centenary, see France, 5 May, 1889.
STATUES.

STATUES, statistical and historical annual of the states of the world, first published in 1804, edited by Frederick Martin.

STATIONERS. Books and papers were formerly sold only at stalls; hence the dealers were called stationers. The company of stationers of London is of great antiquity, and existed long before printing was invented, yet it was not incorporated until 3 Philip & Mary, 1557. Their old dwelling was in Paternoster-row; 500th anniversary celebrated 10 June, 1903.

STATISTICS, the science of the state, political knowledge, is said to have been founded by sir William Petty (in his treatise "Political arithmetic," published 1662). The term is said to have been invented by professor Achenwall of Gottingen in 1779. The first statistical society in England was formed at Manchester in 1833; the Royal Statistical Society of London, which publishes a quarterly journal, was established 15 March, 1834; its objects are publishing, arranging, and publishing "facts calculated to illustrate the condition and prospects of society." Jubilee kept, 22, 23, 24 June, 1885; incorporated, 1887. The gold medal presented to Mr. Robert Giffen (K.C.B. 1865), the able government statistician, 20 Nov. 1844; resigns office 30 Sept. 1867. Similar societies have been established on the continent. International Statistical Institute constituted in 1855, met at Rome, 12-16 April, 1887. International Statistical Congresses are now held occasionally. One in London, under the presidency of the prince of Wales, 31 July, 1905. The eminent statistician, Dr. Wm. Farr, died 14 April, 1883. Statistical Abstracts have been published annually by the government for many years, giving much information respecting the revenue, expenditure, commerce, etc., of the empire.

STATUES, see Sculpture, &c. Two statues of Rameses II, and one of his queen (about 1322 B.C.), 10 feet high, discovered at Aboukir by Dominus Pasha, Oct. 1821. Phidias, whose statue of Jupiter passed for one of the wonders of the ancient world, was the greatest statistical among the ancients, 440 B.C. He had previously made a statue of Minerva at the request of Pericles, which was placed in the Parthenon. It was made of ivory and gold, and measured 36 feet in height. Lycurgus invented the art of taking the likeness of faces in plasters, from which he afterwards cast models in wax, 326 B.C. Michael Angelo was the greatest artist among the moderns. The first equestrian statue erected in Great Britain was that of Charles I, in 1672. By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 10 (10 July, 1854), public statues were placed under the control and protection of the Board of Trade. The following are the chief public statues in London:

- Achilles, Hyde-park, in honour of the duke of Wellington, by the ladies of Great Britain, 18 June, 1822
- Albert, prince consort, Royal Exchange, 1850
- Horticultural Society gardens, 1863
- Holburn circle, 1873
- Albert memorial (Sir Gilbert Scott, 1849-62)
- Kensington gardens
- Anne, queen, St. Paul's Churchyard (a modern replica of one by Bird), 1866

- This statue is of brass, cast by Le Sueur, in 1633, at the expense of the Howard-Inglefield family. During the civil war, the parliament sold it to John River, a hrazier, in Holborn, with strict orders to break it to pieces; but he concealed it underground till the Restoration; it remained concealed ever since, as stated by Grinling Gibbons. The first equestrian statue of bronze, founded at one cast, was that of Louis XIV. of France, 1699; it was erected about 1724.

STEAM ENGINE.

The British India Steam Navigation Company, initiated.

May 15, 1835. The British Steam-Vapor Association established.

The merits of an attacking vessel termed a steam-vapor, advocated by Sir G. Sartorious, discussed 1839-60.

Giffard's valuable steam-jet engine invented about 1839.

An iron-plated steamer, La Galerie, completed in France (see Navy, French).

The Warrior, an iron-plated vessel, launched 29 Dec.

The Far East, a vessel with two screws, launched at Hull 1866.

A cigar ship, a steam yacht, designed by Mr. W. Han, built by Hewnworth, launched on the Thames 546.

Trials of the Nautilus, with a hydraulic propeller worked by steam, Ruthven's patent; no paddle or screw required.

Successful trial of the Waite-ritchie government hydraulic propeller iron-clad gun- vessel (Ruthven's patent), on the Thames, 19 Oct.

Mr. Ruthven patented his system in 1849, and exhibited his machinery at the International exhibition in 1851. His object was to increase speed and save fuel. In the Waterritchie a steam-engine gave the power of absorbing and expelling the water, and no screw or paddle was required. The water-wheel was 145 feet in diameter.

Trial of H.M. gun-boat Thistle; explosion of boiler, 7 injured.

3 Nov. Channel Steamer: "Twin-ship" Cedulis, steamer (two hulls, separated by 26 feet, 250 feet long; invented by Capt. W. T. Dene, for the English Channel and the North Sea, with only one hitchness when crossing the Channel; (really a single ship, with the middle part of her bottom raised out of the water throughout her whole length); launched, 7 Aug.; tried in calm weather; reported successful but slow, 2 Aug., 1875; successful, June, 1876.

Besserver, saloon steamer, designed by Mr. Bessemer and E. E. Reed; built by the Eargo company; launched at Hull 24 Sept., 1874; first sailed from Hull to Calais, 5 March, 1875; sailed to Calais, 10 April, 1875. [Success due to 1875. Modified by Mr. (Capt.) E. E. Reed; trial near Hull successful 26 March, 1877. Express, twin steamer; built by A. Leslie, of Newcastle; sailed from the Tyne to Cape Island, 245 miles in 13 hrs., reported satisfactorily, 12 March.

Fulkerson, twin steamer, launched at Hull, 23 March.

Peacock, steamer, the first built of seamless steel, 340 feet long by 40 feet broad, 1,400 tons, launched at Napier's yard, Govan, near Glasgow, 2 Aug., 1873.

Londonderry, a torpedo-shaped steam yacht, built for the P.S. for the era of Russia, launched 7 July, 1880.

Mr. Thomas Lishman's steam-generator said to economize fuel without employing steam, employed at Elswick Works, Newcastle, and other places.

Perseus, boat of the Allan line, said to have crossed the Atlantic from land to land in 4 days, 17 hours and 41 minutes.

18 Aug.

Compass, twin-screw Camel liner, with a gross tonnage of 12,500, 620 feet long by 65 feet 3 inches broad and 43 feet deep, launched on the Clyde, 3 Sept., 1892. She left New York 2 Sept., arrived at Queenstown 3 Sept., 1892 (day and night), 19 days, 15 min.); Liverpool, launched, 2 Feb., 1901.

Sir Thomas Sutherland at a meeting of the Institute of Mechanical Engineers, held at the Institute, 1892, stated that the Compass, Camel line, has attained an average speed of 24 statute miles per hour or 600 miles per day, and that the mails are conveyed from Charing Cross to Bombay in 11 days.

The Oceanic, White Star Liner, launched 1 Jan., 1899.

Amalgamation of the Union and the Castle lines of steamers, announced.

16 Dec.

Imperial direct steamer from Avonmouth, Bristol, to Jamaica, started 10 Feb. 1901.

Macononte ... shortest western passage, 4 days 10 hrs. 51 mins., arriving in New York, 30 Sept.

See Navy, and Shipping.
STEAM GUN; suggested by Wm. Murdoch, 1803. One patented by Messrs. Perkins, in 1824, was ineffectual.

STEAM HAMMER, invented by Mr. James Nasmyth in 1838, and patented by him 18 June, 1842. Its main feature is the absolutely direct manner by which the elastic power of steam is employed to lift up and let fall the mass of iron constituting the hammer, which is attached direct to the end of a piston-rod passing through the hollow top of an inverted steam cylinder placed immediately over the anvil.

In 1842, Mr. Nasmyth applied his steam-hammer to driving piles, which has importantly assisted in the execution of great public works. Owing to its vast range of power, forged iron work can now by its means be executed on a scale, and for a variety of purposes, with an ease and perfection not previously possible.

STEEL.

Parts of gigantic marine steam-engines, anchors, and Armstrong guns, as well as the most minute details of machinery, as in Enfield rifles, are executed by the steam hammer.

Mr. Nasmyth, aged 81, died 7 May, 1890.

A steam-hammer, said to be the then largest in the world, completed at Woolwich; the falling portion weighs 46 tons, and when used with top steam (41 tons) has the tonnage of 45 horses. April, 1874. One at Schenck's works, Cremon, France; weight between 25 and 50 tons, Dec. 1877.

STEAM-MAN. A figure constructed to drug a phaeton received this name in New York in March, 1868.

STEAM NAVIGATION, see under Steam.

STEAM-PLoughs were patented by G. Callaway and R. A. Purks, 1849; H. Cowling, 1850; and others. John Fowler's of 1854 is much approved.

STEAM-ram (to be used in naval warfare), was invented by Mr. James Nasmyth in 1836, and communicated to the Admiralty in 1845. Steam-rams built by Mr. James Laird of Birkenhead for the Confederate States of N. America, were stopped and eventually bought by the British government, 1864.

STEarine (from stear, suet), that part of oils and fats which is solid at common temperature. The nature of these substances was first made known by Scheele, in 1772, who showed that they were compounds of peculiar acids, with a base termed glycerine; of these compounds the chief are stearine, margarine, and linole; see Candles.

STEEL, metal, a compound of iron and carbon, exists in nature, and has been fabricated from the earliest times. It was certainly used by the Egyptians, Assyrians, and Greeks. It has largely replaced cast iron in ship building, &c.

Beaumarchais discovered the direct process of making steel by immersing malleable iron in a bath of cast iron.

A manufactory for cast steel is said to have been set up by Benjamin Huntsman at Handsworth, near Sheffield.

The manufacture of sheet steel began in Sheffield about 1800.

German steel was made at Newcastle previously by Mr. Crayley.

The inventions of Mushet (1826), Lucas (1829), and Heath (1831); were important steps in this manufacture; see Repairsing.

Bope patented his "puddled steel" in 1850. Mr. (Col. Sir) H. Bessemer met steel by passing cold air through liquid iron, 1856. By this method 20 tons of crude iron have been converted into cast steel in 2 minutes.

Tungsten steel was made in Germany, 1859; and Mr. Mach made steel by bringing together iron in contact with carbide of ammonia.

M. Alfred Krupp exhibited an ingot of steel weighing 4000 lbs., in 1861, and one weighing 20 tons in 1862. The subject has been investigated by M. Caron, 1865; and much attention was excited by cutlery made from a metallic sand, brought from Yarmouth or New Plymout, in New Zealand.

A steel bridge, in connection with the exhibition, constructed at Paris by M. Joret.

New process of steel manufacture from Cleveland ironstone by Mr. W. Bartleet, patented 1837.

The United States steel corporation, the largest combination of industries in the world; authorized capital, 64,400,000, &c.; it controls 65 to 80 per STEEL PENS. 1309 STEREOCHROMY.

Steel pens. "Iron pens" are mentioned by Chamberlayne in 1682. Steel pens made at least a century before, began to come into use about 1820, when the first gross of three-slit pens was sold wholesale for 7s. 4d. In 1830 the price was 8s., and in 1832, 6s. A better pen is now sold for 6d. a gross.

STEEL-YARD. An ancient instrument, the same that is translated balance in the Pentateuch. The Statuta Romana, or Roman steel-yard, is mentioned in 315 B.C.—The Steel-yard or Still-yard Company, London merchants, who had the steel-yard in Thames-street assigned to them by Henry III., about 1232, were Flemings and Germans, and the only exporters, for many years after, of the staple commodities of England. Anderson.

The company lost its privileges, finally, in 1578; and the merchants were expelled from England in 1597.

STEENKIRK, see Engihen.

STEFANO, SAN, a small village on the sea, of Marmora, S.W. of Constantiopolis; here the grand duke Nicholas established his head quarters, 24 Feb.; and here was signed a treaty of peace with Turkey, 3 March, 1878, much modified by the treaty of Berlin, signed 15 July, following. The Russians quitted San Stefano, 22 Sept. 1878.

It established independence of Montenegro, Serbia, and Rumania; constituted Bulgaria a tributary principality; required a heavy indemnity from Turkey for Russia, who was to gain a port on the Black Sea and in the Bosporus; and Dobrudjca (now Bessarabia) to obtain rights for Christians; to open the Bosphorus and Dardanelles in peace and war; &c.

STENOCHROMY, see Printing in Colours.

STENOGRAPHY (from steno, narrow, the art of short-hand, practised by the ancients. Its improvement is attributed to Tyro, a freedman, and still more to Seneque. The Egyptian Exploration Fund in 1891 published an egyptian dated a.d. 155, found at Oxyrychnus, relating to short-hand teaching. Dr. Timothy Bright's "Charactere, or the Arte of Shorte, Swite, and Secrete Writing," published in 1588, is the first English work on short-hand. Peter Bales, the famous penman, published on stenography in 1599; and John Willis published his "Stenographie," in 1602. Since then many systems and modifications have been produced. See Phonography.

Emanuel Willis's system, 1612; Thomas Shelton's system, 1620; and Samuel Pope's, 1632. Cuthriett's, 1643; and Robert Hoo's, 1647. Mason's, 1672, improved by Thurs. Garner (1720) (known as Garner's, officially used in Parliament since 1832); John Bryon's, published after his death, 1787; Walter Morwood (1751) with Samuel Taylor's (on which are based "bol's and Hardinge's"), 1786; Rev. Richard Rous, 1822, first Script system; John H. Lewis's; Isaac Pitman's (phonography), 1837; See Phonography.

Sloan's, 1859; Thomas Anderson's, 1864; "A text-book of the Gurney system," edited by W. B. Gurney and Sons, 1872; T. S. Maloney's "Script Phonography," 1885; J. Barker's, 1885; A. Janes (Shorthand without complication), 1895; Prof. H. L. L. Chandor (Ovise shorthand), 1899; Dr. H. Sweet ('Caro's shorthand), 1892.

Various systems are in use, in France, Germany, America, and the East; Pitman's adapted to the Japanese language, and employed for reporting proceedings of the Diet, in Japan.

Shorthand Society founded, 1865.

In 1872 the Shorthand Society founded.

Shorthand placed on the government education code, no fixed system.

Incorporated phonographic society, established, 1890.

Sig. A. Michel's stenographic machine exhibited at the Turin exhibition of 1884, successfully adopted by the Italian Senate.

Mr. J. F. Hardy's shorthand writing machine (silent), reported successful.

STEPHEN'S CHAPEL ST. (Westminster), built by King Stephen, about 1135. It was rebuilt by Edward III. in 1347, and by him made a collegiate church, to which a dean and twelve secular priests were appointed. Soon after its surrender to Edward VI., about 1548, it was adapted to the use of Parliament; see Parliament. It was destroyed by fire, 16 Oct. 1833. The Society of Antiquaries published memorials of it about 1810: and Mr. MacKenzie's work appeared in 1841. The restoration of the beautiful crypt was completed in Jan. 1870.

STEPNEY, a parish, E. London, the Steninghile of Domeshay book. Edward I. summoned a parliament here, 1291. Stepney suffered severely by the plague, 1625 and 1665. Stepney-green was restored and opened as a park by the Metropolitan Board of Works, 1720. St.顺应ly church, built 1740, restored 1890, much damaged by fire, 12 Oct. 1901; reopened 21 June, 1902. One of the divisions of the Tower Hamlets; returns one M.P. Constituted a municipal borough by London Government act 1899. (to aldermen, 6 councillors; Bishopsgate-street, the right rev. Henry Luke Paget, 1908. Pop. 16,101, 2,797 males, 14,929 females, 313,552.

STEREOCHEMISTRY, the chemistry of atoms, carbon, &c., in space, connected with the researches of M. Pasteur and his colleagues, Van't Hoff and Le Bel; was so named about 1859 by Victor Meyer. Prof. J. W. Schwedt, one of its earliest exponents, died in 1872.

STEREOCHROMY, a mode of painting in which water-colour (as an alkaline solution of that silex) serves as the connecting medium between the colour and the substratum. Invention is ascribed to Von Fuchs, who died at Munich on 5 March, 1850. Fine specimens of this art by Knabich and Echter exist in the Museum at Berlin, and also at Munich.

STEREOMETER. by which is compassed the art of taking the contents of vessels by gauging, invented about 1530. Anderson. M. Say's stereometer, for determining the specific gravity of liquids, porous bodies and powders as well as solids, was described in 1797.

STEREOSCOPE (from stereo, solid, and skopein, to see), an optical instrument for representing in apparent relief natural objects, &c., by uniting into one image two plane representations of these objects as seen by each eye separately. The first stereoscope by reflection was constructed and exhibited by professor Charles Wheatstone in 1838, who had announced its principle in 1833. Since 1854 stereoscopes have been greatly improved. By Mr. John Anderson's lantern stereoscope, remarkable effects were exhibited on a screen in the Royal Society's lecture room, 7 June, 1853. Mr. T. E. Heath to this day applies the stereo-process to making paper stereoscopes. His instrument exhibited to Royal Society, 1895.

STEREOTYPE. A cast from a page of movable printing-types, so named by the Parisian printer, Didot, 1738. It is said that stereotyping was known in 1711. It was practised by Wm. God of Edinburgh, about 1730. Some of God's plates are at the Royal Institution, London. A Mr. James attempted to introduce God's process in London, but failed, about 1740. Nichols. Stereotype printing was in use in Holland, in the 15th century; and a quarto Bible and a Dutch folio Bible were printed there. Phillips. It was revived in London by Wilson in 1834. Since 1850 the durability of stereotypes has been greatly increased by electrotyping them with copper or silver. Stereotyping used for printing the Innsbruck, 1839, etc. It soon came into general use for newspaper printing.

In the Library of the Royal Institution is an edition of the Bible by Leiden, 1660, with 12 plates showing the life of Christ. The first work of any importance printed by stereotype was issued by the Royal Institution in 1833 (founded 1820).

STERLING (money). Ducange says (1705): "Esternus, sterlingleis, are English words relating to money, and hence familiar to other nations, and applied to the weight, quality, and kind of money." Dow. Anglia, qui vocatur esternus, Stat. Edw. IV. The penny of England, which is called sterlingle. Camden derides the word from earstelge or earsteling, observing that the money brought from Germany, in the reign of Richard I., was the most esteemed on account of its purity, being called in old deeds "purer than earstelge." Others derive the word from the Esterning, the first moneyers in England.

STETHOSCOPE. In 1816 Laennec, of Paris, by rolling a quire of paper into a kind of cylinder, and placing one end to the patient's chest and the other to his own ear, perceived the action of the heart in a much more distinct manner than by the immediate application of the ear. This led to his inventing the stethoscope, or "breast-explorer," the principle of which, now termed "manoeuvres," was known by Hipppocrates (1575, &c.), and by Robert Hooke, 1651. See W. & D., 1815.

STETTIN (Pomerania), an ancient city, formerly held by the Silesians and Venedes, was taken by Boleslas of Poland in 1121. After being conquered by the Swedes, Russians, and French, it was awarded to Prussia in 1814. Pop., 1905, 224,110.

A new harbour opened by the emperor, 23 Sept. 1858.

STEWARD OF ENGLAND, LORD HIGH. The first grand officer of the crown. This office was established prior to the reign of Edward the Confessor, and was formerly annexed to the lordship of Hinckley, Leicestershire, belonging to the family of Montfort, earls of Leicester, who were, in 1111, STICKLESTADT (Norway). Here Olaf II., aided by the Swedes, was defeated in his endeavours to recover his kingdom from Magnus Barefoot. He was slain, 29 July, 1030. He was afterwards sainted, on account of his zeal for Christianity.

STIPENDIARY MAGISTRATES. see Magistrates.

STIRRUPS were unknown to the ancients. Graecus hit the highways with stones to enable the horsemen to mount. Warriors had projections on their spears for the same purpose. Stirrups were used in the 4th century, but were not common even in the 12th.

STOCKACH (Switzerland), a town in Baden, near which the Austrians, under the archduke Charles, defeated the French, 25 March, 1799; and Moreau defeated Kray, 5 May, 1800.

STOCKHOLM (Swedish), capital of Sweden (built on holmen, or islands), was fortified by Gerhard Jacob about 1250. Here the Swedes were massacred by Christian II. in 1520; see Sweden.
STOCKS.

The foundation of the Stock Exchange, in Capel Court, the residence of the jeweller, Sir William Capel, in 1624, was laid on 13 May, 1624. It was stated on the first stone that the public debt was then 538,720,224l. Members, 1264, about 1100 above 2000 in 1675; 5,157 members and 2,547 clerks in.

The memorable Stock Exchange house, for which admiral lord Cochrane (afterwards lord Dunmore), Johnstone, and others, were convicted, 25 Feb., 1814, Lord Cochrane was in consequence expelled the house of commons. His innocence was afterwards proved, he was restored to his rank by king William IV., and to the honours belonging to it by queen Victoria.

Stock-exchange house destroyed by fire, 11 Feb., 1856.

The pair of stock holders in 1859 amounted to 337,451.

Three per cent. annuities created.

Three per cent. consols created.

Three per cent. reduced.

Three per cent. annuities, payable at the South Sea house.

Three-and-a-half per cent. annuities created.

Long annuities.

Five per cent. annuities.

Five per cent. reduced to four.

Old four per cent. reduced to three and a half in.

Further reductions made in 1821, 1829, 1834, 1844; the maximum being three per cent.

Further reductions proposed by mr. Godden (21 to 23 in 15 years under specified conditions), March.

Now three per cent. all converted or paid off.

Stocks, which bankrupts were placed.

The last in London was removed from St. Clement Danes, Strand, 4 Aug., 1826.

STOCKSMAN is a person engaged in the business of buying and selling stocks, which is the practice of the dealers in the Exchange, who purchase and sell the certificates of securities, such as stocks, consols, and other public obligations.

STONE. Stone buildings erected in England by Benedict Bishop of 670. A stone bridge built by Bower, in the 11th or 12th centuries, is accounted the first; but a bridge exists at Crowland, which is said to have been built in 800; see Bridges. The first stone building in Ireland was probably a round tower; see Building. Stone china-ware was made by Wedgwood in 1762. *Artificial stone for statues was manufactured by a Neapolitan, and introduced into England, 1776. Stone paper was made in 1776; see Ransom's *Artificial Stone, and Lithotomy. For stone implements, see Flint, and *Piano-forte.

An orchestra composed of wind instruments made of terra-cotta appeared in London in 1874.

STONEHENGE (on Salisbury Plain, Wilts.) is said to have been erected on the counsel of Merlin, by Aurelius Ambrosius, in memory of 460 Britons, who were murdered by Hengist the Saxon about 450. *Geoffrey of Monmouth. Erected as a sepulchral monument of Ambrosius, 500. *Polydore Virgilius. An ancient temple of the Britons, in which the Druids officiated. *Dr. Stukeley. The Britons are said to have held annual meetings at Abury and Stonehenge, when laws were made and justice administered. The curious near Stonehenge was discovered by Dr. Stukeley, 6 Aug. 1723. The origin and object of these remains are still very obscure.

The thorough preservation of Stonehenge strongly advocated Aug. 1836. Fell off one of the uprights and capstone, 31 Dec. 1900. Afterwards restored, Stonehenge enclosed within a fence, 1901.

STONYHURST COLLEGE, N.E. Lancashire. This institution for the education of Roman Catholics was begun by the arrival in 1791 of 18 Jesuit fathers, with their pupils, of the seminary of St. Omer (which see), by invitation of Mr. Thos. Weld of Lytham, himself formerly a pupil. At first they were placed in an old mansion here. The undertaking prospered, and during last century the present spacious buildings were erected, including a chapel, library, museum, and observatory. In 1839 the college was affiliated to the University of London.

STORM-WARNINGS, see under Meteorology.

STOVES. The ancient used stoves which concealed the fire, as the German stoves yet do. They lighted the fire also in a large tube in the middle of the room, the roof being open. Apartments were warmed by portable braziers. Stoves on this old principle, improved, continued in use in many places, public establishments, in Germany, and generally on the continent. Dr. Franklin and Count Rumford (who invented a stove) pointed out the waste of fuel in our open fires; and Dr. Neil Arnott patented his "improvements in the production and agency of heat," 14 Nov., 1821. Dr. C. Wiliam Siemens described his smoky stove in "Astron," for 11 Nov., 1880. See Chimney, and Collager's Stove.

STRASBURG, the Roman Argentoratum, the capital of Alsace. Here Julian defeated the Alamanni, 355, who captured it. 455. It was annexed to Germany, 870. Louis IV. seized it 28 Sept. 1681, and retained it by the treaty of Ryswick, 1697. The citadel and fortifications, which he constructed, have been so much augmented that Strasburg may be considered one of the strongest places in Europe. It was confirmed to France by the peace of Ryswick in 1697, but captured by the Germans, 28 Sept. 1706, and retained at the peace, May, 1711. The cathedral, an epitome of Gothic art, was founded by Clovis, and reconstructed by Pepin and Charlemagne. After destruction by lightning, 1607, it was principally erected by Erasmus von Steinbach and his son in the 14th century. The lofty tower was completed in 1429. The celebrated astronomical clock, after a long stoppage, was repaired by M. Schwilgué, and inaugurated 1 Jan. 1843. Population, 1700, 150,205; 1805, 165,928.

An attempt at insurrection in the city was made by Prince Louis Napoleon (afterwards president of the French republic, and emperor), aided by two officers and some privates 30 Oct. 1836. It was instantly suppressed by their arrest, and the prince was shipped off to America by the French government.

Strasburg is visited by the Germans, principally from Baden, during the Franco-German war 10 Aug. 1870. Gen. von Werder assumed the command of the besiegers, and the bombardment began 14 Aug. and was vigorously pressed 16 Aug.

Gen. Uhrich, the commandant, declared that he would not surrender except upon a heap of ashes; but after a heroic resistance, and when a breach had been made and an assault was impending, notice was given, and the place surrendered at 2 A.M. v. 17,150 men and 400 officers laid down their arms 27 Sept.

The German loss was said to be 9,660 men, of whom 6,000 were officers. 26 Sept.

The Germans entered Strasburg on the anniversary of its surrender to the French in 1870 by surprise, and were received with enthusiasm.

Uhrich received the grand cross of the legion of honour 10 Dec.

The movable library was destroyed, and the cathedral much injured. About 4,000 houses were destroyed, and 6,000 persons rendered homeless. Wilhelm H. very well received 22 Aug. 1870.

SUEZ CANAL. The caliph Omar about 640 opposes cutting the isthmus. A plan for a canal between the head of the Red Sea and the bay of Pelusium was brought forward by M. Ferdinand de Lesseps in 1854. He undertook to cut a canal through 90 miles of sand, to run out moles into the Mediterranean; to deepen the shallow waters; to create ports to receive the ships from India and Australia, so as to adapt the canal to the trade of the European and the American, and the Chinese, and the courts and the merchant princes of the East; to construct a basin at the mouth of the Nile for the storage of cargoes, to circumvent the Levant. By 1865, Lesseps had worked for nine years, and the head of the project was estimated at 8,000,000/.

SUDBURY, in Suffolk, chartered by Queen Mary, 1555, was disfranchised for bribery in 1844.

SUEVI, a warlike Gothic tribe, which, with the Alani and the Visigoths, entered Spain about 408, were overthrown by the latter, and absorbed into their kingdom about 584.

SUCCESSION DUTY ACT (16 & 17 Vict. c. 51), after much discussion, was passed 4 Aug. 1853. By this act the legacy duty was extended to real estate, and was made payable on succession to both landed and personal property; see Legacies. Additional duties imposed by customs, &c., acts of 1888 and 1889. The prospective succession duty replaced by the estate duty, 1844 (which see).

SUGAR* (Succharum officinarum) is supposed to have been known to the ancient Jews. Found in the East Indies by Neurculus, admiral of Alexander, 325 B.C.—Strabo. An oriental trade in alliance with Pompey used the juice of the cane as a common beverage.——Lucan. It was prescribed as a medicine by Galen, 2d century. Brought into Europe from Asia, A.D. 625;—in large quantities, 1130. Attempted to be cultivated in Italy; not succeeding, the Portuguese and Spaniards carried it to America about 1510.

The sugar cane transported from Sierra Leone to Lagos about 1742; from Madeira about 1749; and to the West Indies about 1828. It is not known at what date sugar was introduced into England, but it seems to have been prior to the reign of Henry VIII. Mr. Whittaker, in the History of Whittington, p. 109, quotes an instance in 1497. A manuscript letter from Sir Edward Wotton to lord Cobham, dated Calais, advises him that Sir Edward had taken up for his lordship twenty-five sugar leavates at six shillings a piece, “whiche is eight pence a pound.”—6 March, 1546.

Reduced, 1857, 1874; modified, 1875; greatly reduced, 1 Aug. 1876; further reduced, May, 1879; abolished from 1 May, 1874.

Sugar industries committee recommended a protective duty on the import of sugar from certain countries ..... Aug. 1823.

Sugar-refining was made known to Europeans by a Venetian, 1503, and was first practised in England in 1605, though we say we had the art a few years earlier. The invaluable vacuum-pump was invented by Howard, 1412. Dr. Scot’s processes were patented in 1536-39, but not adopted in Britain.

Sugar, long considered a neutral substance, without enterprisers, has become the head of a numerous family; the sugar (see sugar) from cane, boiled with dilute acids it becomes alulose; Fruit sugar (from many fruits); Grape sugar (from dried fruits and dried starch; sugar of milk (molasses) (from canal sugar); Sugar of tobacco (from cinchona) by Berthollet in 1825, produced from the berries of the mountain ash, by Pelouze; Inosite (from muscular tissue, Scherer); Sulphuric (by Laurent); Mannitol (from manna, obtained from the resinous oozes, a kind of ash).

SUICIDE (from self, cedere, to kill), the slayer of himself. The first instances recorded in Jewish history are those of Saunon, about 1120, and Saul, 1055 B.C. The Greek and Roman philosophers deemed it a crime, and burned the offending hand apart from the rest of the body. In the reign of Targin L., the Roman soldiers, thinking themselves disgraced by being ordered to make common sewers, destroyed themselves, 699 B.C. Calv committed suicide, 46 B.C.* In the Roman Catholic church, in the 6th century it was ordained that no commemoration should be made in the Eucharist for such as committed self-murder. This ecclesiastical law continued till the Reformation, when it was admitted into the statute law of England by the authority of parliament, with the consignment of land and goods. Till 1823 the body of the suicide was directed to be buried in a cross-road, and a stake to be driven through it. A new act, suppressing the barbarous customs, was passed in 1832. It is now usually buried in consecrated ground without a religious ceremony. Thomas Cooper, the eminent Charlatan, author of "The Book of Suicides," an epic poem, published in 1815, died, aged 87, 15 July, 1892. Dr. Henry Morselli published "Suicides: an Essay," 1881. There were 7,572 suicides in France in 1887.

of Vesuvius; and an Englishman, who jumped into the furnace of a forge about the year 1811. Plutarch relates that an unaccountable passion for suicide seized the Milesian virgins, from which they could not be prevented by threats and prayers of their friends; each of them being issued that the body of every young maid who did self murder should be drawn naked through the streets, a stop was soon put to the extraordinary frenzy.

SUITORS FUND (in the court of chancery) in 1862 amounted to 1,290,000l. As this has money as a specific owner, a proposal was made by government to apply to it the building of new law-courts, payment of all legal claims being guaranteed, which was directed by the "Courts of Laws Fees" act, passed 20 Aug. 1862.

SULPHUR has been known from the earliest times. Basil Valentine mentions its production from green vitriol (sulphuric acid, produced by him from burning sulphur, was introduced into England about 1720. Sulphur has been the object of research of many eminent chemists during the present century, and many discoveries have been made, such as its allotropic condition, &c. It is the inflammable constituent in gunpowder, and a deleterious ingredient in coal gas. The sulphur mines of Sicily have been worked since the 10th century, but the exportation was considerable till about 1820; in 1838 the trade increased so much that Great Britain alone imported 38,653 tons. In that year the Neapolitan government was induced to grant a monopoly of the trade to a French company; but a firm remonstrance from the British government led to a discontinuance of the neapolitan restriction in 1841, which, however, gave a great and lasting impetus to the British sulphur manufacture.

SULPHURYL FLUORIDE, a colourless, colourless gas, which can be liquefied and solidified at low temperatures, prepared by Melissen and Lebey, by the action of fluorine on sulphur dioxide; reported, 17 Aug. 1907.

SULTAN, or ruler, in Turkish title, from the Arabic, given to Mahometan rulers and especially to the grand sirdar or emperor of Turkey. For the week of H.M.S. Sultan, see Navy of England. 1829.

SULU, or Sulu, a group of some 20 islands in the Malay Archipelago.
SUMATRA, an island in the Indian ocean, called Java Minor by Marco Polo, and visited by Nicolò di Conti prior to 1449. Mainly on account of the pepper trade, the Dutch formed a settlement at Padang about 1641, and the British at Bengolen about 1685. The Dutch possessions with Java were acquired by the British in 1811; but were restored to the Dutch in 1846. In 1858, the Dutch acquired all the British settlements in Sumatra, in exchange for Malacca and some possessions in India. Restrictions on their progress in Sumatra were removed by treaty Feb. 1872. Severe fighting between the Dutch and the Achinese natives with varying results, mostly in favour of the Dutch. April 1873 to 1879. Dutch success. Jan. 1879. Peace arranged, Aug. 1879. Now war; great victory of the Dutch, 13 Sept. 1882. Sumatra suffered much by the volcanic eruptions and earthquakes of 26–27 Aug. 1883. See Java and Holland, 1876 et seq.

13 lives lost through a disastrous wave which swept over the island of Tana and the southern coast of Sumatra, 1st Jan. 1898. Island of Siman almost destroyed by an earthquake and inundation; number of deaths, 1,000, reported Dec. 1899. (See Sumatra, our Annals, Jan. 1898.)

SUMMARY JURISDICTION ACT, 42 & 43 Viet. c. 42, 11 Aug. 1870. It amends the law respecting the jurisdiction of magistrates, in regard to fines, imprisonments, &c. It came into operation 1 Jan. 1880. Amended 1881, 1884, and 1885; again extended, 1890.

SUMPTUARY LAWS. Restrain excess in dress, furniture, eating, &c. The laws of Lycurgus were severe against luxury, probably of 9th century B.C. Those of Zaleucus ordained that no sober woman should go attended by more than one maid in the street, or wear gold or embroidered apparel, 430 B.C. - Diod. Loc. The Lex Orichon among the Romans (81 B.C.) limited the guests at feasts, and the number and quality of the dishes at an entertainment; and it also enforced that during supper, which was the chief meal among the Romans, the doors of every house should be left open. The English summptuary laws, chiefly of the reigns of Edward III, and Henry VIII., were repealed in 1549; see Dress.

SUN. - The Pythagoreans taught that the sun was one of the twelve spheres, about 320 B.C. The relative diameters and periods of revolution were first calculated, and the apparent breadth of the sun, about 280 B.C. Numerous theories were ventured during fifteen centuries, and astronomy lay neglected till about A.D. 1200, when it was brought into Europe by the Moors of Barbary and Spain. The Copernican system was made known in 1543; see Copernicus, System and Solar System, Galileo and Newton maintained that the sun was an igneous globe. The transit of Mercury was observed by Gassendi, 1631. For recent discoveries, see Eclipses, Spectrum, and Venus.

- The estimated diameter is 840,000 miles, and the distance from the earth, given as 93,000,000 miles, has been corrected to 91,000,000 miles, by the result of the experiments and calculations of MM. Fizeau and Foucault. The relation of the apparent breadth to the apparent breadth of a human hair at 25 feet, or of a sovereign 8 miles off, - Herchel. Distance computed by Dr. Arête is from the observations of transit of Venus (6, Dec. 1874), 93,313,500 miles, Oct. 1877; 92,160,000, June, 1878. From the transit of 1832 by professor Harkessiean American, 27,155,500 miles, October, 1833, is now described as consisting of a solid or liquid nucleus, surrounded by a luminous envelope (photosphere), over which is a dense atmosphere containing the vapors of various metals and other elements, see Spectrum.

By the observations of Dr. Halley on the spot which darkened the sun's disc in July and August, 1676, he established the certainty of its motion round its own axis.

Solar spots were observed by Fabricius and Harriot in 1605. A man who three times the size of the earth passed through the sun's centre, 21 April, 1666, and frequently since.

Dr. Wilson observed the motion of a spot. - 1796

Herschell measured two spots, whose length together exceeded 250,000 miles. - 1870

Many sun spots observed - early 1829 and 1894

Schwabe discovered that a cycle of changes (from maximum to minimum and minimum to maximum) in the number of spots occurs in 11 years, confirmed by Wolf and others. - 1836

Mr. Warren de la Rue took two photographs at the time of total observation of 18 July, 1855. Mr. Jameson described the elliptical-shaped objects on the sun (terming it "willow-cvtes," by Stone "tree-grasses.") - 1842

Mr. Ericsson proposed condensation of the sun's rays and their employment as a motive power, 1854.

The observations of the eclipse of 22 Dec. 1870 and 12 Dec. 1871 led to the opinion that an unknown substance (re-presented in the spectrum by line 4750) exists on the sun. "Solar Vogue" especially studied by Messers. Warren de la Rue, Balfour Stewart, &c. - 1861

Intensely bright sunspots and after-glow, and very red sun-rises, seen in England and other parts of the globe, Nov. and Dec. 1883; attributed by Dr. McElrath, Dr. Norman Lockyer and others, to the volcanic dust projected by the eruptions of Krakatoa (see Java, Aug. 1883), Dec. 1883; other causes, such as cosmic dust, were suggested. Similar sunsets in the autumn 1884 and 1885. Interesting photographs of the sun's corona exhibited by Dr. Huggins at the Royal Institution, 1879.

SUNDAY.

SUNDAY was the day on which, anciently, divine adoration was paid to the Sun. Among Christians it is commonly called Dies Dominicus, or Lord's day, on account of our Saviour's appearance on that day, after his resurrection. The first civil law that was issued for the observance of this day, combined it with that of the seventh-day Sabbath and other festivals (Eusebius, Life of Constantine), and it was followed by several imperial edicts, in favour of this day, which are extinct in the body of Roman law, the earliest being that of Constantine the Great, dated 7 March, 321. See Sabbath, Sabbatarian, Sports, Book of, &c.—For Sunday Letter, see Dominical Letter.

SUNDERLAND ADMINISTRATION, formed in 1718, arose out of a modification of the Stanhope ministry. After various changes, it was broken up in 1811.

Charles, earl of Sunderland, first lord of the treasury.
Earl Cowper, lord chancellor.
Earl Stanhope and Mr. Cravens, secretaries.
Mr. Aislabie, chancellor of the exchequer, &c.

SUNSHINE RECORDER, a sphere of glass so disposed as to cast a marked piece of paper, by concentrating the sun's rays. The instrument (invented by Mr. J. F. Campbell in 1857) in its present form was devised by Sir G. G. Stokes (died 1888) and made by Mr. R. J. Lecky (1886). A more delicate form of instrument for recording photometrically the duration and intensity of sunshine was invented by Mr. J. B. Jordan, 1884; much improved, April, 1888.

SUPERANNUATION ACTS for the Civil Service were passed in April, 1859, Aug. 1866, June, 1892.

SUPREMACY over the church was claimed by pope Gelasius I. as bishop of Rome, 394. On 15 Jan. 1535, Henry VIII, by virtue of the act 26 Hen. VIII. c. 1, formally assumed the style of "on earth supreme head of the church of England," which was retained by Edward VI., Mary I. (for a time), but was refused by Elizabeth, and has never been renounced, except by degrees.

The bishop of Rochester (Fisher) and the ex-lord chancellor (sir Thomas More) and many others were beheaded for denying the king's supremacy in 1535; and in 1578, John Nelson, a priest, and Thomas Sherwood, a young layman, were executed at Tyburn for the same offence. The "act of Supremacy," repealed by 1 & 2 Phil. and Mary. c. 8 (1554), was re-enacted 1 Eliz. c. 1 (1559).

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE was constituted by the Judicature act 30 & 31 Vict. c. 60, passed 5 Aug. 1873, to come into operation 1 Nov. 1874. In 1875, this was deleted to come into effect 1 Nov. 1875. The "Council of Judges," appointed by this act, met to consider questions relating to the reform of the law, 18 Jan. 1892. See under Judges.

The existing courts were to be united into one Supreme Court, divided into the High Court of Justice and the Court of Appeal. The High Court to consist of the lord chancellor, the two lord chief justices, the vice-chancellors, and the other judges (hereafter to consist of 21 judges.) Five divisions: 1. Chancery. 2. Common Pleas. 3. Exchequer. 4. Probate. 5. Divorce. Adjudication subject to alteration. The Court of Appeal to consist of five ex-officio judges, viz., lord chancellor, two lord chief justices, lord chief baron, master of the rolls, and such others as may be appointed (§§ 20, 21, 22). Appeals to the House of Lords or the judicial committee of the privy council to be continued.

Law and equity to be concurrently administered; law terms abolished; and sitting in vacation provided for. See under Terms.

The act passed 11 Aug. 1873, suspended §§ 20, 21, and 25, converted the proposed court of appeal into an intermediate court till 1 Nov. 1876. (See below.)

The Supreme Court of Judicature (comprising the High Court of Justice, Chancery division, Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer subdivisions) was revived by the Judicature Act 51 & 52 Vict. c. 9, 1880

After one term, it was said in the Times, "its operation has tended to economise judicial power and to prevent delay of justice."

By the Appellate Jurisdiction act (1876) the house of lords retains its powers as a court of ultimate appeal, and an appeal to the court consists of a petition by the lord chancellor, or two lords of appeal (to be created peers for life, with £1000 salary), and any peers who are or have been lawyers. Act to come into operation 1 Nov. 1876.

The court may sit during prorogation of parliament. The statute relating to the judicial committee of the privy council and to the intermediate court of appeal is amended.

By this act also the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer divisions of the Supreme Court are converted into 15 courts of first instance or primary courts.

Additional judge for chancery division appointed.

Style of ordinary judges—"of the court of appeal" to be "lord justices of the appeal;" other judges, "justices of the high court;" by act passed 24 April, 1877.

An amendment act (42 & 43 Vict. c. 78), relating to officers, fees, &c., passed 24 Aug. 1879.

At a meeting of the judges it was resolved to recommend the abolition of the exchequer and common pleas, and their consolidation into one, termed the "queen's bench division," under the lord chief justice of England, 30 Nov.; order in council, 16 Dec. 1880.

Carried into effect; old divisions at an end; judicature act carried out for the first time, 7 March, 1883.

Further changes made by the act 44 & 45 Vict. see, 68, passed 27 Aug. 1881, by it the master of the rolls was made a judge of appeal only, and the chief justices of England were given the powers of the chief justice of common pleas and the lord baron of the exchequer.

New code of rules of procedure issued about 9 July; came into force 24 Oct. 1883. See Clauses Amendment act passed (combining other acts), 14 Aug. 1884; other acts passed 14 Aug. 1890, 11 May, and 5 Aug. 1893 and 1894.

New rules issued, published, 3 June, decrease in business of the courts, attributed to acceleration of proceedings; reported June, Judicial statistics; published; 6 May, 1893, in two parts (civil and criminal).

Supreme court (appeals) bill passed, 6 June, 1899; another passed in 1902.

By the Supreme Court of Judicature act, 1906 (i.e. Edw. 7 & Geo. 5 c. 12), two additional judges of the High Courts, to be attached to the King's Bench division, were appointed.

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE FOR IRELAND constituted by act passed 14 Aug. 1877. Amended by an act passed 23 May, 1887, by which the titles of chief baron of the exchequer and chief justice of the common pleas are to be abolished at the next vacancies; again, 6 Aug. 1897.

COURT OF APPEAL: ex-officio members, lord chancellor, lord chief justice of Ireland, master of the rolls, lord chief justice of common pleas, and lord chief baron of exchequer. Ordinary members, two lords justices of appeal.

High Court of Justice: Chancery division, lord chancellor, master of the rolls, vice-chancellor and two lord justices.
Queen's Bench division: lord chief justice and three judges.

Common Pleas division: lord chief justice and two judges.

Exchequer division: lord chief baron and two judges.

Probate and Matrimonial division: one judge.

See under Chancery and the other divisions.

SURAT (E. Indies). Before the English East India Company obtained possession of Bombay, the presidency of their affairs on the coast of Malabar was at Surat; and they had a factory here established under captain Rest in 1611. The Great Mogul had here an officer who was styled his admirals. An attack of the Mahratta chief Sivajee, on the British factory, was defeated by sir George Oxenden, 1644. The English were again attacked in 1670 and 1702, and often subsequently. The SURGEONS. Barbers and surgeons were united in one company in 1549; but it was enacted that "no person...practising or barbery...shall occupy any surgery, letting of blood, or other matter, excepting only the drawing of teeth." In 1745 the surgeons and barbers of London were made distinct corporations. The college of surgeons obtained charters in 1745, 1800, and 1843 (when it was styled the "Royal College of Surgeons of England"). 1852 and 1859. Since that period, various legislative and other important regulations have been adopted to promote their utility and respectability; and no person is legally entitled to practise as a surgeon in the cities of London and Westminster, or within seven miles of the former, who has not been examined at this college. The college in Lincoln's-in-fields was remodelled in 1839, and the interior completed in 1842. The premises were enlarged in 1852-3. The museum began with the Hunterian collection, 1800; and the library was founded in 1801. Centenary of the college celebrated, 26 July, 1900. Mrs. Mary Emily Dowson, the first lady surgeon duly qualified to act, was invested with the letters testimonial of the Irish college of surgeons, June, 1896. See Anatomical Medical and Surgical Establishment. Royal college of surgeons, Edinburgh, received its charter from James V. 1555; another received in 1778, and a fuller one, 1851; Dublin, incorporated, 1756. SURGERY. It was not until the age of Hippocrates that diseases were made a separate study from philosophy, &c., about 410 B.C. Hippocrates mentions the ambe, the ancient instrument with which they reduced dislocated bones. Celsus flourished about A.D. 17; Galen, 170; Aetius, 500; Paulus Aegineta, in 640. The Arabians revived surgery about 900; and in the 16th century a new era in the science began; between these periods surgery was confined to ignorant priests and barbers. Anatomy was cultivated under Vesalius, the father of modern surgery, in 1538. Surgeons and doctors were exempted from bearing arms or serving on juries, 1513, at which period there were only 13 in London; see Physic and Photography, 1856. For antisepctic treatment see Germ Theory. Death of prof. Albert Musset, aged 65 (originator of the method of treating bones affected with a filling composed of treacid and petroleum, a treatment which often rendered amputation unnecessary)... end April, 1907.

SURINAM (Dutch Guiana), discovered by Ojeda, 1499. The factories established by the English in 1640 were occupied by the Portuguese, 1643; by the Dutch, 1654; taken by the British, 1699, 1704; and restored to the Dutch, 1802, 1814. Plantation riot, Mayor the manager killed, troops flung on the rioters, 13 killed, 49 wounded, reported... . . . . . . . . . 31 July, 1902.

SURNAMEs were introduced into England by the Normans, and were adopted by the nobility about 1100. The old Normans used Fitz, which signifies son, as Fitz-herbert. The Irish used O, for grandson, as O'Neel, O'Donnell. The Scottish Highlanders used Mac, as Macdonald, son of Donald. The Welsh used Ap, as Ap Rhys, the son of Rhys; Ap Richard. The prefix Ap eventually was combined with the name of the father, hence Prys, Pritchard, &e. The northern nations added the word son to the father's name, as Williamson. Many of the most common surnames, such as Johnson, Wilson, Dyson, Nicholson, &c., were taken by Brabanters and other Flemings, who were naturalised in the reign of Henry VI., 1435.

SURPLICES were first worn by the Jewish priests, and are said to have been first used in churches in the fourth century, and encouraged by pope Adrian, 576. "Every minister saying public prayers shall wear a comely surplice with sleeves." Canon 58. The garb prescribed by stat. 2 Edw. VI. 1547; again 1 Eliz. 1558; and 13 & 14 Chas. II. 1662.

SURREY CHAPEL. Blackfriars-road, was built for Calvinistic dissenters in 1783; the rev. Rowland Hill, their minister, who died in 1833, was buried in a vault here. The congregation under the rev. Newman Hall (died 18 Feb. 1862) removed to Christ church, in Westminster-road, July, 1876. See Lincoln Tower.

SURREY HOUSE MUSEUM. Forest Hill, containing the collections of Mr. F. Horniman, cost about 100,000l. presented by him to the public, was opened by sir More Mackenzie, 24 Dec. 1890.

SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS (near London) were established in 1831, by Mr. Edward Cross, who brought hither the menagerie formerly at Exeter change. Various picture models were exhibited subsequent to 1837, viz., Vesuvius, Ireland, &c., accompanied by fireworks. In 1850, a company which had taken the gardens, erected a large yet elegant building for concerts; the architect being Mr. Horace Jones. On 19 Oct. 1856, when the hall contained about 9000 persons, attending to hear the rev. c. h. Spurgeon, seven were killed and thirty seriously injured, by a false alarm of fire. It was burnt 11 June, 1861; see Fires.

SURTEES SOCIETY for publishing MSS. relating to the northern counties, established 1834: 108 volumes have been published, 1910.

SURVEY ACT, passed 12 May, 1870. See Ordinance Survey.

SURVEYORS, INSTITUTION OF, London, founded in 1808, to promote the "knowledge which constitutes the profession of a surveyor." Incorporated by royal charter as "The Surveyors' Institution" in 1881. The number of members, 1,200 in 1866; about 3,000 in 1880.

SUSA, or SHUSHAN, capital of Susiana, a province of Persia, was taken by Alexander the Great, 337 B.C.

SUSPENSION BRIDGES are ancient in China. The Hungerford (or Charing-cross) suspension bridge, opened May 1, 1884, was removed to Clifton and opened there, 8 Dec. 1894. Parliament empowered the commissioners of woods to erect (among other improvements there) a suspension bridge at Battersea, Sept. 1896; and many bridges of similar construction have been erected in various parts of the kingdom. Lambeth and Westminster suspension bridges were opened May 1, 1862; see Menai Strait, Hungerford, Clifton, &c.

SUSPENSOR BILL, the name given to "a bill to prevent for a limited time (to 1 Aug. 1864) new appointments in the church of Ireland; and to restrain, for the same period, in certain respects, the proceedings of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland." This bill was introduced into the commons by Mr. Gladstone, 14 May, and passed through committee, 5 June; rejected by the lords (102 to 97), 30 June, 3 A.M., 1888. A similar bill, with limitations relating to Wales and Montgomeryshire, introduced by Mr. Asquith, read first time (901 to 215), 23 Feb., 1893; withdrawn, Sept., 1893; see Church of England, May, 1893.

SUTLEJ. a river in N.W. India, the ancient Hyphasis or Hupana, on the banks of which were fought the desperate battles of Aliwad, 28 Jan., and Sobraon, 10 Feb., 1840 (which see).

SUTTEE. the burning of widows. This custom began in India from one of the wives of "Brahma, the Son of God," sacrificing herself at his death, that she might attend him in heaven. Seventeen widows have burnt themselves on the funeral pile of a rajah; and in Bengal alone, 700 have thus perished in a year. The English government, after long discouraging suttees, by the agency of Lord Wellesley, formed a resolution (17 Dec. 1829); but they have since occasionally taken place. The wife of the son of the rajah of Beyozoung thus perished, June, 1864, and several wives of sir Jung Bahadoor, minister of Nepal, 1 March, 1877. Suttees still occur.

Legislative interference with the Hindoo marriage laws declared by lord Dufferin, vicerey, to be ineffectual: moral influence progressing (see under Hindu). Oct. 1886.

SUXANOW (or SUXOROFF), a group of small uninhabited islands in the Pacific, about 450 miles NNW. of the Samoan isles, annexed by Great Britain, 1859.

SVEABORG, a strong fortress in Finland, the Gibraltar of the north, 34 miles south of Helsingfor; it is situated on seven rocky islands; the fortifications were commenced by the Swedes in 1748, and completed after Finland was united to Russia in 1809. On 6 Aug., 1853, the English and French fleet anchored off Sveaborg, and bombarded it by mortar and gun-boats from the 6th to the 11th, causing destruction of nearly all the principal buildings, including the dock-yard and arsenal. Four casualiies and no loss of life ensued in the allied squadron, but this success was not followed up.

SWABIA, a province in S. Germany; was conquered by Clevis, and incorporated into the kingdom of the Franks, 966. After various changes of rulers, it was made a duchy by the emperor Conrad I., in 912, for Erfchanger; according to some, in 916, for Burchhardt. The duchy became hereditary in the house of Hohenstaufen in 1180. Duke Frederick H. I. became emperor of Rome, confirmed in style of Germany, by Frederick I., emperially styled Barbarossa, red beard, in 1152. Conradin, his descendant, was defeated at the battle of Tagliacozzo (which see), in 1268, and beheaded shortly after. The breaking up of the duchy gave rise to many of the small German states; part of Swabia is included in Wurttemberg and Switzerland. Swabia was made a circle of the empire in 1587 and 1590. A league, composed of Swabian cities and states, about 1254, was the germ of the great Swabian league, formed for the preservation of the peace of Germany, under the auspices of the emperor Frederick, in 1288.

SWANSEA. Glamorgan-shire, an ancient Welsh town; seat of the copper trade since 1719. New dock opened by the prince of Wales, 18 Oct.

SWAT, or VAT, a river, N.W. India. The Akhond, Abdul Ghulur, originally an austere Mahometan fanatic, about 1822, gradually obtained temporal power over the tribes in the hills near Afghanistan, dying in high reputation, about 1878.

SWAZILAND. South Africa, a tract of about 6,500 square miles, nearly surrounded by the Transvaal territory; population, 84,520 natives, 890 whites and 72 other coloured people, 1904. Estimated 1910, 99,750.

Great disorders through the weakness of the king, Umbandla; influenced successively by white factions, white factions, English and Boers; the king dies, 6 Oct., 1889.

To settle the government of the country, sir Francis de Winton was appointed British commissioner, sailed 3 Oct.; Boer commissioner appointed, 17 Dec., 1890.

Boon, eldest son of Umbandla, elected king; Mr. Shepstone appointed to take charge of European affairs, 24 Oct.
Sir Francis de Winton and the Transvaal commissioners meet two head-men of the Swazis; results: the independence of the nation to be preserved; the accession of the king recognized; the queen-mother to be regent during his minority; Mr. Shepstone to be adviser; the commissioners to govern the whites during their stay, to be succeeded by 3 delegates; a legal tribunal to be appointed to inquire respecting concessions of land to the whites, 11 Dec.

The queen-regent (by Mr. Shepstone) proceeds submission to the commissioners, about 16 Dec.; the commissioners appoint 3 delegates (British, Boer, and Swazi) to help the queen, pending the decision in the Transvaal government, and leave, Dec.

At a conference with president Kruger at Kimbernouts, he was agreed to defer the settlement for four months, 12 March, 1890.

Independence of the Swazis reaffirmed by a convention; a joint administration over the white settlers to be established with other conditions; signed by president Kruger; reported 4 Aug.; ratified by the volksraad, 8 Aug.

SWEATING.

SWEATING SYSTEM, a term applied, especially in the east end of London, to the practice carried on by large tradesmen of entrusting orders to middlemen termed "sweaters," who employ men, women, and children (principally foreigners) to make and finish, for cash, baskets, toys, or their own houses at excessively low wages with many evil consequences. Lord Dunraven's motion for a select committee of inquiry was carried in the house, 18 Feb., 1883; an address was moved to the Earl of Derby, and others appointed 9 March, 1883. Painfully distressing evidence was obtained. The origin of the evil is attributed to the great competition in producing extreme cheapness. The sufferings of the Cradley Heath chimney-makers, nail-makers, and others were disclosed to the committee, March, 1885. Anti-sweating league formed in London, 1 Oct., 1883. The fifth and final report recommends that no legislation cannot impose capital should enquire into the way in which their work is carried on, with the view of improvement. May, 1885. Blue book published, 19 May, 1885.

SWEDEN (N. Europe). The ancient inhabitants were the Fins, now the modern inhabitants of Finland, who retired to their present territory on the appearance of the ScandinaVians or Goths, who have ever since been masters of Sweden; see Scandinavia, and Norway, 1691. The internal state of this kingdom is little known previous to the 11th century. By the union of Calmar in 1380, Sweden became a province of Denmark, and was not wholly rescued from this subjection till 1521, when Gustavus Vasa recovered the kingdom from the Danish yoke. He became king in 1523, and his descendants ruled till 1809. The government of Sweden is a limited monarchy. The diet consists of four orders, the nobles, the clergy, the peasants, and the burgheb, and meet every three years. The king is, as in Britain, the head of the executive. There are two universities. Upsal and Lund; and Sweden can boast, among its great men, Linnaeus, Celsius, Scheele, Bergman, Berzelius, Thorwaldsen, and Andersen.

SWEBENBOGians is the name given to those who adopt the theological teachings of Emmanuel Swedenborg, but the organization calls itself The New Church, or New Jerusalem Church.

Swedenborg was born in Stockholm, 20 January, 1688, died in London 24th March, 1772; interred in a vault of the Swedish church in Prince's-square, near the Tower of London; remains taken home by the Swedish Government and deposited with much ceremony in Uusila cathedral, 1868.

Assessor in the Swedish Royal College of Mines, 1777-1747, with a seat in the Upper House of the Legislature.

Embellished by queen Ulrica Eleanora, 1746.

Wrote many scientific and philosophical works, his Principia, Economy of the Animal Kingdom, &c., being published at the expense of the duke of Brunswick.

In 1743 he began his work as a theologian, writing, Divina Celtsina, Heaven and Hell, True Christian Religion, Divine Love and Wisdom, Divine Providence, Apocalypse Revealed, &c., &c.

In London meetings of his followers began in 1783; they organized for public worship in 1785.

Swedenborg Society for publishing his works founded 1820.

Missionary and Tract Society of the New Church, 1821.

National Missionary Institution, 1857.

Swed. Church coll. 1825.

New Church Orphanage, 1852.

In 1916 there were over 71 churches in Great Britain connected with the General Conference, and 6 independent Tract Societies. In America there were connected with the General Convention, and many important circles in affiliation.

In Canada there were several places of worship, and others in Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa.

Also in France, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Sweden, Denmark, &c.

Their belief is that the whole Godhead is centred in Jesus Christ, who is Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; Creator, Redeemer, and Saviour; one in essence and person; in whom is a Trinity of Love, Wisdom, and Power; answering to the trinity in man of soul, body, and the operation; that Salvation is effected by faith in Him and obedience to Him, the Lord operating with the man, and the man cooperating with the Lord, and that Charity and Faith are together in good works; that the Sacred Scripture is the Word of God and Divine Truth itself, the literal sense being the basis and continent of a spiritual sense in all and every part, and that the word is in all the beavers and the wisdom of the angels is thence derived.

The judgment is a spiritual being fitted for life in the spiritual world, clothed temporarily with a material body for life in this world, which at his death he sheds and goes to the state of the spirits where the judgment was in the spiritual world during Swedenborg's lifetime; and that the Lord's Second Coming has taken place in the revelation to man by the Word of Wisdom, the instrument of Swedenborg, of a new system of truth derived from the inner or spiritual sense of Scripture, based upon the literal sense when properly understood, and having special application to the spiritual life and needs of man, here and hereafter.

The centenary of this society was celebrated by an International Swedenborg Congress attended by 1,000 guests, 1868.

SWEET-BAY. Laurus nobilis, was brought to this realm from Italy before 1528. Laurus indica, or Royal Bay, was brought from Madeira in 1603.

SWING. Between 1830 and 1833 many haystacks and barns were fired in the rural districts of England, and attributed to an imaginary person named "Swing." Many persons were caught and punished. The probable cause was disputes between the farmers and their dissatisfied labourers.

SWISS GUARDS, Royal, in France, formed in 1616; massacred while defending the Tuileries, 10 Aug. 1792; re-organised Sept. 1815; defeated during the insurrection, 28 July, 1830; dismissed by Charles X. Aug. 1830.

Papal Swiss guard founded at end of 15th century when pope Pius II, made a formal agreement with the city of Zurich to furnish a guard for his person; a small body of Swiss soldiers had already existed in Rome and had been used as a bodyguard both by Nicholas V. in 1446 and Sixtus IV. in 1471, but so far had enjoyed no permanent constitution. The fourth centenary of the guard was commemorated by pope Pius X. during the week commencing 21 Jan. 1916.

SWITHIN'S DAY, St., 15 July. St. Swithin lived in the 9th century; and, having been the preceptor to King Ethelwulf, was made bishop of Winchester in 852, and died 2 July, 862. The bishopric of Winchester was raised forty days in consequence of the proposed removal of his remains from the churchyard to the cathedral.

SWITZERLAND was in ancient times inhabited by the Helvetii (see sect.). The country was conquered by the Romans after it had been overrun by the Helvetii in their invasion of Gaul, 58 B.C., and the people were gradually combined with the Romans and partook of the fortunes of their empire. The canton Schaffhausen has given name to the whole confederacy. — The present national council is elected every third year, at the rate of one member for 2000 persons. The president of the confederation of the 22 cantons is annually elected.

In 1848 Rose discovered that tantalum was really a mixture of three metals, which he named tantalum, niobium, and peltophium.—Gmelin.

TANZIMAT, see Turkey, 1839-44.

TAOISM, one of the three religions of China. The name is derived from the Tao, or "Way," a treatise written by Li Urh, or Lao-izze, a contemporary of Confucius in the sixth century B.C. The "Way" is the quiet, passionless discharge of all our duties, "Heaven" not being a ruler, but a pattern. Taoism was modified by the introduction of Buddhism.

TAPESTRY. An art of weaving borrowed from the Saracens, and hence its original workers in France were called Sarrazins. The invention of tapestry hangings belongs [the date is not mentioned] to the Netherlands.—Gnievciordoni. Manufactured in France under Henry IV. by artists invited from Flanders, 1600. The art was brought into England by William Sheldon; and the first manufacture of it was established at Mortlake by sir Francis Crane, 17 James I. 1619.—Salmon.

TAR (said to have been derived from Tarifa, where duties were formerly collected), a book of duties charged on goods exported or imported. For Mr. McKinley's tariff bill see United States, Oct. 18 90. See Free Trade, Protection, &c.

TARIFF REFORM LEAGUE, inaugurated 21 July, 1903, for the employment of the tariff with a view to its use to consolidate and develop the resources of the Empire, and to defend the industries of the United Kingdom. The league, which is independent of political parties, carries on its propaganda by means of meetings, lectures, and literature on the subject; it also supports members of parliament and parliamentary candidates who are in favour of tariff reform. Branches of the league have been formed in every constituency in England and Wales, with the exception of the counties of Worcestershire, Warwick, Shropshire, and Staffordshire, which form the area worked by the Imperial tariff committee at Birmingham.

A federation of the South Wales branches of the Tariff reform league, with Lord Dunraven as president, was formed at Cardiff, 9 Nov. 1899. South London federation of the Tariff reform league initiated, 13 Nov. 1899. Northern tariff reform federation, first annual meeting held at Newcastle, 28 Jan. 1899. Lord Rosebery speaks to the business men of Glasgow on tariff reform, 10 Sept. 1899.

TARPEIAN ROCK (Rome), owed its name to the tradition that Tarpeia, daughter of Tarpeius, the keeper of the Roman citadel, was here crushed to death by the shields cast on her by the Sabines, whom she treacherously admitted, having bargained for their victory. They were about to give her their left arms, meaning their bracelets: about 750 B.C.

TARRAGONA (N.E. Spain), occupied as a naval station by the British before their capture of Gibraltar in 1704. It was stormed and sacked by the French under Sucquet, 25 Jan. 1711, and the inhabitants put to the sword. Population, 1887, 27,225; 1910 (est.), 36,250.

TARTAR or HIGHLAND PLAID, the dress of the Scottish Highlanders, said to have been derived from the ancient Gauls, or Celts, the Galli non bracelet.

TARTARIC ACID is said to have been the first discovery of the eminent chemist, Scheele, who procured it in a separate state by boiling tar with lime, and in decomposing the tartrate of lime thus formed by means of sulphuric acid, about 1770. In 1899, by Liebig formed tartaric acid from other sources.

TARTARY, a name given in the middle ages to a part of Central Asia and Eastern Europe, see TURKESTAN and CROMN. The Tartars, or Tartars, or Mongols, or Moguls, were known in antiquity as Scythians. During the decline of the Roman empire, these tribes began to seek more fertile regions; and the first who reached the frontier of Italy were the Huns, the ancestors of the modern Mongols. The first acknowledged sovereign of this vast country was the famous Genghis Khan. His empire, by the conquest of China, Persia, and all central Asia (1206-27), became one of the most formidable ever established; but it was split into parts in a few reigns. Tamerlan, or Tamerlane, again conquered Persia, broke the power of the Tarics in Asia Minor (1370-1400), and founded the Mogul dynasty in India, which began with Baber in 1525, and formed the most splendid court in Asia till the close of the 18th century; see Golden Horde. The Calmucks, a branch of the Tartars, expelled from China, settled on the banks of the Volga in 1722, but returned in 1774, and thousands perished on the journey.

TASMANIA, the name now given to the British settlement in Van Diemen's Land (which see).

TATTERSALL'S, see Races.

TAUNTON (Somerset) was taken by Perkin Warbeck, Sept. 1497; and here he was surrendered to Henry VII. 5 Oct. following. The duke of Monmouth was proclaimed king at Taunton, 20 June, 1685; and it was the scene of the "bloody asise" held by Jeffreys upon the rebels in August. The castle restored and a fine museum opened by Lord Cork, 21 May, 1902. Population, 1901, 21,078; 1909 (est.), 23,048.

TAVERS may be traced to the 13th century. "In the reign of king Edward the Third, only three taverns were allowed in London: one in Chepe, one in Wabrook, and the other in Lombard-street."—Spenser, The Breast Head, in Eastcheap, existed in the reign of Henry IV., and was the rendezvous of prince Henry and his dissolute companions. Shakespeare mentions it as the residence of Mrs. Quickly, and the scene of Falstaff's merriment.—Shakespeare, "Henry IV." The White Hart, Bishopsgate, established in 1480, was rebuilt in 1829. Tavers were licensed in 1752.

Taverns were re-licensed by 7 Edward VI., 1552-6, to 40 in London, 8 in York, 4 in Norwich, 3 in Wrexham, 5 in Bristol, 1 in Lincoln, 4 in Hull, 3 in Shrewsbury, 4 in Exeter, 3 in Salisbury, 4 in Gloucester, 4 in Chester, 3 in Hereford, 3 in Worcester, 3 in Southampton, 3 in Canterbury, 3 in Ipswich, 3 in Winchester, 5 in Oxford, 4 in Cambridge, 3 in Colchester, 4 in Newcastle upon-Yonne.

TAXES were levied by Solomon, the Athenian legislator, about 594 B.C. The first class of citizens paid an Attic talent of silver, about 55% of our money. Darius, the son of Hystaspes, levied a land-tax by assessment, which was deemed so odious that his subjects styled him, by way of derision, Darius the Taxer, 489 B.C.—1 If Eum. Taxes in specie were first introduced into England by William I., 1067, and he raised them arbitrarily; yet subsidies in kind, as in wool, leather, and other products of the country, continued till the accession of Richard II., 1377—1519; see Revenue and Income Tax. "TAXES ON KNOWLEDGE" (see Advertisement Duty, Newspaper Stamp, and Paper Duty). For his exertions in repealing these, a testimonial was presented to Mr. T. Milner Gibson in 1861. The assessed taxes now include land tax, house duty, and property and income tax. The Taxes Management act, 45 & 46 Vict. c. 19, passed 6 Aug., 1880 (see below). The elder Wm. Pitt, in his great speech on the Stamp act imposed on the colonies without their consent, 1765-69, said that taxation and representation should go hand in hand. See Stamp Duties. Receipts from general taxation, 1901-5, 120,530,000l.

TELEKOPHONIX, or speaking telegraph, consisted of piping of gutta percha, enameled, class, or earthenware, with a terminal mouthpiece of ivory, bone, wood, or metal. It was used for dockyards and large establishments. It was described by Mr. Francis Whishaw at the meeting of the British Association at Swansea, August, 1851.

TEL-EL-KEBIR, Egypt, the site of the entrenched camp of the rebel general, Arabi Pasha, his force being about 15,000 infantry, 2,500 cavalry, 6,000 Bedouins and other irregulars, and 70 guns; captured by the British 13 Sept. 1882.

Sir Garnet Wolseley broke up his camp at Ismailia on the night of 12 Sept. and began his advance at 1:30 a.m., his force being about 11,000 infantry, 2,000 cavalry, and 49 guns; the troops marched rapidly in the dark. At daylight they arrived at the camp. The surprised Egyptians filled the trenches and fought well under cover; but when the British sent up the parapets, they at first resisted bravely, but afterwards fled, being hotly pursued by the British cavalry, leaving all their guns, ammunition, &c. &c. The Egyptians were killed or made prisoners. Arabi Pasha fled towards Cairo. Arabi Pasha's army was completely broken up, and the British entered Cairo the next day, 14 Sept. British killed 432, and 383 wounded, Egyptian killed and wounded about 1500. The Highlanders bore the brunt of the action.

TELEMETER, &c., an instrument for determining the distance between a gun and the object fired at. Lieut. von Ehrenberg and major Montaudon, in Baden, constructed a telemeter the size of a watch, by which the distance is determined and shown on a dial by the action of sound, 1878-85. Telephotometer, another apparatus for ascertaining the distance from point to point, invented by Dr. Luigi Cerabottani, was announced in Sept. 1885; two telescopes are employed.

TELEPHONE (from Greek, tela, afar, phone, voice, sound), a name now given to apparatus for transmitting articulate and musical sounds, by means of wire, vibrating rods, threads, or magnetoelectric currents, &c. Phono-telephone, Phonograph, Microphone, Phonopeur. Robert Hooke conveyed sounds to a distance by stretched wire. Wheatstone conveyed the sounds of a musical-box from a cellar to upper rooms by means of a deal rod (termed "Enchanted Lyre"). 1824. Page galvanic musical tones by magnetising and demagnetising an iron bar. 1837. The principle of the telephone by Dr. Bell. 1843. Professor Pecor lectured on Wheatstone's telephone before the queen at the Polytechnic, 10 May 1855. Philip Reis exhibited a partially articulate electric telephone at Frankfurt, 25 April 1861. Elisha Gray improved Reis's telephone, and is said to have anticipated prof. Bell's discovery. 1873. Cronwell Varley produced a musical one, 1879; played on at the Queen's Theatre, Long-acre, 1 Feb. 1877.

Professor A. Graham Bell's articulating telephone proves that a sound from a charted disk of iron, vibrating in front of a permanent magnet, surrounded by a coil of insulated copper wire; the sound or voice causes the vibration of the disk, thereby generating an electric current of electricity which, sent round a similar coil on a distant magnet, sets vibrating another disk, and thus the sound is reproduced; sound is converted into electricity and electricity reconverted into sound.) Experiments at Boston and Salem, United States (3 miles apart); speech, music, singing, laughing, &c., distinctly heard. 12 Feb. 1876. This telephone exhibited by Mr. W. H. Proctor before the British Association, Plymouth, 23 Aug. 1877; before queen Victoria at Osborne, 14, 15 Jan. 1878. Telephone company established. 1878. Edison's carbon "taped" speaking telephone; conversation heard between London and Norwich; 315 miles of wire. 11 Nov. Mr. F. A. Gower improves Bell's telephone; shown at Royal Institution, London by 20, 21 March, 1879. Telephone Exchange (Edison's system), Lombard-street; ten offices connect; private conversation between two persons in either a built or low-lying condition; successfully tried 1 Sept. 1879. TESTAMENT, see Bibles and Wills.

TESTER, testone, a silver coin struck in France by Louis XII., 1513; and also in Scotland in the time of Francis II., and of Mary, queen of Scots, 1559. It was so called from the head of the king, stamped upon it. In England the tester was of 12d. value in the reign of Henry VIII., afterwards 6d.

TESTRI (N. France). Pepin d'Heristal, invited by malcontents, here defeated and captured Thierry III., king of Austrasia, and established himself as duke, 687.

TEITENHALL (Staffordshire). It was probably at this place, then named Teetenhead, that the Danes were defeated by the Saxon king, Edward the Elder, 6 Aug., 910.

TEITUAN (Morocco) was entered by the Spaniards 6 Feb., 1860, after gaining a decisive victory on 4 Feb. The general O'Donnell was made a grandee of the first class.

TEUTOBERG FOREST (the Teutoburgian saltus, Tectici), probably situated between Detmold and Paderborn, where Hermann, or Arminius, and the Germans defeated the Romans under Varus, with very great slaughter, A.D. 9. Varus and many of his officers preferred suicide to captivity. This defeat was regarded at Rome as a national calamity, and Augustus, in agony, cried, "Varus, give me my legions!"

TEUTONES, a people of Germany, who with the Umbri made incursions upon Gaul, and cut to pieces two Roman armies, 113 and 102 B.C. They were at last defeated by the consul Marius at Aix, and a great number made prisoners, 102,000 B.C. (see Cimbri), with whom authors commonly join the Teutones. The appellation came to be applied to the German nation in general (hence Deutsche).

TEUTONIC ORDER, military knights established in the Holy Land about 1191, through the humanity of the Germans (Teutones) to the sick and wounded of the Christian army in the Holy Land, under Guy of Lusignan, before Antioch. The order was confirmed by a bull of pope Cele- stine III. On their return to Germany, the knights were invited to subdue and christianise the country now called Prussia and its neighbourhood, which they gradually accomplished. Their territories were invaded, and their army was defeated, with great slaughter, near Tannenberg, in East Prussia, by Jagellon, duke of Lithuania, 15 July, 1410, when the grand master and many of the knights were slain. A large part of their possessions were incorporated into Poland in 1366, and into Brandenburg about 1521. In 1525, the grand master was made a prince of the empire, and the order much weakened. Its remaining possessions were seized by Napoleon I., in 1809. Marienburg castle (about 1274) and chapel restored and dedicated by the emperor, 5 June, 1792. See Prussia, &c.

TEWKESBURY (Gloucestershire), where Edward IV. gained a decisive victory over the Lancastrians, 4 May, 1471. Queen Margaret, the consort of Henry VI., was taken prisoner, and her son killed. The queen was conveyed to the Tower of London, whereking Henry expiated his mistake by this fatal engagement; being, as is generally supposed, murdered by the duke of Gloucester, afterwards Richard III. The queen was ransomed in 1475 by the French king, Louis XI., for 50,000 crowns. Population, 1901, 5,500; 1910 (est.), 6,420.

The abbey, founded by Robert Fitz-Hamon, cousin of William I., was established and confirmed 1213, greatly altered, 14th century; a monastery destroyed by Henry VIII.; the abbey spared; restored by G. G. Scott, 1877-9.

TEXAS (N. America) was settled by the French, 1687, who were expelled soon after. It revolted from Mexico in 1823; was helped by the Americans in 1826. Its independence was acknowledged in 1836. Its proposed annexation led to war between Mexico and the United States. It was admitted into the Union by the latter in 1845; seceded from it in 1861; submitted in 1865; re-admitted to state rights, March, 1870. The coast was desolated by a great storm, 15-18 Sept., 1875. Population 1860, 3,045,710; 1910 (est.) 5,534,825; capital, Austin. See Soturna.

THAMES EMBANKMENT.

Recommended by sir Christopher Wren, 1666, and by Wm. Paterson, founder of the bank of England, about 1674. The corporation embarked a mile in 1677. It was further recommended by Gwynne, 1767, by sir Frederick Eden, 1782; by sir Frederick Trench, 1824; by James Walker; by the duke of Newcastle, 1844; and by John Martin the painter, 1846. In 1856, the Metropolitan Board of Works recommended that the north bank of the Thames should be embanked, whereby the bed of the river would be improved; a low-level sewer could be constructed below land. It was hoped that the establishment of a new road for it would be made through a part of the embankment wall, the expense of which might be defrayed by the duty on coal, and by means provided by government. The principle of this recommendation was approved by parliament, and a committee was appointed, which first sat 30 April, 1861

An act for "embanking the North side of the Thames from Westminster bridge to Blackfriars bridge, and for making new streets in and near thereto," passed 7 Aug.; the work begun in Nov. 1862

They first established themselves in France, according to Rénéau, in Paris, 1654. The Theatines vainly endeavoured to revive among the clergy the poverty of the apostles.

THEATRE (Greek theatron, "a place for seeing"). Greek theatres for the exhibition of the drama and musical performances were gradually developed from the ring in which songs and choruses were performed in honour of Dionysus or Bacchus. Greek theatres are well described and illustrated in Mr. Robert W. Lowe's article Theatre in Chambers's Encyclopedia. 1862. The theatre of Dionysus at Athens could contain 50,000 spectators, and that of Epidaurus (which see), 14,000. The revival of the drama in the 16th century led to the construction of modern theatres on Greek models such as that at Rome by Bramante, 1550; the Teatro Olimpico at Vicenza by Palladio, 1584. See Amphithetres, Comedie Francaise, and Opéra.

THEATRES IN ENGLAND. The first royal licence for a theatre in England was in 1574, to master Burbage and four others, servants of the earl of Leicester, to act plays at the Globe, Bankside. It is stated the first play-house in London was erected at Shoreditch, and called the "Theatre" in 1576, and that the Curtain near it, was erected in 1577. The Blackfriars was built in 1579. The other London theatres in Elizabethan times were Whitefriars, Rose, Hope, Swan, Red Bull, Cockpit or Phoenix, and several others. Shakespeare and his fellow actors erected the Globe theatre on Bankside, about 1594. The prices of admission are said to have been—gallery, 2d.; lords' rooms, 1s.; see Dream, Henry Lane, and other theatres. The theatres were closed by parliament, 1642-60.

Shakespeare became joint proprietor of Blackfriars theatre.

The apparatus of the "compagnie du theatrophone" of Paris was exhibited at the Savoy hotel, and by its means the performance of the "Naught Girl" at the Savoy theatre was said to be well heard, 14 Dec. 1891.

THERAN LEGION, according to tradition, was composed of devadasis, and submitted to martyrdom rather than attack their brethren during the persecution of the emperor Maximin, or sacrifice to the gods, about A.D. 280. Their leader Maurice was canonised.

THERES or LUXOR, in Upper Egypt, called also Diosopolis, as being sacred to Jupiter. Homer, its foundation is mythically attributed to Osiris. It is said to have been the most magnificent capital of Egypt about 600 B.C., having a circumference of about 14 geographical miles. It was then the chief seat of the worship of Ammon, or Ammon, the Zeus Ammon of the Greeks, and the Jupiter Ammon of the Romans, and hence was called No Ammon by the Hebrews. Thbes was ruined by Cambyses, king of Persia, 522 B.C., and again by Alexander, 336 B.C.; it rebelled and was taken by Ptolemy Lathythus, 86 b.c., and few traces of it have been seen in the age of Juvenal; see Memnonium. After centuries of neglect, its wonderful ruins have been greatly visited since the explorations of Belzoni, 1819-22. The tomb of Amenophis II, abt. 1800 B.C., XVII dynasty, and other tombs and antiquities, discovered by M. Loret in perfect preservation, March, 1868. Thebes, N. Greece (the capital is mythically said to have been founded by Cadmus).
THEFT.

The legendary history of Delphi and his family, celebrated by the Greek tragic poets, belongs to Thebes. It became a republic about 1120 B.C., and flourished under Epaminondas 372-362 B.C. The sacred band" formed by him, 377 B.C., was revived in 1877. Thebes' seven gates are mentioned by Homer. See Boston and Greece. Thebes suffered much by earthquakes, and in March, 1857, was nearly destroyed by earthquakes, 20 April seq. 1851: active relief measures were organized.

Thebes is the ancient site of Denderah, in connection with the excavations of the Egypt Exploration Fund, during the winter season of 1894, nearly the best preserved of the few Egyptian temples in situ of earlier date than the XVIIIth dynasty, is situated near to the beautiful temple erected by queen Hatshepsen on the Nubian, or the XVIIIth dynasty. Many results of great importance to the knowledge of Egyptian art and architecture and their development, raised by this discovery, 23 April, 1894. Further excavations: interesting discoveries of sarcophagi, statues, reliefs, etc., made in the temple during the winter of 1894-5.

Discovery by the explorers of the Egypt exploration fund of a shrine of Athene; life-size statue of the goddess represented in the form of a cow in painted limestone, found in an excellent state of preservation, restored 1 March, 1896.

Discovery of the tomb and mummy of queen Tete, the mother and inspirer of the famous "heretic king" of Egyptology, Amenhotep IV., by Mr. Theodore M. Davis; for description of the tomb, see Times, 2 Feb. 1897.

Mr. Theodore M. Davis, excavating in the Valley of the Tombs of the Kings, discovers the jewels of queen Tateni, Times, 24 Feb. 1896.

THEFT was punished by heavy fines among the Jews; by death at Athens, by the laws of Draco; see Draco. The Anglo-Saxons nominally punished theft with death, if above 12d. value; but the criminal could redeem his life by a ransom. In the 9th of Henry I. this power of redemption was taken away, 1168. The punishment of theft was very severe in England, till mitigated by Peel's act (see Peel's act, Feb. 1829). The laws respecting theft were consolidated in 1896. Larceny act passed 14 Aug. 1812; another passed, 2 Aug. 1891.

THEINE, see Caffeine.

THEISTS (Theos, God), a name given to deists about 1662. See Davenantine, and designing.

THELUSON'S Wills, a most singular document. Mr. Peter Isaac Thelusson, a Genevan and an affluent merchant of London, left £100,000 to his widow and children; and the remainder of his property, more than £200,000, be accumulated during the lives of his three sons, and the lives of his sons; then the estates, directed to be purchased with the produce of the accumulated fund, were to be conveyed to the eldest living male descendant of his three sons, with the benefit of survivorship. Should no heir then exist, the whole was to be applied, by the executor, in the sinking fund, to the discharge of the national debt. It is said that Mr. Thelusson held much property in trust, and that he desired a sufficient interval of time to elapse for the appearance of just claimants. He died 21 July, 1797. His will incurred much public censure, and was contested by the heir-at-law, finally settled by a decision of the house of lords, 25 June, 1805. The last surviving grandson died in Feb. 1836. A dispute then arose whether the eldest male descendant or the male descendant of the eldest son should inherit the property. The question was decided on appeal by the house of lords (6 June, 1856), in favour of the latter, lord Wendeslham and Charles S. Thelusson confirming the decision of the Master of the Rolls in 1838. In consequence of the legal expenses the property is said not to exceed greatly its value in the testator's lifetime. On 28 July, 1800, the Thelusson act was passed, restraining testators from devising their property for purposes of accumulation for longer than 21 years after death; any other direction to be void.

THEOCRACY, government by God, existed among the Israelites till Saul was made king, about 1095 B.C. (Semi. viii. 7.)

THEODOLITE, an instrument for measuring horizontal angles, used in surveying, consists of a telescope and a divided circle. It was probably first constructed in the 17th century. Jesse Ramsden, in 1785, completed the great theodolite employed in the trigonommetrical survey of England and Wales by general Ray.

THEODOSIAN CODE, see Codes.

"THEOLOGIA GERMANICA," or "Teutsche Theology" (printed 1528; Latin and French editions, 1558), a German mystical work, written about the 14th century. In it the "good man," disgusted with the corruptions in church and state, is led to seek for God in the temple of the heart. Luther is said to have placed the work next to the Bible and St. Augustine.

THEOLOGY (from the Greek Theos, God), the science which treats of the nature and attributes of God, of his relations to man, and of the manner in which they may be discovered. It is generally divided into two heads. 1. Inspired, including the Holy Scriptures, their interpretation, &c. 2. Natural; which lord Bacon calls the first part of philosophy. Modern theology has been much influenced by the results of the higher criticism (which see).

THEOPHILANTHROPSIT (lovers of God and man), a sect formed in France in 1796, and headed by one of the five directors, Lepaux, in 1797; was dissolved in 1802.

THEOLOGY (theos, God; sophia, wisdom), divine wisdom, a name that has been given since the time of Ammonius Saccas, in the third century, to various schools of philosophy and their mystical tendencies respecting the spiritual nature of man and his relation to the universe. Followers of Giordano Bruno and Paracelsus, in the 16th century, are termed theosophists.

The Theosophical Society was founded in America by Madame Blavatsky, aided by colonel Olcott, about 1875. Aims at universal brotherhood, the study of Eastern philosophy, and to investigate unexplained laws of nature and powers latent in man. It has a station in London, and many branches in India, China, and other countries. See also New York, W. E. Kingsford, M.D., president in 1883, died 22 Feb. 1885.

Mrs. Besant's lecture on Theosophy and Occultism at St. James's hall, London, 9 Oct., 1891, related especially to "Theosophy as described by Mr. Sinnett. Prof. Max Muller's "Theosophy or Psychological Religion," a sequel to Psychological and Anthropological Religion, all combined in Christianity," published April, 1873.

Col. H. N. Olcott, president of the Theosophical Society, died aged 75, 13 Feb. 1907.
THERMIDOR REVOLUTION. On the 9th Thermidor of the 2nd year (27 July, 1794), the Convention deposed Robespierre, and on the next day he and twenty-two of his partisans were executed.

THERMO-ELECTRICITY and THERMO-PILE, see under Electricity, and Heat.

THERMOMETER. Freezing point: Fadh.
32°; R. 0°; C. 0°. Boiling point: Fadh. 212°, R.
80°, C. 100°.

Invented by Drebbel of Alencon, 1609. Berthou.
Invented by Paolo Sarpi, 1609. Febugnet.
Invented by Sanctor in 1610. Borelli.
Fahrenheit's thermometer invented about 1726; Rea-mur's and Celsius's (the latter now termed centigrade) soon after. [Fahrenheit's scale is usually employed in England, and Reaumur's and the centigrade on the continent.]
The mode of construction by substituting quicksilver for spirits was invented some years subsequently. Halley proposed it in 1657.

Mr. J. M. Casella invented a minimum thermometer in Sept. 1831. It registers degrees of cold by means of mercury. Mr. Casella made many improvements in thermometers, &c., and died, 23 April, 1827.

Negro and Zambra's registering minimum thermometers, adapted for deepsea purposes, made known early in 1824.

Letter from Mr. James J. Hicks, of London, stating that since 1824, he makes about 250,000 or more ther-meters of all kinds, annually, hundreds of which are tested at the Kew Observatory, and are superior to those of foreign manufacture, Times, 23 March, 1857.

THERMOPHONE, in which sonorous vibrations are produced by the expansion of heated bodies connected with an electro-magnet. The apparratus was constructed by Theodor Wiesendanger, and described by him in October, 1878.

THERMOPYLAE (Doris, N. Greece). Leonidas, at the head of 300 Spartans and 700 Thespians, at the defile of Thermopylae, withstood the whole force of the Persians during three days, 7, 8, 9 Aug., 480 B.C., when Ephialtes, a Trachinian, perfidiously leading the enemy by a secret path up the mountains, brought them to the rear of the Greeks, who, thus placed between two assailants, perished gloriously on heaps of their slaughtered foes. One Greek only returned home, and he was received with reproaches for having fled. Here Antiochus the Great, king of Syria, was defeated by the Romans, 191 B.C.

THERMUM, THERMI, or THERMA
(Greece), a strong city, the Acropolis of Atolia, N.
Greece, was captured and ravaged by Philip V. of Macedon, 218 and 206 B.C., on account of its favouring the Romans.

THORACIC DUCT. 1368

THRAX AND EAR DISEASES.

Nicholls, called Them, or Tom, assumed the name of sir W. Courtenay, knight of Malta and king of Jerusalem, came into Kent, was an unsuccessful candidate for parliament, and invited the rabble against the Poor Law act. On 31 May, 1858, a farmer of the neighborhood, whose servant had joined the crowd which attended Them, was a constable to fetch him back; but on his arrival on the ground he was shot dead by Them. The military were then called out, and Bent, Bennet proceeded to take the murderer into custody; but Them advanced, and, firing a pistol, killed the lieutenant on the spot. One of the soldiers fired at Them, and laid him dead by the side of Bent, Bennet. The people then attacked the military, who were compelled to fire, and eight more persons were killed before the mob dispersed.

THORACIC DUCT, discovered first in a horse, by Eustachius, about 1626, in the human body, by Dr. Ruhower, a Swedish anatomist. Thomas Bartholin, of Copenhagen, and Dr. Jellefe, of England, also discovered it about 1654. See Laryces.

THRASYMENE or TRASIMENE (more correctly Trasimencus), a lake (N. Italy). A most bloody engagement took place near the Trasimene lake between the Carthaginians under Hannibal and the Romans under Flaminius, 217 B.C. No less than 15,000 Romans were left dead on the field of battle, and 10,000 taken prisoners; or, according to Livy, 6000; or Polybius, 15,000. The loss of Hannibal was about 1500 men. About 16,000 Romans made their escape, all covered with wounds. Flaminius was killed during the fight. — Livy, Polybius. On the same day an earthquake occurred, which desolated several cities in Italy.

THREATENING LETTERS. Sending letters, whether anonymously written, or with a fictitious name, demanding money, or threatening to kill a person, or fire his house, was made punishable as a felony, without benefit of clergy, by the Black Act, 1722. Persons extorting money by threatening to accuse others of such offences as are subjected to death, or other infamous punishments, were to be adjudged imprisonment, whipping, or transportation, by 30 Geo. II., 1756, and other acts; another, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, 97 (1861).

TIN.

The Phoenicians traded with England for more than 1100 years before the Christian era. Under the Saxons, our tin mines appear to have been neglected; but under the Normans, they produced considerable revenues to the ears of Cornwall, particularly to Richard, brother of Henry III. A charter and various immunities were granted by Edward I., under which his brother, the famed the Stanary Laws, tithes, was paid a duty on the tin. Edward III. confirmed the tinniers in their privileges, and erected Cornwall into a dukedom, with which he invested his son Edward the Black Prince, 1357. Since that time the heirs-apparent to the crown of England, if eldest sons, have enforced it successively. Tin mines were discovered in Germany, which lessened the value of those in England, till then the only tin mines in Europe. 1240.-Anderson. Discovered in Barbary, 1610; in India, 1740; in New Spain, 1782; near Cape Town, Feb. 1803. In 1837, 36,513 tons; in 1850, 4,595,568/.; 1867, 1,750,000/.; 1878, 4,781,888/.; 1885, 9,412,411. The tin discovered in 1890, 6,121 tons; in 1892, 8,317 tons; 1893, 8,577 tons; 1894, 4,821 tons; 1895, 4,013 tons; 1896, 4,206 tons; 1897, 4,702 tons; 1898, 4,412 tons; 1899, 4,522 tons; 1900, 4,307 tons of metallic tin were procured from British mines. On tin plates we exported in value, in 1847, 2,437,136/; in 1860, 4,595,417 tons; 1871, 4,900,625/; 1883, 4,757,057/; 1890, 4,926,255/; 1892, 4,471,137/; 1894, 4,353,681/.; in 1896, 3,549,867.

The tin-plate manufacture in S. Wales suffered the loss of the McKinley tariff, 1 July 1894.

TINCBREAY (N.W. France), where a battle was fought between Henry I. of England and his brother Robert duke of Normandy. England and Normandy were reunited under Henry, at the death of William Rufus, who had already possessed himself of Normandy by a mortgage from his brother Robert. at his settling out for Palestine. Robert, on his return, recovered Normandy by an accommodation with Henry; but having afterwards quarrelled, Robert was defeated in the battle of Tincreay, 28 Sept. 1106, and Normandy was annexed to the crown of England. -Hérouet.

TINTOMETER. An apparatus invented by Mr. J. W. Lovibond, to determine the purity, &c. of a given substance by means of tinted glasses, reported, Nov. 1895.

TIPPERARY. S. Ireland, made a county by king John, 1210.

The shopkeepers of the town of Tipperary, tenants of Mr. Smith Barry, accepted the plan of campaign without rent, and were reunited. The Tipperary, built to receive them, was inaugurated by Mr. W. O'Brien, M.P., and others 12 April, 1899.

Some of the tenants make personal application to the 30 Jan., 1899.

Failure of New Tipperary, the property put up for sale, June; buildings pulled down. Aug. 1892.

Mr. Barry warmly received by tenants. 15 Sept.

TIPPERMUIR (near Perth). Here the marquis of Montrose defeated the covenanters under lord Elcho, 1 Sept. 1644.

TIRNOVA on the Danube, a tributary of the Dniepe, capital of the ancient kingdom of Bulgaria, and the seat of the patriarch. It was occupied without resistance by general Gourko, 6, 7 July, 1877, and made the Russian head-quarters.

TIRYN, an ancient city of Greece, S.E. of Argos, with massive cyclopean remains. Excavations of Mr. Schliemann in 1873 led to the discovery of what he termed "the Pre-historic Palace of the kings of Tiryns." His book on Tiryns was published in 1880. As Byzantine remains are also found some of his conclusions are disputed by eminent antiquaries.

TITANIUM, a rare metal, discovered by Gregor in menacanite, a Cornish mineral, in 1791, and in 1794 by Klaproth.

TITHE, or TENTHS, were commanded to be given to the tribe of Levi, 1490 n.c. (Lxxvii. 39). Abraham returning from his victory over the kings (Gen. xiv.) gave tithes of the spoil to Melchisedek, king of Salem, priest of the most high God (1013 n.c.); the first recorded instance of the payment of tithes. The next precedent in order of time is Jacob's tithing of Laban's flock (Gen. xxviii. 22). In the early age of the Christian church they were given purely as alms, and were voluntary. The moral and religious duty of paying tithe was recognized and had become the custom of the church at the end of the 4th cent. Enjoined by the councils of Tours, 567; Rome, 650; and subsequently, legal sanction to ecclesiastical usages by legislation of Charlemagne, 778 and 789, and payment of tithes enforced by legal penalties; abolished in France at the Revolution, 1790. Tithes were confirmed in the later councils, 1215. -Rainnudid.

The payment of tithes appears to have been claimed by Augustin, the first archbishop of Canterbury, and to have been allowed by Ethelbert, king of Kent, under the term "God's fee," about 600.

The first mention of them in any English written law is a constitutional device made in a synod strongly enjoining tithes, 756.

Laws of king Edgar attach a legal punishment to the neglect of the tribute and religious duty of paying tithe, and provide means for their enforcement by temporal penalties, 970.

In England, in 1355, tithes were fixed at the rate of 21. 9d. in the pound on rent; since then, many acts have been passed respecting them.

The Tithe Commutation act, passed 13 Aug. 1836. It was amended in 1837, 1845, 1846, 1850, and 1875. A tenant is entitled to all the tithes; a near to a small part only, frequently to none.

Several acts relating to tithes in Ireland have been passed in 1822, 47, altering and improving the title system. The tithe redemption act, 1846.

Agitation against "extraordinary titles," in Aug. 1881.

Riotous opposition to tithes in Wales, Aug. 1882; anti-tithe league formed Sept. 1886; 1888 (see Wales) 1887.

Tithes allowed to be charged to land at the rate of 5s. 6d. per acre, and amount equalizing against the tithes in Wales, 1839. A tithes recovery bill withdrawn, 16 Aug. 1839.

Royal commission on tithe Redemption nominated; closed May and others, 30 Jan. and 6 March 1839.

An act for the recovery of tithes charged on house in England and Wales which was then in the hands of the Church of England, the burden of the payment of tithes is transferred from the tenant to the landlord.

Tithes charged at the rate of 7d. per acre, over 1,000 acres benefited, passed, 1 Aug. 1849.
TITHTING.

The number or company of ten men with their families knit together in a society, all of them being bound to the king for the peaceable and good behaviour of each of their society; or in any companies to wage any one chief person, who, from his office, was called (toothman) tithe-paying man; but now he is nothing but a constable, formerly called the headborough.

TITLES ROYAL.

Henry IV. had the title of "Grace" and "My Highness;" 1396. Henry VI. "Edward IV.," 1422. Edward IV. "Most High and Mighty Prince;" 1471. Henry VIII. "Highness," 1485. Henry VIII. the same title, and sometimes "Grace," 1509 et seq. Francis I. of France addressed Henry as "Your Majesty;" at their interview in 1520; see Field of the Cloth of Gold. Henry VIII. and James I. were styled "Dread Sovereigns" (collective dedication, 1611). James I. was called "Majesty." Sacred and Most Excellent Majesties." was the style of the emperors of Germany; the first king to whom it was given was Louis XI. of France, about 1461. Royal titles act passed, by royal assent, 17 Aug. 1601; see Style.

TITLES TO LAND CONSOLIDATION ACT (Scotland), passed 31 July, 1888, and amended in 1899.

TOBACCO.

Nicotiana tabacum, received its name from Tabaco, a province of Yucatan, New Spain, some say from the island of Tabago, one of the Caribbee islands in the Gulf of Florida. It is said to have been first observed at St. Domingo, in Cuba, 1492; and to have been used freely by the Spaniards in Yucatan in 1520. Tobacco was either first brought to England in 1563, by Sir John Hawkins; or by Sir Walter Raleigh and Sir Francis Drake, in 1580. It was manufactured and exported for some years, Star's Chron. The Pied Building of the plantations in England, is said to have been the first house in England where tobacco was smoked. In 1584 a proclamation was issued against it. James I. published "A Counterblaste against Tobacco," and the star-chamber ordered the duties to be 6s. 11d. per pound, 1643. Its cultivation was prohibited in England by Charles II., 1684. But having a market on the importation was passed 1683. The cultivation was allowed in Ireland, 1776. The tax was increased and put under the excise, 1790. Anderson: Aske. Various statutes have passed relative to tobacco. Act to revive the act prohibiting the culture of tobacco in Ireland passed 2 Will. IV., Aug. 1831. Act directing the cultivation of tobacco in Ireland be pursued in order to its being destroyed, 24 March, 1832. The quantity consumed in England in 1791 was nine millions and a half of pounds, and in 1820 about fifteen millions of pounds. We imported in 1850, 33,549,328 lbs., and 1,357,318 lbs. manufactured "cigars and snuff;" in 1860, 48,937,171 lbs., and 2,464,002 lbs., was manufactured in 1871, 73,042,305 lbs., and 8,552,236 lbs. manufactured in 1883, 51,475,199 lbs., and 3,121,174 lbs. manufactured in 1890, 65,729,570 lbs.; and 3,678,846 lbs. manufactured in 1890, 68,345,500 lbs. and 6,261,130 lbs. manufactured in 1901, 166,670,940 lbs. and 4,241,204 lbs. manufactured in 1900, 189,103,723 lbs. and 3,626,973 lbs. manufactured. The tobacco duties were modified in 1863; raised April, 1878, 2d. a lb. extra duty on cigars added, April, 1879. Net customs duties paid for tobacco and snuff in the year 1875-6, 7,744,977; 1876-7, 6,891,265; 1877-8, 8,713,944; 1878-9, 9,333,888,1964-5, 13,184,767; 1898-9, 13,623,657.

Permission to grow tobacco in England with conditions granted by the Board of Trade, April, 1836.

TOLERATION ACT. passed in 1689, to rejoin Protestant dissenters from the church of England, were, however, greatly endangered in the latter days of queen Anne, who died on the day that the Schism bill was to become a law, 1 Aug. 1714.

The toleration granted was somewhat limited. It excepted persons who took the new oath of allegiance and supremacy, and made also a declaration against popery, from the penalties incurred by absenteeing themselves from church and holding unlawful conventicles; and it allowed the quakers to substitute an advertisement for an oath, but did not relax the provisions of the Test act (which see). The party spirit of the times checked the king in his liberal measures.

TOLLS were first paid by vessels passing the Stade on the Elbe, 1109. They were first demanded by the Danes of vessels passing the Sound, 1511; see Stade and Sound. Toll-bar in England originated in 1257, on the grant of a penny for every wagon that passed through a certain market, and the first regular toll was collected a few years after for mending the road in London between St. Gilios's and Temple-bar. Gathered for repaying the highways of Holborn-in-lane and Martin's-lane (now Aldersgate-street), 1336. Toll-gate or turnpike were set up in 1663. In 1827, 27 turnpikes near London were removed by parliament; 81 turnpikes and toll-bars ceased on the north of London on 1 July, 1843; and 61 on the south side, ceased on 31 Oct. 1855; and many others on the Essex and Middlesex roads ceased on 31 Oct. 1856; the remainder on the north of London ceased 1 July, 1872. The turnpikes on the Commercial roads, London, E., were abolished 5 Aug. 1871. The tolls on Waterloo and other roads were abolished, 1758-9. The high road from Brighton to London free from toll, 31 Oct. 1881. Many private gates and bars in London since removed, several in Nov. 1893. See Wales, 1843 and 1889.

TOLOSA. On the plain named las Navas de Tolosa, near the Sierra Morena, S. Spain, Alfonso, king of Castile, aided by the kings of Aragon and Navarre, gained a great victory over the Moors, 16 July, 1212. This conflict is sometimes termed the battle of Muradai.

TONSURE, the clerical crown, adopted, it is said, in imitation of St. Peter, or of Christ’s crown of thorns, was disapproved of in the fourth century as pertaining only to penitents, and not made essential till the end of the fifth or beginning of the sixth century.

TONTINES, loans given for life annuities with benefit of survivorship, invented by Laurence Tonti, a Neapolitan. They were first set on foot at Paris to reconcile the people to cardinal Mazzarini’s government, by amusing them with the hope of becoming suddenly rich. 1735. "Tonture." Tonti died in the Bastile after seven years’ imprisonment. Three Irish tontines in 1773-77 had 3,500 members; the last public tontine in England was in 1789. New York tontine association, founded 1790, was wound up 1870-78. A Mr. Jennings was an original subscriber for a £1,000 share in a tontine company; and being the last survivor of the shareholders, his share produced him 3000l. per annum. He died aged 103 years, 19 June, 1798, worth 2,115,244l.; see Alexandra Park.

By the termination of a tontine begun by M. Lafarges in 1791 to diminish the national debt the French government received 1,218,000 francs Dec., 1888.

TOOLS. Many of the tools in common use are described and represented in Roselli’s magnificent work, "Monumenti dell’Egitto e della Nubia," 1833-34. The tools used by Bezael and Abuliah in the construction of the tabernacle, described in Exodus xxii. and xxxv. b.c. (1491), were doubtless Egyptian or Phenician. In building Solomon’s temple (1014-04) b.c., "there was neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron heard," the stone and other materials being previously prepared (1 Kings vi. 7). The invention of many tools is mythically ascribed to Ithoba in the Athenian artificer in the 14th century B.C. The multiplication invented by lord Wemyss combines many tools in a small compass, April, 1902.

TOPLITZ (Bohemia). Here were signed, in 1813, two treaties—one between Austria, Russia, and Prussia, 9 Sept.; and one between Great Britain and Austria, 3 Oct.

TOPOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY OF LON- DON was founded 1879; inaugurated at the Mansion-house, 28 Oct. 1880; reconstituted, the earl of Rosseley president, annual meetings, 9 March, 1875, et seq.

TORRANEHILL MINERAL. Mr. Gil- lespie, of Torranchill, granted a lease of all the coal in the estate to Messrs. Russell. In the course of working, the lessees extracted a combustible mineral of considerable value as a source of coalgas, and realised a large profit in the sale of it as 220-coal. The lesser then denied that the mineral was coal, and contested the right of the lessees to work it. At the trial in 1853 there was a great array of scientific men and practical gas engineers, and the evidence was most conflicting. One side maintained the mineral to be coal, the other that it was a bituminous schist. The judge set aside the scientific evidence, and the jury pronounced it to be coal. The authorities in Prussia have since pronounced it not to be coal. Perry.
TORDESILLAS. 1375

TORDESILLAS (near Valladolid). Here was signed, 7 June, 1494, a treaty modifying the boundary line which general Alexander VI. had assigned, in May, 1493, in his division of the new world between Spain and Portugal.

TORGAU (Saxony, N. Germany), the site of a battle between Frederick II. of Prussia and the Austrians, in which the former obtained a signal victory; the Austrian general, Count Daun, being wounded, 11 Nov. 1760. He had, in 1757, obtained a great victory over the Prussian king. Torgau was taken by the allies in 1814; and given to Prussia, 1815.

TORRES, a term given to a political party about 1678; see Whig. Dr. Johnson defines a Tory as one who adheres to the ancient constitution of the state, and the apostolical hierarchy of the Church of England. The Tories long maintained the doctrines of "divine hereditary indefeasible right, lineal succession, passive obedience, prerogative," &c. Bulfinch; see Conservatism. For the chart of the British possessions, see Pitt, Perceval, Liverpool, Wellington, Peel, Derby, Disraeli, &c. For Tory Democracy see Fourth Party.

TORPEDO SHELLS, a name given to explosives placed under ships, an invention ascribed to David Bushnell, an American, in 1777. His attempt to destroy H.M.S. "Grievous" failed. The action of Fulton's torpedoes was successful in 1863; but their usefulness was decried by the government. Torpedo shells ignited by electricity were successfully employed in the war in the United States, 1861-5. On 4 Oct. 1865, Messrs. McKay & Beardell tried them at Chatham before the duke of Somerset and others. An old vessel, the Terpischore, was speedily sunk. Torpedoes, made by Mr. Taylor, of Liverpool, and several others by Mr. Wightman, were tried in May, 1886. Torpedoes invented by Mr. Wightman and an Austrian, tried and reported successful at Sheerness; an old hulk was sunk, 8 Oct. 1870. Torpedoes to be ignited from a distance by an electric battery are now made at Woolwich. A Turkish monitor in the Dalmatia was blown up by a torpedo (see Russo-Turkish war, II.), 26 May, 1877. Whitehead's fish torpedoes, projected by compressed air from a boat; very destructive if skillfully directed; described Nov. 1884.

The first fast torpedo-boat built by Messrs. Donaldson & Thornycroft, at Chiswick, for Norway, in 1873; Mr. Donaldson, an able engineer, dies, aged 57, 4 Oct. 1899.

Several severe accidents to torpedoes boats 1888.

Mr. A. Legge's torpedo, based upon the principle of a flying kite, announced 16 March, 1889.

See under Gunn 1889.

The powerful Brennan at Torpeo, with the Watkin position finder, successfully tried at Cliff End Fort, on the western side of the Solent, 5 July, 1890.

The controllable torpedo of Mr. Scott Simas and Mr. Edison tried at Portsmouth and reported successful.

1, 13 Feb. 1892.

Lieut. Padilla and several others killed by a torpedo explosion at Cadiz 20 July, 1891.

Death of Mr. Robert Whitehead, inventor of "Whitehead" locomotive torpedo, aged 82, 14 Nov. 1905.

Mr. Edward Brany, the French physicist, reports that he has discovered a method of controlling the direction of torpedoes while in operation, and how to explode, by electric waves, military mines on land, without the torpedoes or the mines being exposed to any other influence than that from the special apparatus to which they are adjusted. The Electric, 5 Feb. 1908.

Commander Davis, U.S. navy, makes successful experiments with his double-acting torpedo, 12 Aug.

Trials with col. Unge's "aerial" torpedo carried out of Durham; the torpedo was made to throw out a life-saving line, 350 yards in length, and its velocity ranged from a minimum of 50 yards per second at the muzzle to a maximum of about 250 yards per second 2 Oct.

TORQUAY, a seaport in Devonshire. The pier harbour was made in 1803-7, and enlarged in 1870. Torre abbey was founded in 1196. The prince of Orange landed at Torbay 5 Nov. 1808. Population, 1881, 24,778; 1901, 33,941; 1909 (est.), 33,490.

In Kent's Hole, a cavern near Torquay, the rev. Mr. McEady discovered a quantity of bones of extinct and recent animals, 1823-9. The investigations were continued by Mr. Godwin-Austen, 1840; to the Torquay Natural History Society, and under the auspices of the British Association, 1869, by whom the results were published. Mr. William Pengelly, of Torquay, was actively engaged in the researches. The princess Louise laid the memorial stone of the new pier and harbour works, 6 May, 1890.

Charter granted to Torquay, Aug. 1832.

Mr. Wm. Pengelly, founder of the Torquay Natural History Society and of the Devonshire association for the advancement of science, literature, and art in 1862, died, aged 82, 16 March, 1894.

TORRES STRAIT, dividing Australia from Papua or New Guinea, was discovered by Torres, a Spaniard, in June, 1606. Anthropological expedition from Cambridge, conducted by Dr. A. Haddon, arrived at Murray island, and was heartily welcomed by the natives, mid May Dec. 1898.

TORRES VEDRAS (a city of Portugal). Near here Wellington, retreating from the French, took up a strong position, called the Lines of Torres Vedras, 10 Oct. 1810.

TORTOLA, see Virgin Isles.

TORTURE. was only permitted by the Romans in the examination of slaves. It was applied to heretics by the Roman Catholic clergy, and was used in England so late as 1840 (when Archer, who took part in an attack on Land's palace, was racked), and in Scotland until 1699. The trial by torture was abolished in Portugal, 1776; in France, by Louis XVI., in 1789; and in Sweden by Gust. vus III., 1772. General Pinon was convicted of and degraded for torture in Tunis,

TOUL, the Roman Tulli Lenuorum, a fortified town on the Moselle, N.E. France, one of the most ancient in the empire. The city and diocese ac-quited great privileges from Charles the Simple, 623, when it was united with the German empire.
It was reunited with France, 1352. The fortifications, begun in 1238, were rebuilt and enlarged in 1700, according to the plans of Vauban. After a vicious resistance to the Germans, commencing 14 Aug. 1870, Toul surrendered with its garrison of 3000 men, 23 Sept., when the town was burning in twenty-three houses. The Germans thus acquired an uninterrupted railway communication to Paris.

TOULON, the ancient Toulonis (S. France), an important military port. It was taken by the constable of Bourbon, 1232, and by the emperor Charles V. in 1536. In 1707 it was bombarded by the allies, both by land and sea, by which almost the whole town was reduced to a heap of ruins, and several ships burnt; but the allies were at last obliged to raise the siege. It surrendered 27 Aug.
1793, to the British admiral, Lord Hood, who took possession of both the town and shipping, in the name of Louis XVIII., under a stipulation to assist in restoring the French constitution of 1789.
A conflict took place between the English and French forces, when the latter were repulsed, 15 Nov. 1793.
Toulon was retaken by Bonaparte, 19 Dec., when it was discovered that a number of the inhabitants as well were supposed to be favorable to the British. A naval battle off this port was fought 11 Feb. 1744, between the English under Mathews and Lestock, against the fleets of France and Spain; in this engagement the brave captain Cornwal collc fell. The victory was lost by a misunderstanding between the English admiral, Mathews was afterwards dismissed for misconduct. Population in

TOULOUSE, the ancient Tolosa (S. France), foundated about 615 B.C.; was the capital of the Visigoths in A.D. 1193, and was taken by Clovis in 508. The dukes of Aquitaine reigned there, 631-761. A university was established here, 1223, and a parliament, 1302. The inquisition was established here, 1502. The troubadours, or rhetoricians of Toulouse, had their origin about 850, and consisted of a fraternity of TOURNAY. poets, whose art was extended throughout Europe, and gave rise to the Italian and French poetry; see Troubadours. The allied British and Spanish army entered this city on 12 April, immediately after the Battle of Toulouse, fought between the British and Spanish forces under Wellington, and the French led by marshal Soult, 10 April, 1814. The French were forced to retreat, after twelve hours' fighting. Neither of the commanders knew that Napoleon had abdicated the throne of France. Population, 1886, 147,617; 1901, 147,649; 1910 (est.), 152,000.

TOULOUSE. The county was created out of the kingdom of Aquitaine by Charlemagne, in 778.
It enjoyed great prosperity till the dreadful war of the Albigenses (which see), when the count Raymon VI. was expelled, and Simon de Montfort became count. At his death, in 1218, Raymond VII. obtained his inheritance. His daughter Jane and her husband, Alphonse (brother of Louis IX. of France), dying without issue, the county of Toulouse was united to the French monarchy in 1271. A large part of Toulouse destroyed by an inundation of the Garonne; St. Cyriac like a sepulchre; 23 June, 1875.

TOURNAINE, the garden of France, was con-cquered by the Visigoths about 860. It was ceded to Godfrey count of Anjou, 1044, and thus became the property of the Plantagenet kings of England.
It was seized by Philip Augustus in 1203, and was made a duchy by John, 1209. It was finally united to the crown on the death of the duke of Anjou, 1384.

TOURNAMENTS, or Jouste, were martial sports of the ancient cavaliers. Tournament is derived from the French word tourner, "to turn round." Tournaments were frequent about 890; and were regulated by the emperor Henry I., about 910. Tournaments were introduced into England early in the 13th century; prohibited by Henry II., but revived by Richard I., his son. Solemn tournaments were held by Edward I., 25 Sept. 1296, in London; and 9 Jan., 1299. Tournaments held by Richard II. in Smithfield, London, 10 Oct. 1319; and also by Henry VIII., in May 1513. The Letercan council published an article against their continuance in 1136. Henry II. of France, in a tilt with the count de Montgomery, had his eye struck out, an accident which caused the king's death in a few days, 29 June, 1559. Tournaments were then abolished in France. A magnificent feast and tournament, under the auspices of Archibald, earl of Eglinton, took place at Eglinton castle, 28 Aug. 1830, and the following week:
many of the visitors (among whom was the late emperor of the French) assumed the characters of sightseers and judges. Lady Seymour of Somerse-ton, being the "Queen of Beauty." She died 14 Dec. 1894. Among the festivities at the marriage of prince Humbert, at Turin, was a tournament, 24 April, 1898. Tournaments held at the Agricultural hall, London, X. (for benefit of soldiers' widows, &c.), 21 June et seq. 1880. In Oct. 1883, these tournaments were organized as "Royal Millitary Tournaments" for development of skill in arms in the army, and are held annually, now under the title "Royal Naval and Military Tournament."

TOURNAY (S. Belgium) was very flourishing till it was ravaged by the barbarians in the 8th century. It was re-established by Tournai, the allies in 1709, and ceded to the house of Austria by the treaty of Utrecht; but the Dutch were allowed to place a garrison in it, as one of the barrier towns. It was taken by the French under general La Bourdonnaye, 8 Nov. 1792. Several battles were fought near Tours in May, 1793, and May, 1794. Population, 1890, 35,403; 1895, 37,069; 1905, 37,040.

TOURNIQUET (from tournier, to turn), an instrument for stopping the flow of blood into a limb, by tightening the bandage employed in amputations, is said to have been invented by Morel at the siege of Besançon, 1674. J. L. Petit, in France, invented the screw tourniquet in 1718.

TOURS, an ancient city, central France, near which Charles Martel gained a great victory over the Saracens, and saved Europe, 10 Oct. 732, and from which he acquired the name of Martel, signifying hammer. This conflict is also called the battle of Poitiers. When Paris was invested by the Germans, M. Crémieux and several of the French government of defence went to Tours, together with the representatives of foreign powers, 18 Sept. On 9 Oct. these were joined by Gambetta, minister of the interior, afterwards of war (who escaped from Paris by a balloon, 7 Oct.). In consequence of the defeat of the army of the Loire near Orleans, the government removed to Bordeaux, 11 Dec.

TOWER OF LONDON. The tradition that Julius Caesar founded a citadel here (about 54 B.C.) is very doubtful. A royal palace, consisting of more than what is now called the White Tower, which appears to have been first marked out by William the Conqueror, 1076, was commenced in 1097, and completed by his son, William Rufus, who, in 1098, surrounded it with walls and a broad deep ditch. Several succeeding princes made additions to it, and king Edward III. built the church. In 1368, the old White Tower was rebuilt; and under king Henry VII. it was thoroughly repaired, 1660-5, and a great number of additional buildings made to it. Here are the Armoury, Jewel-office, and various other divisions and buildings of peculiar interest. Here took place many executions of illustrious persons, and many murders (king Henry VI., 1471; king Edward V. and his brother, 1485; sir Thomas Overbury, 1643). The armoury and 280,000 stand of arms, &c., were destroyed by fire, 30 Oct. 1841. The "New Buildings" in the Tower were completed in 1850. See Blood; for Tower-Servitors, see Thames. Constable of the Tower, gen. sir Frederick C. Stephenson, appointed 2 March, 1868.

The menagerie, long here, was removed to the Zoological Gardens, 1834; the state papers were removed to the Record Office, 1857.

Opened free to the public (Mondays and Saturdays) from 3 April, 1875.

Lanthorne Tower rebuilt and other restorations, 1834-5.

The White Tower and other parts greatly damaged by an explosion of dynamite; about 16 visitors seriously hurt, about 2 p.m. 24 Jan. John Gilbert Cunningham and Harry Burton apprehended, 24 Jan.; committed for trial, 27 March, 1855. See Trials.

Tower Bridge not passed, 14 Aug., 1854; foundation of the bridge laid by the prince of Wales on 14 June, 1882. The work practically completed, 27 March, 1894.

The bridge is a compound suspension and bascule bridge of the bascule type, the centre-portion is hinged with a bascule or drawbridge; Mr. J. Wolfe Barry, engineer, K.C.B., 1887; the bridge opened by the prince and princess of Wales; a procession of vessels passed under the bridge, 30 June, 1894.

Opened to the public, 6 July, 1894.

Cost of bridge and approaches, reported to be nearly 1,000,000l.

TOWERS. That of Babel, the first of which we read, built in the plains of Shinar (Gen. xi.) 2247 B.C.; see Babel The Tower of the Winds at Athens, built 570 B.C. The Tower of Pharsus (see Pharos), 280 B.C. The round towers in Ireland were the only structures of stone found at the arrival of the English, 1160, except some buildings in the maritime towns founded by the Danes. These towers are tall hollow pillars, nearly cylindrical, but narrowing towards the top, pierced with lateral holes to admit the light, and covered with conical roofs. Fifty-six of them still remain, from 50 to 130 feet high; see Post.

TOWNホールINGS in Great Britain and Ireland. A committee appointed in 1869-9 (Mr. Lewis Fry, sir H. James, sir Wm. Marriot, and others), to enquire into terms of occupation, facilities for purchase by tenants, rating, improvements, &c. The report issued 13 July, 1889, was stated to be a compromise.

Report of the committee, dealing with questions relating to local taxation, the liability of ground rents, &c., published 28 May, 1892.

TOWNLEY MARBLES, in the British Museum, were purchased in 1805 and 1814.

TOWTON (Yorkshire), where a sanguinary battle was fought, 29 March, 1461, between the houses of York (Edward IV.) and Lancaster (Henry VI.), to the latter of whom it was fatal, and on whose side more than 37,000 fell. Edward issued orders to give no quarter, and the most merciless slaughter ensued. Henry and his queen, Margaret, fled to Scotland; and Edward IV. was settled on the throne.

TOXOPHILITES (from toxon, a bow, and philos, a lover), a society established by sir Aston Lever in 1781. The Toxophiles formed a division of the Artillery Company about 1784-1803. In 1834 they took ground in the inner circle of Regent's park, and built the archery lodge. They possess a very curious piece of plate, given by Catherine, queen of Charles II., to be shot for by the Finsbury archers, of whom the Toxophiles are the representatives.

TOYNBEE HALL, see under University Teaching.

TRACTARIANISM, a term applied to certain opinions on church matters propounded in the "Tracts for the Times," of which ninety numbers were published, 1833-41. The principal writers were the revs. Dr. E. Pusey, J. H. Newman, J. Keble, J. Froude, and I. Williams—all of the university of Oxford; see Puseyism. The tracts (especially No. 90, ascribed to rev. J. H. Newman) were condemned by the authorities at Oxford, 15 March, 1841.

TRACTION-ENGINES were used on common roads in London in 1800, but afterwards restricted. In Aug. 1862, one of Bray's traction-engines conveyed through the city a mass of iron which would have required 20 horses; see Road-steamers and Railways.

TRACT SOCIETIES. The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge was founded in 1698; the Religious Tract Society, London, in 1799.

TRADE OF GREAT BRITAIN, see Exports and Imports. In 1801 the value of the two amounted to £7,001,458; in 1817 to £64,590,180; in 1821, £64,110,204; 1835, £643,442,203; 1890, £643,442,203.
TRADE AND PLANTATIONS.

Board of. Cromwell seems to have given the first notions of a board of trade: in 1655 he appointed his son Richard, with many lords of his council, judges, and gentlemen, and about twenty merchants of London, York, Newcastle, Yarmouth, Dover, TRADE marks registration. ACT, passed 13 Aug. 1875. The registration office was opened 1 Jan. 1876; a similar act passed in the United States, 1881. Trade Marks Act, 1897, comes into operation on 1 April, 1900. 4,734 trade marks registered 1901; 6,255, 1907. Resolution passed by congress of Empire chambers of commerce to protect competing parties against infringement and imitation, Sydney, 17 Sept. 1909. TRADING UNION.

TRADE, NATIONAL CHAMBER OF, inaugural meeting at Manchester, 24 Nov. 1897. TRADES MUSEUMS, the formation of one was undertaken in 1853, jointly by the commissioners of the Great Exhibition of 1851, and the Society of Arts. The mineral department was opened 1 May, 1854, when a paper on the mutual relations of trade and manufactures was read by professor E. Solly. The contents of this museum were removed to the South Kensington Museum, which was opened 24 June, 1857. The French "Conservatoire des Arts et Metiers" was established 1795.

TRADES UNIONS, defined as "continuous associations of wage-earners, for the purpose of maintaining or improving the conditions of their employment," were gradually formed after the repeal of the Combination Laws, in 1824, to withstand the undue influence of capital and competition. As trades unions formed for maintaining the rate of wages, Amalgamated society of railway servants hold special meetings at Holborn Town hall and discuss the verdict and judgment given in favour of the Taff Vale rly. co. (see Trials, 22 July, 1901). Resolution not to appeal, but to support trade unions if they desire to appeal to and bear proportion of cost. Ten-second estimate drawn up by the society at 50,000s.; rules revised, and resolution carried in favour of direct labour representation in parliament, 6-8 Jan. 1903. Conference of the offices of Taff Vale rly. co., Cardiff, between the manager and solicitor of the company and a deputation of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants on the questions of damages in the action, in 1904, it was agreed that the society should pay 25,000s., for damages and cost, to the rly. co., 19 Feb. 1905.

TRADE union congress at Leicester passes a resolution in favour of the legislative limitation of hours of labour to 5 hours per day, and of making this a test question in all elections, 10 Sept. 1905, a similar resolution passed at the congress held at Hanley, 4-9 Sept. 1905. Report of the royal commission on trade disputes and trade combinations appointed 6 June, 1905, published 20 Feb. 1906. Report of the chief registrar of friendly societies for the year ending 31 Dec. 1904, which relates to trade unions, shows that at the end of that year there were on the 1st register 73,719 trade unions, which number 646 furnished returns; total membership for Great Britain and Ireland of the 646 unions, 1,134,641; income, 2,475,585s.; expenditure, 2,331,299s.; balance of funds at the end of 1904, 538,204s., issued, April 1905. Trade union congress holds its 39th session at Liverpool, 5-9 Sept. 1905. 671 trade unions on the register; total membership for Great Britain and Ireland for 645 unions was 1,719,013; their income amounted to 2,709,665s., expenditure to 2,231,326s.; balance of funds, 5,395,342s. Times, 20 Feb. 1905. Trade union congress held at Nottingham, Sept. 1905. In the case of Osborne v. the Amalgamated society of railway servants, it was decided in the court of appeal that it was illegal for a trade union to provide for parliamentary representation by means of a compulsory levy, even if within the rules, 25 Nov. 1905. The number of registered and unregistered trade unions at the end of 1903 was 2,165, with a total membership of 6,734,238; Dec. 1903. The correctional tribunal in Paris decided that the trade union, formed by the postal employees, after the recent strike was illegal; ordered its dissolution, and inflicted a fine of 125,60, on each of the 16 men concerned in the formation of the union, 29 July, 1909. International trade union congress closed, 1 Sept. 1909, a proposal for a world society, the amalgamated society of railway servants; decision of the court of appeal upheld by the lords, 21 Dec. 1909. 3,080,914, and their expenditure to 2,774,436l. The number of new trade unions registered was 49, and the number disbanded was 49 during 1908. Parliamentary paper published 14 Feb. 1909.

TRAFAALGAR (Cape S. Spain), off which a great naval victory was gained by the British, under Nelson, over the combined fleets of France and Spain, commanded by admiral Villeneuve and two Spanish admirals, 21 Oct. 1805. The enemy's force was eighteen French and fifteen Spanish vessels, all of the line: that of the British, twenty-seven ships. After a most brilliant fight, Villeneuve and the other admirals were taken, and nineteen of their ships captured, sunk, or destroyed. Nelson was killed, and Admiral Collingwood succeeded to the command. Nelson's name was the Victory; and his last signal was, "England expects every man will do his duty;" see Nelson. The day specially celebrated in London, 21 Oct. 1806 et seq. Centenary observed in London and throughout the country, 21 Oct. 1905. TRAFALGAR - SQUARE. London, begun 1829; completed 1835. Act passed in 1834, declaring that the square is Crown property, the charge of it placed in the hands of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests and under police regulation. In 1881, the charge was transferred to the Commissioners of Works. The right of preventing public meetings in the square by the executive affirmed by the commons (316-223), 2 March, 1888. See Riots.

Public meetings in the square on Saturday afternoons, Sundays, and bank holidays, subject to regulations, 31 Oct. 1852, were resumed. Nov. 1852. Generally the unemployed met Louise Michel there. 11 Dec. 1892. TRAFFIC in the metroplis is now regulated by the Metropolitan Streets act, passed 20 Aug. 1867.

London Traffic Royal Commission, appointed 1893 to inquire into the subject of metropolitan locomotion. Evidence was taken of the London County Council, and of witnesses from the municipal borough councils and other authorities in the vicinity of London who are interested in the question of the metropolitian traffic, including the great railway companies and tube companies. A sub-committee of six members visited (Sept.-Nov.) New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago to investigate the methods adopted in these cities. The first of the 8 volumes containing the report of the royal commission, issued July, 1899.

TRAINING SCHOOLS, begun by the National Society, 1811. One was founded at Battersea in 1810, by J. R. Kay Shuttleworth, and Mr. E. C. Tuffnell; the latter, who was then in the Poor Law Commission, devoting a year's salary towards the expenses.

TRAM-ROADS. The name is probably derived from being made of tram or bars of wood; the statement that it was derived from Mr. Benjamin Outram (the father of Sir James Outram, the Indian general), who improved the colliery roads about 1800, is very doubtful. The iron tram-road from Croydon to Wandsworth was completed on 24 July, 1801. The Preston Outram-way was opened 1 June, 1823. Street railways or tramways for omnibuses drawn by horses, previously established by Mr. Train in New York, were opened by him at Birkenhead, Cheshire, 30 Aug. 1806, and at Bayswater, London, 23 March, 1801. (See Ireland, 1868.) A street railway bill was rejected by the house of commons in April, 1801. Several of these railways existed for a time in various parts of the metropolis in 1801, but were all taken up in 1802. An act to facilitate the construction of tramways passed 6 Aug. 1870. Tramways from Birkenhead to Bromborough and from the chapel to Bow, were opened 9 May, 1879; many others since. Their introduction into the city was much recommended but opposed, March-May, 1873, and since. The use of steam locomotives proposed: approved in Paris, July, 1876.

Elevated street railways erected in New York, 1878-83. 27 miles of tramways constructed in England and Wales, 1870-80. Steam cable tramway on Highgate Hill, N. London (the first in Europe), opened 29 May, 1884; stopped Dec. 1892; ours again running (1894).

TRANSCATION. The change of Christ's appearance on Mount Tabor, in the presence of Peter, James, and John, A.D. 32 (Matt. xviii.). The feast of the Transfiguration, kept on 6 Aug., was instituted in the East before 700, and seems to have been observed in the West as early as 450. Pope Calixtus III. in 1436 issued a bull making it a feast of obligation "to be generally observed in honor of the defect of the Turks at Belgrade in that year.

TRANSFORMATION PRINTS. A method of printing one picture over another, the former being easily effaced, patented by Mr. Andrew Reid of Newcastle-on-Tyne, and others, 1885.

TRANSIT, see Mercury and Venus.

TRANSLATION TO HEAVEN. The translation of Enoch to heaven at the age of 365 years (Gen. v. 24). The prophet Elijah was translated to heaven in a chariot of fire (2 Kings ii. 11).—The possibility of translation to the abode of eternal life has been maintained by some extravagant enthusiasts. The Irish house of commons expelled Mr. Asgill from his seat, for his book asserting the possibility of translation to the other world without death, 1793.

TRANSJAPANE REaBüc, comprising Lombardy and part of the Venetian territories, was established by Bonaparte after his victory at Lodi, to May, 1796. With the Cisalpine republic, it merged into the Cisalpine republic, Oct. 1797.

TRANSPORTATION, see Transport. Judges were given the power of sentencing offenders to transportation " into any of his majesty's dominions in North America," by 12 Charles II. c. 3 (1665), and by 4 Geo. I. c. 11 (1718). Transportation ceased in 1775, but was revived in 1780. The reception of convicts was successfully resisted by the Cape of Good Hope (in 1850) and by the Australian colonies (1854). Transportation, even to West Australia, whose labour is wanted, ceased after a few years, through the fierce opposition of the eastern colonies. In consequence of the difficulty thus experienced in transporting felons, 18 & V. W. c. 19, 1848, provided for publishing the names, penal servitude, empowering the queen to grant pardon to offenders under certain conditions, and licences to others to be at large; such licences being liable to be revoked if necessary; and many have been. These licences are termed "tickets of leave." The system is said to have originated in Australia under the superintendence of captain Marqo. It was much assailed in Oct. and Nov. 1862, on account of violent crimes being traced to ticket-of-leavers; and was modified by the Penal Servitude Act, 1864; and the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871 and 1879. See Crime.

Transport, July 1793. The Rev. Dr. Halloran, 1750 to the earl of Chesterfield, was transported for forging a frank (col. postage) on 9 Sept. 1818.

The first transportation of slaves to Botany Bay was in May, 1787, when governor Phillip arrived with about 600 on 20 Jan. 1788; convicts were afterwards sent to Van Diemen's Land, Norfolk Island, &c.

Transportation superseded by penal servitude 1823.

Returning from transportation was punishable with death until 3 Will. IV. c. 69, Aug. 1841, when an act was passed making the offence punishable by transportation for life.

A shipment of convicts to West Australia (which had already received 16000) in 1857.

TRANSUBSTANTATION, the doctrine of the "real presence." That the bread and wine in the Eucharist are changed into the very flesh and blood of Christ by the conversion of the elements in the days of Gregory III. (731), and accepted by Amalarius and Radbertus (about 830), but rejected by Rabanus Maurus, Johannes Scottus Egerius, Berengarius, Wycliffe, and others. In the Lateran council, held at Rome by Innocent III., the word "Transubstantiation" was used to express this doctrine, which was decried to be incontrovertible; but all who opposed it were condemned. This was confirmed by the council of Trent, 18 Jan. 1552. John Huss, Jerome of Prague, and other martyrs of the reformation, suffered for denying this dogma, which is renounced by the church of England (28th article), and by all protestant dissenters. The declaration against transubstantiation, invocation of the saints, and the sacrifice of the mass, on taking any civil office, was abolished by an act passed 25 July, 1867; see Sacrament.

Luther maintained the doctrine of consubstantiation, viz. that after consensation the body and blood of Christ are substantially present in the bread and wine. He was excommunicated by the Generals Carstall, Zwinge, and others (termed sacramentarians), who asserted that the Lord's supper is only a commemorative rite.

TRNSVAAL. A British colony. Formerly the Transvaal republic, renamed South African Republic in 1883, founded by Dutch Boers (farmers) in 1848; after several years' severe conflict with the natives. Its independence was declared 17 Jan. 1852, S. J. P. Kruger elected president on 7 May, 1852; and its constitution proclaimed 13 Feb. 1858; capital Pretoria, population, 1901, 37,700 (21,704 whites); chief town, Johannesburg, the centre of the Witwatersrand goldfields; population, 1901, 18,580,952 (8,602 whites). President for four years, T. F. Burgers, 27 May, 1872. Population about 38,000 Boers, 5000 English settlers, 77,000 in 1872 (1866, 47,000); 1,280,716 (299,327) whites, 145,758,524; other whites, 5,821, others (terming sacramentarians) 1910 (est.), 4,851,412. TRANSYLVANIA, an Austrian province, was part of the ancient Dacia (which see). In 1520, John Zapoly rendered himself independent of the emperor Ferdinand I, by the aid of the Turks. His successors ruled with much difficulty till Jan. 1669, when the emperor Leopold I, by the treaty of Carlowitz, finally incorporated Transylvania into the Austrian dominions. The Transylvanian deputies did not take their seat in the Austrian parliament till 20 Oct. 1803. A decree for the convocation of the Transylvanian diet was issued.
TRAPPISTS. 1386

12 Sept. 1807. The inhabitants are about 1,400,000, ignorant Romanists, 1,500,000 Saxon colonists, and 550,000 Magyars, the last being the ruling class. The union of Transylvania with Hungary in 1848, which caused much discontent, was ratified by the Transylvanian diet, 23 Dec. 1866.

TRAPPISTS. The first abbey of La Trappe in Normandy was founded, in 1140, by Rotrou, comte de Perche. The present order of Trappists owes its origin to the learned Jean le Bouthillier de Ramez (editor of Americ, when aged 14), who went round the world, and sold all his property, giving the proceeds to the abbey of La Trappe, to which he retired in 1662, to live there in great austerity. After several efforts he succeeded in reforming the monks, and in establishing a new rule, which commands silence, prayer, reading, and manual labour, and which forbids study, wine, fish, &c. Ramez was born in 1620, and died in 1700.

A number of these monks, driven from France in the revolution of 1792, were received by Mr. Webb, of Lambeth, Dorsetshire, who gave them some land to cultivate and a habitation, where they remained till 1812. This order was charged with rebellion and conspiracy in France, and sixty-four English and Irish Trappists were shipped by the French government to Pembroke, 17 Nov.; and were landed from the frig Vigilant, French frigate, at Cowes, Nov. 1831. They established themselves at Mount Mellary, county of Waterford.

TRASIMENE, see Trasimene.

TRAUNETAU (Bohemia). On 27 June, 1606, the first corps of the army of the crown-prince of Prussia seized Trauntau, but was defeated and repulsed by the Austrians under Gahhonz; on the 28th, the Prussians defeated the Austrians with great loss.

TRAVELLERS’ CLUB (Pull-mall), established in 1815. A member must have "travelled out of the British islands to a distance of at least 500 miles from London, in a direct line."

TRAVELLING in ENGLAND. In 1707, it took in summer one day, in winter nearly two days, to travel from London to Oxford (35 miles). In 1817, the journey was accomplished in six or seven hours. By the Great Western Railway express (63 miles) it is done in just over 1 hour. In 1828, a gentleman travelled from Newcastle to London (273 miles) inside the best coach in 35 hours, at an expense of 6l. 18s. 3d. or 6d. per mile (including dinner, &c.). In 1857, the charge of the Great Northern railway (251 miles) first-class express (6 hours) was 25s. 3d. No fixed charge is made by the majority of railway companies for the hire of special trains. The general charges are 2s. 6d. per mile, plus the ordinary fare for each passenger according to class.

TREATIES. 1387

TRAWLING. Deep-sea fishing with a boat (other sail or steam) having a very large net attached to it, and thereby catching the fish which mostly live at the bottom of the sea; principally practised on the N.E. coast of Britain.

Commissions reported in 1854 and since, that trawling was not injurious to the supply of fish as suggested; but another commission, with scientific advice, reported in 1865, that there was some ground for the fishermen’s complaints.

TREAD-MILL, an invention of the Chinese, to raise water for the irrigation of the fields. The complicated tread-mill introduced to the prisons of Great Britain is the invention of Mr. (afterwards Sir William) Cubitt, of Ipswich. It was erected at Brixton gaol, 1817, and soon afterwards in other large prisons. Towards the end of the last century it fell into disuse and very few were in existence in 1815.

TREASON, see High Treason, Petty Treason. (A term abolished in 1828, defined by the statute of 25 Edw. III. 1352) was a wife’s murder of her husband; a serious breach of the peace, and an ecclesiastical person’s murder of his prelate or other superior. Misprision of treason, knowledge and concealment of the crime, punishable with forfeiture of goods and imprisonment for life.

TREASON-FELONY. By the Crown and Government Security Act, 11 Viet. c. 12 (1818), certain treasons hitherto punishable with death were mitigated to ten years, and subjected to transportation or imprisonment. The Penins in Ireland were tried under this act; see Trials, 1805.

TREASURER OF ENGLAND, LORD HIGH, the third great officer of the crown, a lord by virtue of his office, having the custody of the king’s treasure, governing the upper court of exchequer, and formerly sitting judicially among the barons. The first lord high treasurer in England was Odo, earl of Kent, in the reign of William I. This great trust is now confided to a commission, and is vested in five persons, called "lords commissioners for executing the office of lord high treasurer." The chancellor of the exchequer is usually one; the first lord being usually the premier; see Administrations, for a succession of these officers. Sir Stafford Northope (aft. Earl of Eddesleigh) was first lord of the treasury and not premier, 24 June, 1855; see Salisbury Administrations.

The first of this rank in Ireland was John de St. John, Henry III. 1217; the last, William, duke of Devon- shire, 1706; vice-treasurers were appointed till 1789; then commissioners till 1816, when the revenues of Great Britain and Ireland were united.

The first lord high treasurer of Scotland was Sir Walter Gilrie, appointed by James 1. in 1427; the last, in 1641, John, earl of Traupair, afterwards commissioners were appointed.

TREASURER OF THE CHAMBER, formerly an officer of great consideration, and always a member of the privy council. He discharged the bills of all the king’s tradesmen, and had his office in Cleveland-row, in the vicinity of the royal palace. His duties were transferred and the office suppressed at the same time with the office of master of the great wardrobe and clother of the household in 1782. Ibidem.

TREATIES. A formal and written treaty made in England with any foreign nation was entered into at Kingston between Henry III., and the dauphin of France (than in England and TREBIA, new Tesbio, a river in North Italy, near which Hannibal defeated the Roman consul Sempronius, 218 B.C.; and Savarroy, after a struggle, defeated the French marquis Mauvoisin and compelled him to retreat, 17-19 June, 1799.

TREBIZOND, a part of Asia Minor in the Black Sea, was colonised by the Greeks, and became subject to the kings of Pontus. It enjoyed self-government under the Roman empire, and when the Latins took Constantinople in 1204, it became the seat of an empire which endured till 1453, when it was conquered by the Turks under Muradet I. Population, about 45,000.

TRECENTO, see Italian.

TREES in London. Many were planted by John Evelyn in the Mall, St. James's, &c. He recommended this in his "Funningium," published 1661. The planting of rows of trees in suburban roads began in 1875.

TREES OF LIBERTY were planted in Paris and other parts of France during the revolutionary era, 1790 and 1803. These trees were cut down in Paris in Jan., 1830, which is thus expressed by the author. The celebrated tree Féculle, planted in 1789 near the National Library, Paris, was felled early in 1834. English arboricultural society founded at Hexham in 1834. Annual meetings.

TRENT (the ancient Tridentum), in the Tyrol, belongs to Austria. The council held here is reckoned in the Roman catholic church as the third general council. Its decisions have been implicitly received as the standard of faith, morals, and discipline in that church. It first sat 13 Dec., 1545, and continued (with interruptions) under popes Paul III., Julius III., and Pius IV.; to 4 Dec., 1563; its last sitting (the 25th). A jubilee in relation to this council was celebrated in June, 1863. Trent was several times taken during the French War. Population, about 22,000.

At the council was decreed, with anathemas, the charity of scripture (including the apocrypha), and the church its sole interpreter; the traditions to be equal with scripture; the seven sacraments (baptism, confirmation, the Lord's supper, penance, extreme unction, orders, and matrimony); transubstantiation: purgatory;
indulgences; celibacy of the clergy; arrant coercion
&c.

TRÊVES, or Trier, the Roman Treviri, in Rhenish Prussia, was a prosperous city of the Gauls, 12 B.C. The emperor Gallicinus held his court here
A.D. 255. The church of St. Simeon dates from the 4th century. The town suffered an eclipse in the 14th century, and became subject to the archbishop in 1585. Councils held here, 385-1423. The archbishops are said to have been founded before the 7th century and to be the oldest in Germany.
After various changes, Tréves was acquired by Prussia, June 1815. In 1844 much excitement was occasioned by miracles said to have been wrought by the "Holy Coat" in the cathedral. The coat was exhibited to thousands, Aug., Sept., 1891.
Population, 1890, 36,162; 1900, 43,324; 1910 (est.), 45,000.

TRIAL AT BAR, signifies the whole court or a plurality of judges. This plan was adopted at Brussels in 1872; also at Rennes on 2nd February, trial, 1814; and arranged for the trial of the claimant of the Tichborne estates for perjury, in April, 1873. See Juries.

TRIALS. Regulations for conducting trials were made by Leathur and Eade, Kings of Kent, about 473 to 680. Alfred the Great is said to have begun trial by jury; but there is good evidence of such trials before his time. Arrangements were made for more speedy trials by "the Winter Assizes Act," 1876. See Appeal.

Beck Case.—A man calling himself John Smith was convicted in 1877 at the Old Bailey for defrauding two persons of £166 8s. 6d., money obtained by pretending that he was the legitimate son of Lord Willoughby. Smith was sentenced to 5 years' penal servitude, and released on licence, April, 1881. Complaints were then made by the police that a man had been defrauded in a similar manner by a man styling himself Lord Wilton, or Lord Winton, de Willoughby, and representing that he had an established interest at St. John's Wood. Meissonier, a woman who had been defrauded, Nov. 1895, chanced to meet Mr. Adolph Beck, a New York solicitor, and charged him with having robbed her, and Mr. Beck, who denied the accusation, was charged. Some of the women who had been victimised affirmed that Mr. Beck's name was John Smith, and gave evidence to that effect before Sir Shiel, magistrate at Westminster police court. The case being reported a gentleman who had been interested in the original charge against Smith informed the police that Mr. Beck was doubtless the ex-convict Smith, and an ex-policeman, Squirrel, swore positively that Mr. Beck was Smith, and that he had served with the police who had been connected in the original case. In March, 1896, Mr. Beck was tried at the Old Bailey before Sir Forrest Fulton, and on conviction sentenced to 2 years' penal servitude. For the defence it was contended that the real criminal was the man who had been convicted in 1877. Petitions from Mr. Beck after conviction to the home office that the case was one of mistaken identity were unavailing, and in prison his clothes were marked with D.W., as an indication that he had been previously convicted. In 1897, Mr. Beck's solicitor approached the home office with a view to reopen the case. Mr. Beck having discovered that Smith was a Jew, and that the police had evidence of his identity, this was admitted by the home office (Smith having in 1879 been examined by the prisoner doctor at Portland, who reported to the home office that Smith was a Jew), and it was decided that Mr. Beck and Smith were not identical. The D.W. was removed from Mr. Beck's clothing, but the authorities still regarded Mr. Beck as suspect of the charges for which he had been convicted. Mr. Beck was released on licence, July, 1901. In April, 1904, he was re-arrested on a similar charge to that of 1897. The same procedure as in 1897 was tried before Mr. Justice Grantham and again convicted, but sentence was postponed until the next session. In the interval the ex-convict Smith was re-arrested, and charged with burning a house. This led to further inquiries, with the result that Mr. Beck's innocence was proved and he received a "free pardon" in respect of the 1896 and 1904 convictions, with the offer of a grant of 2,000l. by the treasury. This was refused by Mr. Beck, who demanded an inquiry. A committee of inquiry was appointed by the home office, Sept. 1904. Report was in 23 Nov. 1904. Mr. R. Billingsley, a retail tobacconist, at Darlington, obtains $250 damages from Messrs. TRISTAN D'ACUNHA, a small island in the S. Atlantic, discovered in 1506 by a Portuguese admiral, after whom it is named; inhabited by aboriginal persons. Before the opening of the Suez Canal, the island prospered, through the visits of ships, now very rare; the duke of Edinburgh was there in 1867, and showed great kindness to the people. Patriarchal government under Mr. Peter Green, who received a portrait from queen Victoria in 1897.

TRIUMPHS were granted by the Roman senate to generals of armies after they had won great victories. They were received into the city with great magnificence and public acclamations. There were the great, called the Triumph; and the less, the Ovation; see Ovation.

TRIUMVIRATES, ROMAN. In 60 B.C., Julius Cæsar, Pompey, and Crassus formed a coalition to rule the state. This lasted ten years, and the civil war ensued. The second triumvate, 43 B.C., was formed by Octavius Cæsar, Mark Antony, and Lepidus, through whom the Romans totally lost their liberty. Lepidus was expelled in 36; Antony was subdued in 31, and Octavius made himself absolute; see Rome. In Feb. 1839, a triumvirate was appointed at Rome, consisting of Joseph Mazini, Armellini, and Saffi, which resigned on 1 July, 1839, when the city was taken by the French.

TROCADERO, Paris, a mount on the right bank of the Seine, so named in memory of a fort near Cadiz, captured by the French while suppressing the insurrection in 1823. On this ground was erected the palace of the "Trocadéro," in connection with the international exhibition of 1878; see Paris.

TROGLODYTES, or "cave dwellers," the name given by the ancient Greeks to various savage races inhabiting natural caverns or holes in the earth which they had excavated. This term was more especially applied to the cave dwellers on the coast of the Red Sea, and along the banks of the Upper Nile in Nubia and Abyssinia, this district being called Troglodytika. The Troglodytes are mentioned by Herodotus, Aristotle, and Diodorus.

Excavations resumed by the Germans at Hissarlik, the city wall, buildings, &c. discovered Sept. 14, 1875

See Macdonald, 26 Dec. 1890

TROY WEIGHT. The Romans introduced their ounce, our avoirdupois ounce, into Britain. The present ounce was brought from Grand Cairo into Europe, about the time of the Crusades, 1095, and was first adopted at Troyes, a city of France, whence the name. It is used to weigh gold, silver, and precious stones. The Troy ounce was established by James VI. (our James I.) in 1618; see Standard.

TROYES (Central France), where a treaty was concluded between England, France, and Burgundy, whereby it was stipulated that Henry V. should marry Catherine, daughter of Charles VI., be appointed regent of France, and, after the death of Charles, should inherit the crown, 21 May, 1420.
Troyes was taken by the allies, 7 Feb.; retaken by Napoleon, 23 Feb.; and again taken by the allies, 4 March, 1814.

TRUCE OF GOD (Fierre or Truaga Dei), a term given to a cessation of the private feuds and conflicts so general during the middle ages all over Europe, said to have been strongly advocated by the bishop of Aquitaine, in 1032. The clergy strenuously exerted their influence for the purpose. A synod at Roussillon, 1027, decreed that none should attack his enemy between Saturday evening (at noon) and Monday morning (at the hour of prime). Similar laws were adopted in England, 1042 (sometimes Friday and Wednesday being chosen for the time). The truce of God was confirmed by many councils of the church, especially the Lateran Council, in 1179.

TRUCK SYSTEM of paying workmen's wages in goods (sold at "romosome/shops") instead of money, was prohibited by parliament in 1831. By the Truck Act a commission to inquire into its alleged prevalence was appointed; act passed 10 Aug., 1870; amended 1887 and 1896. Committee appointed by the home secretary to inquire into the working of the Truck Act; r. hon. Thos. Shaw, M.P., lord advocate for Scotland, chairman. April, 1899. Departmental committee on the Truck Acts appointed in April, 1897; issues its report, 4 Jan., 1899.

TRUMPET. Some of the Greek historians ascribe the invention of the trumpet to the Tyrrhenians, and others to the Egyptians. It was in use in the time of Homer. First torches, then shells of fish sounded like trumpets, were the signals in primitive wars. Peter. The Jewish feast of trumpets was appointed 1400 B.C. (Lev. xxiii. 24). Otho, king of Mercia, is said to have had trumpets sounded before him when travelling, about A.D. 700. The speaking trumpet is said to have been used by Alexander the Great in 335 B.C.; improved by Kircher in A.D. 1652; by Salland, 1652; and philosophically explained by Mordan, 1071.

TRUMPET-FLOWER, Bignonia candida, was brought hither from North America, about 1760. The Trumpet-Honeysuckle, Lonicera sempervirens, came from North America in 1856. The Bignonia also was brought to England from the Cape in 1825. The large-flowered Trumpet-flower, or Bignonia grandiflora, was brought from China in 1860.

TRURO, W. Cornwall. The town was founded by Richard de Lucy, chief justice in England in the 12th century, and chartered by Egmond, earl of Cornwall, illegitimate son of Henry I. An act to provide for the foundation of a bishopric of Truro passed 11 Aug., 1879, and money sufficient for its endowment having been subscribed, the see was constituted by order in council, 9 Dec., same year. A. amended in 1887. Truro was made a city, Aug., 1877. Population, 1861, 21,392; 1871, 31,259.

TUBERCULOSIS, a disease caused by the development of tubercles, small masses of diseased matter in the lungs (phthisis or consumption), in the bones (tuberculous arthritis), as well as in other parts (lupus).

Dr. Robert Koch, of Berlin, discovered and isolated a minute organism, named bacillus tuberculosis, to whose action he attributed the disease, 15 Aug. 1882. In the autumn of 1882, he reported his invention of a lymp (see below, 15 Jan. 1891), by the injection of which into the system, as in vaccination, he hoped to cure the diseases. In Berlin he made many experiments of tubercle-giving to guinea-pigs and human beings, with some success in respect to lupus, but not to phthisis. Dr. Koch was much honoured by the emperor, and was aided by Dr. Robert Koch's full account of his method was published in the British Medical Journal, London, 15 Nov., and other papers.

Medical men flocked to Berlin from all parts of the world, to obtain the lymp. Exaggerated cases of successful application were published, and it soon appeared that time was required to test the efficacy of the remedy. Much discussion ensued. Dr. Koch, on 15 Jan. 1891, published the statement of his lymph, named tuberculin, was a glycerine extract from the pure culture of the bacillus. Royal commission on tuberculosis (Dr. Koch's methods, &c); report issued, April, 1893. Professor Badenheiser, of Ulm, asserted that out of 100 surgical cases no evidence of the disease had been effected by the lymph. Prof. Virchow, Berlin, in regard to 21 cases of infection of the lymph, reported unfavourable results 1 July. Dr. Koch appointed director of the Institute for Infections Diseases at Berlin 1 July. He acknowledges the failure of his remedy, and proposes an improvement by the addition of alcohol. 22 Oct.

National association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis in branch societies opened at Belfast and Dublin April-May, 1899.

TUESDAY, in Latin Dies Mortis, the day of Mars, the third day of the week, so called from Tuisto, Tin, or Tusco, a Saxon deity, worshipped on this day. Tuisto is mentioned by Tacitus; see Week Days.

TUGENDBUND ("league of Virtue"), formed in Prussia soon after the peace of Tilsit, June, 1807, ostensibly for relieving the sufferers by the late wars, and for the revival of morality and patriotism. Its head-quarters were at Königsberg. It excited the jealousy of Napoleon, who demanded its suppression in 1809. It was dissolved at the peace in 1815.

TUILERIES (Paris), the imperial palace of France, commenced by Catherine de Medici, after the plans of Philibert de l'Orme, 1550; continued by Henry IV.; and finished by Louis XIV. This palace was stormed by the mob, 10 Aug., 1792; and ransacked in the revolutions of July, 1830, and Feb., 1838. Louis Napoleon made it his residence in 1851, and greatly renovated it. The restoration of the Tuileries (much injured by fire by the communists, May 1871) was determined on, Oct., 1872; not proceeded with. The ruins were sold for 32,200/. to M. Picard, 4 Dec., 1882.

TULCHAN BISHOPS: a mere nominal episcopacy set up in Scotland by the regent Morton, who, with other nobles, absorbed the larger portion of the revenue, 1572-5. (Tulchan) was a stuffed calf's skin set before a cow to facilitate milking.

TULIPS, indigenous in the east of Europe, came to England from Vienna about 1578. It is recorded in the register of Alkmaar in Holland, that in 1639, 120 tulips, with the offsets, sold for 90,000 florins; and that one, called the Viceroy, sold for 4283 guilders! The States stopped this ruinous traffic. The tulip tree, Liriodendron tulipifera, was brought to England from America, about 1643.

TUMUT, New South Wales, a small town on the Tumut river, a tributary of the Murraybridge, 261 miles S.W. of Sydney. It is the centre of a rich agricultural district, and mines are worked. Tumut was placed first on the list of places by the committee appointed to consider the choice of a site for the federal capital of Australia. Committee's selection rejected by the senate, Oct., 1893.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS (Kent). The springs were discovered, it is stated, by Dudley, lord North, who, when very ill, was restored to health by the use of the waters, 1666. The wells were visited by the queens of Charles I. and II., and by queen Anne, and soon became fashionable. Population, 1901, 15,000; 1909 (est.), 37,000.

The town was incorporated by royal charter early in.......

The famous Nelson memorandum lent to the corporation by Mr. H. M. Woolham, the purchaser.

TUNGSTEN (also called wolfram and scheelium), a hard whitish brittle metal. From tungstate of lead, Scheide in 1781 obtained tungstic acid, whence the brothers de Luyart and in 1786 obtained the metal. In 1859 it was employed in making a new kind of steel.

TUNIS (N. Africa) stands nearly on the site of Carthage. Tunis was besieged by Louis IX., of France, who died near it 25 Aug., 1270. It remained under African kings till taken by Barbarossa, for Solyma the Magnificent, 1531. Barbarossa was expelled by the emperor Charles V., when 1600 Christian slaves were set at liberty, June, 1535. The country was recovered by the Turks under Selim II. 1575. The bey of Tunis was first appointed in 1574; Tunis was reduced by admiral Blake, on the bey refusing to deliver up the British captives, 1665. The Hussien dynasty was founded 1705. In July, 1856, the bey agreed to make constitutional reforms. He died 22 Sept., 1859; and his brother and successor Mohamed-es-Sadok took the oath of fidelity to the constitution. He died, and was succeeded by his brother Süli Ali, 28 Oct., 1882; died, 11 June, 1902; succeeded by his son Mohamed; succeeded by Mohamed en Nasr, 1906. Tunis made a French protectorate, 1882. Estimated total population, 1,400,000 (about 80,000 Europeans). Chief town Tunis (pop. 250,000, including 160,000 moslems, 50,000 Jews, 52,150 Italians, 18,000 French). TUNNELS, for drainage, are ancient. The earliest tunnel for internal navigation was executed by M. Bugeat, in the reign of Louis XIV., at Beziers in France. The first in England was by Mr. Brindley, on the duke of Bridgewater's canal, near Manchester, about 1766. Project of the Gravesend tunnel, 1860—see the report upon it, 1861. The Thames Tunnel was projected by Mr. Brunel in 1823, and opened for foot passengers, March, 1843; see Thames Tunnel. Immemorial tunnels have been made for railways. The railway tunnel at Liverpool was completed in the middle of 1829, lit up with gas, and exhibited once a week. See Alp [Mont Cenis, etc.] and Thames.

Tunnel opened, 25 Dec., 1836, the passenger train run through, 25 Dec., 1835; formally opened by the prince of Wales, 26 Jan., 1836. The Severn tunnel near Bristol, constructed by W. C. Richardson, for the Western company's railway began, March, 1839; official train passed through, 5 Sept., 1838; opened for traffic, 1 Sept., 1839, for passengers, 1 Feb., 1840. The Channel Tunnel was projected by Mr. F. Budden, at the Society of Arts.

TUNNELS.

TUNNEL AND POUNDAGE. 1421

TUNNAGE AND POUNDAGE were ancient duties levied on every tun of wine and pound of other goods, imported or exported, and were the origin of our "customs." They commenced in England about 1346, and were granted to the kings for the benefit of the English. With Edward IV. Charles I. gave great offence by levying them on his own authority, 1628. They were granted to Charles II. for his lifetime, 24 June, 1660. By the act 27 Geo. III. c. 13, these and other duties were repealed, 1787, and a new arrangement of excise and customs was introduced.

The first steam turbine-driven vessel, the Tihmara, was constructed by the hon. C. A. Parsons at his works at Newcastle-on-Tyne. The Tihmara, a small vessel, 100 ft. in length, underwent her first trial 4 Nov. 1894. The system rapidly developed, owing to the increased speed of the vessels fitted with turbine engines, and the economy effected in coal by their use; improving methods being made in turbine construction and the application of the system to various types of ships, including liners and vessels of the royal navy. The turbine-driven torpedo-boat destroyer Viper was lost off the Channel Islands in 1896; and the I. & B., after suffering a similar fate in the North Sea in 1897. The first Clyde passenger ship, King Edward, was built in 1882, followed by the Queen Alexandra and the Princess Royal, 1893. The first turbine steamer, for the Atlantic passenger service, the Allan line Victoria, 10,000 tons gross, was launched in 1894; and in the same year a sister ship, owned by the same line, the Victoria, 11,000 tons gross, was also launched. The Atlantic, which had the Atlantic cable line between 1854 and 1866, for the purpose of conveying intelligence between this country and the United States; and on her trial trips attained a speed of 105 knots in a prolonged run. Other large liners and war vessels driven by turbines have since been constructed. See also Shipping, Steam Engine, and Navigation, Navy, and Addison.

New American Scout Crusing. The Parma, in a short time, set out to determine the relative efficiency and coal consumption of varying types of engines, by running, maintaining an average speed of 25 knots, over a distance of 1,000 miles between Block Island and Sandy Hook.

TURIN. The ancient Augusta Taurinorum in Piedmont, capital of the Sardinian States, and of the kingdom of Italy, till 1861, when it was superseded by Florence. Its importance dates from the permanent union of Savoy and Piedmont in 1416. The French besieged this city; but prince Eugene defeated their army, and compelled them to raise the siege, 7 Sept. 1756. In 1758, the French republican army took possession of Turin, seized all the strong places and arsenals of Piedmont, and obliged the king and his family to remove to the island of Sardinia. In 1799, the French were driven out by the Austrians and Russians; but the city and all Piedmont surrendered June 1800. In May 1814, it was restored to the king of Sardinia; see Italy, 1864. Here prince Humbert was married to his cousin Margherita amidst great rejoicing, 22 April, 1868. The monument to Cavour was inaugurated, 8 Nov. 1873. An exhibition opened by the king, 24 April, 1881; another opened by the king, July, 1899; a third opened by the king, and to prince Amadeus of Savoy (see king of Spain) and to king Humbert, inaugurated, 5 May. TURKEY. The Turks were originally a tribe of Tartars; but, by incorporation with the peoples they have conquered, they have formed a mixed race. About 750, they obtained possession of a part of Armenia, called from them Turcomania. They gradually extended their power; but in the 13th century, being harassed by other Tartar tribes, they returned to Asia Minor. The Turkish empire till 1878 comprehended the almost independent principalities, the states of the Morea, of Montenegro, the hereditary vice-royalty of Egypt, and Tunis. TURNER'S ACT, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35 (1859), relates to the court of chancery.

TURNER'S LEGACIES. Joseph M. W. Turner, a great landscape painter, was born in April, 1775, and died 10 Dec., 1851. He bequeathed to the nation all the pictures and drawings collected by him and deposited at his residence, 47, Queen Anne's Court, London, on condition that a national gallery should be erected for them within ten years; and directed his funded property to be expended in founding an asylum at Twickenham for decayed artists. The will was disputed by his relatives, but a compromise was made. The oil-paintings (100 in number) and the drawings (1,400) were obtained by purchase, and the engravings and some other property were transferred to the next of kin. The drawings were cleaned and mounted under the careful superintendence of Mr. Ruskin, and the pictures were sent to Marlborough-house for exhibition. In 1861, many of the pictures were removed from the South Kensington Museum to the National Gallery, others in 1880. The sketches, plates, &c., of Turner's Liber Studiorum, were sold for about 20,000l., 28 March, 1873.

TUSCAN ORDER OF ARCHITECTURE, 5 deduced Doric, used in Tuscany for buildings in which strength is chiefly required. Wotton.

TUSCANY, formerly a grand-duchy in Central Italy, the northern part of the ancient Etruria (which see). It formed part of the Lombard kingdom, after the conquest of which by Charles I., 1725, it was made a marquisate for Boniface about 1828. His descendant, the great countess Matilda, bequeathed the southern part of her domain to the pope (1115). In the northern part (then called Tuscia), the cities, Florence, Pisa, Siena, Lucca, &c.
gradually became flourishing republics. Florence became the chief under the government of the Medici family; see Florence. The duchy in that family began in 1531; and the grand-duchy in 1569. After the extinction of the Medici in 1737, Tuscany was given by the treaty of Vienna (1738) to Francis, duke of Lorraine (married to Maria Theresa of Austria in 1730), who had ceded his hereditary estates to France. Population in 1852, 2,226,265; 1861, 2,543,154; 1870 (est.), 2,705,500.

TUSCULUM (now Frascati), a city of Latium (S. Italy). The Tusculans supported Tarquinius Superbus against the Romans, by whom they were totally defeated, 436 B.C. The Tusculans, on account of their friendship with the Carthaginians, the last of the other Latinis, who took their city, 356, but were severely chastised for it. Here Cicero during his retirement wrote his “Tusculane Disputations,” about 46 B.C.

TWELVE TABLES, see Decemviri.

TWENTIETH CENTURY MILLION GUINEAS FUND, see under Wesleyan Methodists.

TWINS, joined together, have been born frequently, but seldom lived long. Helen-Judith, joined Hungarian twins, were born in 1715, and died in 1723. Millicent-Christine, negro twins, born in North Carolina in 1851, were wholly distinct in the upper part of the body, but one in the lower part of the spinal column and pelvis, the four legs obeying nerves from a common centre. They sang and danced well, and were named the “Two-headed Nightingale.” The will, understanding, and conscience were distinct. Exhibited in London 17 Aug., 1855. See Siamese Twins.

TWIN-SHIP, see under Steam.

“TWO PENNY TRASH,” a term given to W. Cobbett’s Weekly Political Register, after 2 Nov., 1814, when he reduced the price from 12 d. to 2d.

TYBURN (W. London), at the west end of Oxford-road (now street), the chief place in London for the execution of malefactors till 1783. Pennant, who died 1788, remembered Oxford-street as “a deep, hollow road, and full of boughs, with here and there a ragged house, the lurking-place of out- thieves.”

In conformity with an act passed in 1667, a so-called “Tyburn ticket” was given to the prosecution of a criminal executed at Tyburn. The ticket gave exemption from serving on juries and parish officers. The act was repealed in 1812.

TYBURN TREE, -Exact site of the gallows at Tyburn marked by a stone table, bearing a representation in brass, of the ancient triangular gallows, and fixed in the carriage-way at the junction of Edgewan-road, Oxford-street, and Hayswater-road, by the London county council, 10 April, 1909.

“TYBURNIA” (formerly known as a N.W. suburb of London) was built between 1839 and 1850, on the green fields and nursery grounds in Paddington belonging to the see of London.

TYLER’S INSURRECTION, in opposition to the poll-tax imposed on all persons above 15 Nov., 1838. One of the collectors, acting with incredible rudeness to Watt Tyler’s daughter, was struck dead by the father, June, 1381. His neighbours took arms, and in a short time almost the whole of the population of the southern and eastern counties rose, exerting freedom from their lords, and plundering. On 12 June, 1381, they gathered upon Blackheath to the number of 10,000 men, and on 13 June murdered Simon of Sudbury, archbishop of Canterbury, and Sir Robert Hales, the royal treasur- er. The king, Richard II., invited Tyler to a TYRRENIA.

Until 15th at Smithfield, where the latter offered the king a menacing manner, now and again lifting up his sword. On this the mayor, Walworth, stunned Tyler with a blow of his mace, and one of the king's knights named Cavendish, dispatched him. Richard tempered with the multitude by promising a charter, and thus led them out of the city, when Sir K. Knollys and a band of knights attacked and dispersed them with much slaughter. The insurrection in Norfolk and Suffolk was subdued by the bishop of Norwich, and 1500 of the rebels were executed.

TYNDALE MEMORIAL. A statue of William Tyndale, protestant martyr, translator of the new testament, published 1525, was set up on the Thames Embankment in 1883. Sculptor, Mr. J. E. Bochum.

TYMENSHOUTH, Northumberland. Here are remains of a monastery built by king Edwin, 625; destroyed by the Danes; rebuilt by king Egfrid, 671-85; often ravaged by Danes, 795-99; re-founded and made a castle, by Rob. de Mowbray, 1493; plundered by Scots, 1316 and 1380; fortified for Charles I, 1642; taken by Scots, 1644; finally ruined, 1665; and made a depot, 1783. The chapel has been restored. Tymemouth was made a borough, returning one member to parliament, 1832. An aquarium, winter-garden, &c., was opened, 27 Aug. 1878. Population, 1881, 44,118; 1911, 51,514; 1919 (est.), 55,808.

TYPE-COMPOSING MACHINES, see under Printing.

TYPE-FOUNDING, see under Printing, 1452; 1720.

TYPE-WRITERS. M. Forceault sent to the Paris exhibition of 1873, a writing-machine for the blind; and several were invented by Wheatstone. After successive improvements, Messrs. Remington, in America, in 1875, contracted to construct 25,000. The standard speed is between 60 and 70 words per minute, the record 208. Many other types are in existence, including the Yost, Hammond, Oliver, Simplex, Bar-look and Smith-Premier.

TYRIAN. In early Greek history, the term was applied to any man who governed with irresponsible power. Solon objected to the term, and chose the name Archon (ruler), 504 B.C. The earliest tyrants were those at Sicyon, beginning with Cleisthenes, in the 7th century B.C. Tyranny declined in Greece about 391 B.C., and revived after the close of the Peloponnesian war, 404 B.C.; see Thirty Tyrants.

TYRE (Phoenicia), a great city, said to have been first built by Agaeus. Another city was built 1257 (about 2207, Hades) B.C. It was besieged by the Assyrians, who retired from before it, after a siege of upwards of five years, 713 B.C. Taken by Nebuchadnezzar, 572 B.C., and the city demolished, when the Tyrians removed to an opposite island, and built a new and magnificent city. It was taken by Alexander with much difficulty, after a siege of seven months, July, 332 B.C. He joined the island to the continent by a mole. Strabo. Tyre was captured by the Crusaders, 7 July, 1124; by the French, 3 April, 1799; and by the allied fleet, during the war against Mehemet Ali, 1841.

TYRE, ERA OF, began on 19 Oct. 1235 B.C., with the month of Hyperberetha. The months were the same as those used in the Grecian era, and the year is similar to the Julian year. To reduce this era to ours, subtract 124; and if the given year be less than 125, deduct it from 125; and the remainder will be the year before Christ.

TYROL, the eastern part of ancient Rhaetia, now a province of the Austrian empire, was ceded to the house of Hapsburg in 1363 by Margaret, the heiress of the last count. It became an appanage of the younger (or Tyrol) branch of the imperial house, which came to the throne in the person of Maximilian II., in 1618. The French conquered the Tyrol in 1805, and united it to Bavaria; but in 1809 an insurrection broke out, headed by Andreas Hofer, an innkeeper, who drove the Bavarians out of the Tyrol, thoroughly defeated some French detachments, but laid down his arms at the treaty of Vienna. He was subsequently accused of corresponding with the Austrians, captured and sent to Mantua, and there shot by order of the French government, 20 Feb. 1810. The Austrian emperor commended his family in 1819, and erected his statue in Innsbruck in 1834; another statue on the Iselberg was unveiled in the presence of the emperor Francis Joseph, 28 Sept. 1893. The Tyrolese riders were very effective in the Italian war in 1859. The Arlberg tunnel railway from Innsbruck to Bregenz inaugurated by the emperor 20 Sept. 1881. Population in 1890, 812,696; 1900, 850,962; 1910 (est.), 901,750.

ULPHILAS'S BIBLE, see under Bible.

ULSTER, the N. division of Ireland. After the death of Strongbow, 1176, John de Courcy was made earl of Ulster; Hugh de Lacy was earl, 1213; (see Walter de Burgh, 1214), and his son, Geoffrey, who married Elizabeth, married Lionel, son of Edward III, 1352. He thus became earl of Ulster. In 1641, the British colonisation of the forfeited lands (named the Ulster settlements or plantations) began, much land being granted to the corporation of London; see Irish Society. The consequent rebellion of the Irish chiefs, Roger More, Phelim O'Neill, McGuire, Earl of Inniskillen, and others, broke out on 23 Oct. 1641 (see Ireland).—Ulster King of Arms appointed for Ireland, 1553. By the ancient “Ulster tenant-right,” the outgoing tenant of a farm received from his successor a sum of money for the privilege of occupancy. A modified form of this right was adopted in the Irish land act, passed 8 July, 1870.

The Ulster Convention, proposed 8 April, met at Belfast 17 June, 1852, in a large pavilion erected for the purpose. 12,000 delegates of various classes and opinions, from all parts of the province, with many other persons, were present, the duke of Abercorn being in the chair. The proceedings, which were of a grave, earnest character, began with a prayer and the singing of part of psalm xlv. Five resolutions for firmly maintaining the Union of Great Britain and Ireland in opposition to the scheme for home rule were passed unanimously.

Ulster Convention League formed (4,000, subscribed) (annual subscriptions) 2 Aug., 1872. Manifesto of the Ulster Defence Union, signed by the Duke of Abercorn, Marquis of Londonderry, and others, issued 16 March, 1870; 12,920 signatures up to June, 1873. Joyful demonstrations at the rejection of the home rule bill by the lords. 9 Sept.

Great unionist demonstration under the auspices of the Ulster unionist council; speech of the Duke of Abercorn on the home rule bill “dangerous.” 2 Jan., 1876.

ULTRAMONTANISTS (from ultra montes, beyond the mountains), a term originally applied in France to those who upheld the extreme authority of the pope in opposition to the freedom of the Gallican church, which had been secured by various bulls, and especially by the concordat of 15 July, 1801. Ultramontanists now are those who maintain the official infallibility of the bishop of Rome.

ULUNDI, Zululand, South Africa. On 4 July, 1879, the Zulus, commanded by their king, Cetewayo, who had refused the conditions of peace, were totally defeated near here by lord Chelmsford, after a severe conflict. Capt. Wyatt-Edgell, 17 Lancers, and 4 men were killed, and about 53 wounded. The British were attacked in the open country by the Zulus, who enveloped our hollow square and charged on all sides up to within 60 yards, when they broke and fled under the heavy fire. They were pursued and routed by cavalry. About 23,000 Zulus engaged, 1,500 killed. The British lost only 80 men, and the Zulus exposed great courage. The royal kaal at Ulundi and other military kraals were burnt.

UMBRELLA, described in early dictionaries as "a portable tent-house to carry in a person's hand to screen him from violent rain or heat."
UMBRIA.

UNIFICATION.

Umbrellas appear in the carvings at Persepolis. Niebuhr saw a great Arabian prince returning from a mosque, he and each of his family having a large umbrella carried by his side. Old chinaware shows the Chinese decorated by umbrellas. It is said then the first person who generally used an umbrella in the streets of London was the benevolent Jonas Hanway, who died in 1786.

John Macdonald, a footman, who wrote his own life, informs us that he had "a fine silk umbrella, which he bought because he could not with any comfort to himself use it, the people calling out, "Frenchman! why don't you get a coach?"" The hackney-coachmen and chairmen were chauvinists against their rival. The footman says, he "permitted for three months, till they took no further notice of this novelty. Foreigners began to use theirs; and then the English." 1778.

UMBRIA, an ancient division of Italy, west of Etruria, finally subjugated by the Romans at Sentinum (which see), 295 B.C. For the steamer Umbria, see Steam Engine, 1819-23.

UNCLAIMED MONEY, &c., a pamphlet with this title, by Mr. Edward Preston, was published in 1883, describes six classes and recommends legislation to facilitate publication for the benefit of claimants.

UNIFICATION, see London, March, 1885, et seq., Mr. John Leighton's ingenious plan published, 1895.
UNIFORMITARIANS.

UNIFORMITY ACTS. That of 2 & 3 Edward VI., 15 Jan., 1547, ordained that the order of divine worship, drawn up by Cranmer and others, "with the aid of the Holy Ghost," should be the only one used after 20 May. The penalties for refusing to use it were fine and imprisonment. This act was confirmed in 1552, repented by Mary, 1554; and re-enacted by Elizabeth in 1559. The act of Uniformity, 14 Charles II., c. 4, was passed in 1662. It enjoined a uniformity in matters of religion, and obliged all clergy to subscribe to the thirty-nine articles, and use the same form of worship, and same book of common prayer. Its enforcement on 24 Aug., 1662, termed Black Bartholomew's day, caused, it is said, upwards of 2000 ministers to quit the church of England. This day was commemorated by dissenters in 1862. The Act of Uniformity Amendment act, whereby shortened services were authorised, and other changes made, was passed 18 July, 1872. The Uniformity of Process act, which made many law changes, was passed 23 May, 1832.

UNIFORMS. Military uniforms were first used in France, "in a regular manner" by Louis XIV. about 1668. In England the uniform was soon afterwards adopted in the military service, but with little analogy to the modern dress. See under Navy.

UNUGNITUS, see Bull.

UNIFLAMMABLE SALTS. At the British Association, 15 Sept., 1859, MM. Versmann and Oppenheim announced their discovery that fabrics steeped in solutions of tunzstate of sika, or sulphate of phosphat of ammonia, burn without flame.

UNION CHARGEABILITY ACT, providing for the better distribution of the charge for relieving the poor in unions, was passed in June, 1865. One object of the act is the improvement of the dwellings of agricultural labourers.

UNION OF CALMAR, 1357; of Utrecht, 1579.

UNION OF ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND by the accession of James VI. of Scotland as James I. of England, 23 March, 1603. The legislative union of the two kingdoms (as Great Britain) was attempted, but failed in 1603 and 1671; in the reign of queen Anne, commissioners were appointed, the articles discussed, and, notwithstanding a great opposition made by the Tories, every article in the union was approved by a great majority, first in the house of commons, and afterwards by the peers, 22 July, 1706; was ratified by the Scottish parliament, 16 Jan., 1707; and became law, 1 May, same year.

UNION GENERALE, see France, Dec., 1882.

UNION OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND effected, 1 Jan., 1801.

Proposed in the Irish parliament, 22 Jan., 1775. Rejected by the commons of Ireland, the votes being 135 for, to 17 against the union, 24 Jan., 1775. Passed 7 June, 1775. The English house of commons in the same question divided, 149, 141, and 14, for the union; against it, 15, 25, and 27 respectively.

Lord Castlereagh detailed his plan of the union, in the house of lords, founded on the resolutions of the British parliament thereon, 5 Feb. Votes of the commons agreeing to it, 71 in favour of 39 against, on 15, 17 Feb., and again, 15 against, on 12, 21 Feb. The houses of lords and commons wait on the lord-bailiff of Irish towns with the articles of union, 27 March.

The act passed in the Irish parliament, 23 June, and in the British parliament, 2 July, 1800.

The imperial national standard first displayed at the tower of London, and upon Bedford Tower, Dublin Castle, on the act of legislative union becoming an operative law, 1 Jan., 1801.

For attempts to dissolve this union, see Repeal, Ireland, 1829.

UNION JACK. The original flag of England was the banner of St. George, i.e., white with a red cross, which, 12 April, 1666 (three years after James I. ascended the throne) was incorporated with the banner of Scotland, i.e., blue with a white diagonal cross. This combination obtained the name of "Union Jack," in allusion to the union of Scotland, and the word Jack is considered a corruption of the word Jacobus, Jacques, or James. This arrangement continued until the union with Ireland, 1 Jan., 1801, when the banner of St. Patrick, i.e., white with a diagonal red cross, was amalgamated with it, and forms the present Union flag. A Mansion house meeting in aid of a "Union Jack" club in memory of the soldiers and sailors who died in the S. African war, 25 Feb., 1903. This club has been largely subscribed to, rooms and cats being endowed by various regiments.

UNION JACK CLUB, Waterloo-road, S.E. The club founded by subscription at a cost of £4000, for the use of soldiers, sailors and marines, and as a national memorial to those men of the services who had lost their lives in the South African and Chinese wars, was opened by king Edward, accompanied by queen Alexandra, 1 July, 1907.

UNION RELIEF ACT, passed in 1862, continued in 1863, to enable boards of guardians of certain unions to obtain temporary aid to meet the extraordinary expenditure for relief occasioned by the distress in the cotton manufacturing districts.

UNIONISTS. A Spanish political party, long headed by marshal Serrano. In 1863 they advocated the election of the due de Montpensier as king. See Progressist and Spain, Home Rule, Ireland, &c.

UNIT, a gold coin, value 20s., issued by James I. in 1601.

UNITARIANS, termed Socinians from Ladius Socinus, who founded a sect in Italy about 1546. They profess to believe in and worship one only self-existent God, in opposition to those who worship the Trinity in unity. They consider Christ to have been a mere man: and do not admit the use of an atonement, or of the complete inspiration of the Scriptures. Michael Servetus printed a tract in disparagement of the doctrine of the Trinity. In 1553, proceeding to Naples through Geneva, Calvin induced the magistrate to arrest him on a charge of blasphemy and heresy. Servetus, refusing to retract his opinions, was condemned to the flames, which sentence was carried into execution, 27 May, 1553. Servetus is numbered among those anatomists who made the nearest approach to the doctrine of the circulation of the blood, before Harvey established that doctrine. Matthew Hamont was burnt at Norwich for asserting Christ not to be the Son of God, 1700. The Unitarians were numerous in Transylvania in the 17th century; they came to England about 1700, and many of the original English presbyterian churches became Unitarian about 1730. They were not included in the Toleration act till 1813. Their tenets resemble those of the Arminians and Socinians (which see). The Great Bible passed 1625, Dune, 1626. In Dec., 1833, by a decision of the vice-chancellors the Unitarians (as such) lost the possession of lady Hewley's charity; the decision was affirmed on appeal in 1842. British and Foreign Unitarian Association founded, to promote Unitarianism, 1825. There were 229 congregations in England in 1841. Returns for 1800 show 372 Unitarian churches and places of worship in Great Britain and Ireland; in England, 203 places of worship; in Wales, 34; in Scotland, 7; and in Ireland 38. The total number of recognised ministers is 573. The rev. Dr. Martineau, LL.D., an eminent preacher and writer, died, aged 91, 11 Jan. 1890. The internal Unitarian council met in Geneva, 1875. Ninth triennial general conference at Oxford, 17 April, 1890.

UNITED BRETHREN, see Moravians.

UNITED IRISHMEN, a political society founded in 1791, was at first loyal, but afterwards met secretly, to establish a republic, became active in 1795. Theobald Wolfe Tone, the founder, was captured by sir John Warren in the Bower, one of six frigates destined to support the rebellion, in Oct. 1798. He anticipated his punishment by suicide in prison Nov. 1798.

UNITED KINGDOM. England and Wales were united in 1283; Scotland to both in 1707; and the British realm was named the United Kingdom on the union of Ireland, 1 Jan. 1801; see Union and article Population—The United Kingdom Alliance, for the total suppression of liquor traffic, was founded, 1 June, 1853. See Permissive Bill. The subscribers' manifesto of this alliance occupied a page of the Times, 11 Dec. 1851. Annual reports, United Kingdom Benevolent Association, founded 1835, grants annuities to poor persons of a better class.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, in Scotland, was formed 13 May, 1817, see Burghers and Relief Church. The United Presbyterians formed a union with the Free Church of Scotland (which see), 31 Oct. 1860, the two bodies now being designated the United Free Church of Scotland.

THE UNITED SERVICE MUSEUM was founded by His Majesty King William IV., on 23 June, 1831, as "The Naval and Military Library and Museum." In 1893 the Museum was transferred to its present building, which is the Banqueting House of Old Whitehall Palace, and the scene of the execution of King Charles I. The ceiling of the building was painted by Rubens, and is very fine. The Museum contains many interesting models and also possesses complete models of the naval and military relics, models of ancient and modern war vessels; collections of arms of all periods, and various other exhibits.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA were so styled by the congress of the revolted British provinces, 9 Sept. 1776. Their flag was declared to be thirteen stripes, alternately red and white, and thirteen stars in a blue field, corresponding with the then number of states of the union, 20 June, 1777. There are now (1910) 46 states, i.e., 13 original states, 7 which were admitted without having previously been organized as territories, and 26 which had been territories; the territory of Alaska and the island of Hawaii. Area, 3,022,000 square miles. The government of the United States is a pure democracy. Each of the states has a separate and independent legislature for the administration of its local affairs, but all are ruled in matters of imperial policy by two houses of legislature, the senate, elected for six years, and the house of representatives (391 in 1910) elected for two years, to which delegations are sent from the different members of the confederacy. The president of the United States is elected every fourth year by the free voice of the people. He and his ministers have no seat in the legislative assemblies. His veto may be nullified by the vote of two-thirds of the house. The election of Abraham Lincoln as president on 4 Nov. 1860, was followed by the secession of eleven slaveholding states, and led to the great civil war, 1861-5; see Confederates, English Language, Cuba, 1898.

USES, STATUTE OF, 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10 (1535–6); see Charitable Uses.

USHIANT, an island near Brest, N.W. France, near which two naval battles were fought between the British and French fleets.

1. On 27 July, 1728, after an indecisive action of three hours, the French, under cover of the night, withdrew into the harbour of Brest. Admiral Kingel commanded the English fleet; the count d'Orvilliers the French. The failure of a complete victory was attributed to admiral sir Hugh Palliser's non-compliance with the admiral's signals. Palliser preferred articles of accusation against his commander, who was tried and acquitted, and the charge against him declared to be "manifestly false and groundless."

2. Lord Howe with 25 ships signally defeated the French fleet (66 ships, under Villaret-Joyeuse), taking six ships of the line, and sinking one (the Vengeur) 1 June, 1794. While the two toasts proposed in this action, a large fleet of merchantmen, on the safety of which the French nation depended for its means of preventing the war, got safely into Brest.

Various French histories, on the authority of the French demagogue Barrie, state that the English had 25 ships of the line, and the French only 26, and that the crew of the Vengeur (400) fought the crow's nest of the ship's sail, displaying the tri-colour flag. All this was denied in 1839, and disproved by rear-admiral Griffith in Nov., 1837. The Vengeur surrendered to the British, who (to the fury of the French) hoisted the white ensign, and afterwards contradicted by both.
harbour, which gave occasion to the enemy to claim the laurels of the day, notwithstanding their loss in ships, and in killed and wounded, which was very great. The day was long termed in England the "glorious first of June."

USURY.

USURY from a stranger was permitted to the Jews, but forbidden from their brethren, 1491 B.C. (Ecod. xxii. 25. Dcut. xxxiii. 13.) This law was enforced by Nehemiah, 445 B.C. (Neh. v.) Usury was prohibited by the English parliament, 1341. Until the 15th century, no Christians were allowed to receive interest of money, and Jews were the only usurers, and therefore often banished and persecuted; see Jews. By the 37th of Henry VIII. the rate of interest was fixed at 10 per cent., 1545. This statute was repealed by Edward VI., but re-enacted 13 Eliz. 1570. For later legislation, see Interest.

UTOPIA. The name given by sir Thomas More to an imaginary island, representing the "best state of a public weale," described in a book written in Latin, published 1518. The work is considered to be an ironical satire on the state of Europe at the time, Utopia signifying "Nowhere." An English translation was published in 1551; the rev. J. H. Luton's edition was published by the Clarendon Press, Nov. 1805. For the loss of the Utopian emigrant steamer, see Wrecks, 17 March, 1891.

UTRECHT (the Roman Trajectum ad Rhenum) became the seat of an independent bishopric about 695. The last prelate, Henry of Bavaria, weary of his turbulent subjects, sold his temporal government to the emperor Charles V. in 1528. The union of the Seven United Provinces began here (see United Provinces); signed 23 Jan. 1579; 300th anniversary celebrated 23 Jan. 1879. The Treaty of Utrecht, which terminated the wars of queen Anne, was signed by the ministers of Great Britain and France, and all the other allies, except the ministers of the empire, 11 April, 1713. This treaty secured the Protestant succession in England, the separation of the French and Spanish crowns, the destruction of the works of Dunkirk, the enlargement of the British colonies and plantations in America, and a full satisfaction for the claims of the allies. Utrecht surrendered to the Prussians, 9 May, 1757; was acquired by the French, 18 Jan. 1795; and restored at the peace, 1814. Population, 1807, 81,398; 1900, 104,104; 1910 (est.), 120,500.

UXBRIDGE (W. Middlesex). On 30 Jan. 1645, commissioners met here to discuss terms of peace between Charles I. and the parliament; they separated without effect. 22 Feb. The latter required absolute control of the army and navy, the abolition of the episcopacy, liturgy, &c.
V. VACCINATIONS, see Terms.

VACCINATION (from Variola Vaccina, the cow-pox), discovered by Dr. Edward Jenner. He was born in 1749, and educated for the medical profession, partially under John Hunter. Having heard that milkmaids who had had the cow-pox never took the small-pox, he, about 1786, conceived the idea of vaccination. He made the first experiment to a healthy child on 14 May, 1796, the pus from the pustule of a milkmaid who had caught the cow-pox from the cows. He announced his success in a memoir published 1798, and vaccination, begun 21 Jan. 1799, soon became general, after much opposition. For this Dr. Jenner received 10,000l. from parliament, 2 June, 1802, and 20,000l. in 1807. The first national institution for vaccination, the Royal Jennerian Institution, was founded 19 Jan. 1803. The emperor Napoleon valued Dr. Jenner so highly, that he libered Dr. Wiickham, when a prisoner of war, at Jenner's request, and subsequently whole families of English, making it a point to refuse him nothing that he asked. Vaccination, although much opposed, was practised throughout all Europe previously to 1816. Dr. Jenner died suddenly, 26 Jan. 1823.

Royal Jennerian and London Vaccine Institution, founded 1803.
The Vaccination act, 1 & 4 Vict. passed 23 July, 1846.
A statute, subscribed for by all nations, was erected to Jenner's memory in Trafalgar square 30 April, 1838.
It was removed to Kensington in 1862.
Vaccination was made compulsory in England in 1855, and in Ireland and Scotland 1864.
A statute to Jenner was erected by the French at Boulogne, and inaugurated 14 Sept, 1865.
Vaccination laws were consolidated and amended by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 84, 12 Aug, 1857 (see Smallpox and Vaccination), and amended in 1871.

Much opposition to vaccination; an anti-vaccination society formed, 1870-71; a parliamentary commission appointed 23 Feb., 1877.

Vaccination act passed respecting punishment for compulsory vaccination dropped, 1870.

Vaccination direct from the cow or calf advocated and practised in Brussels, &c., 1877 (see above).

Successful vaccination of 65,000 sheep by M. Pasteur of Paris, up to 3 Oct., 1881.

Interim report issued 27 June; and 12 Sept. Amendment bill read 1st time, commoners, 1 May; withdrawn, Sept. 1887.

Increase of small-pox, especially in parts of London, attributed to anti-vaccination, 1 June-Aug. 1894.

Report presented 13 Aug.; the delay said to have been injurious, see Smallpox, 1894, and Jennerian Institution; final report issued 11 Nov., 1897.

Vaccination act passed (experimental for 5 years).

Exemptions from vaccination confirmed by 12 Aug., 1893.

Nat. anti-vaccination league meets at Eastbourne, 1899.

Imperial vaccination league formed, 30 June, 1902, first meeting, London, duke of Northumberland, president, 12 Dec. 1902; report issued with recommendations.

Deputations by the Imperial vaccination league on president of the Local government board to ensure more efficient primary vaccination, to require revaccination at school age, and to make better provision for the supply of pure lymph, 14 Jan. 1917.

New vaccination order in regard to fees issued by the Local government board, 21 May, 1917.

Another in regard to vaccination of children issued 1 Oct. 1917.

VACUUM, is produced by reducing the pressure of the atmosphere, whereby its power of absorbing moisture is greatly increased. The Aristotelian philosophers asserted that "nature abhors a vacuum." It has been proved that an absolute vacuum cannot be obtained by the air pump, a small residuum of gaseous matter remains after extreme exhaustion. To study the effects of the projection of an electric discharge upon this matter, Prof. W. Crookes (int. June, 1897) invented his celebrated vacuum tubes, which he exhibited with interesting experiments at the Royal Institution, 4 April, 1879. At the same place, on 21 Jan. 1881, Dr. Warren De La Rue exhibited splendid results which he had obtained with the assistance of Dr. Hugo Müller, by means of an electric discharge from a battery of 14,400 chloride of silver cells into vacuum tubes. See Königs Ray. 32 forms of vacuum tubes are described in Natur., 28 Jan. 1897. The power of absorbing moisture possessed by a vacuum has been utilised by M. Emil Passburg, of Breslau, in his drying apparatus which has been successfully employed for drying grains by Messrs. Guinness, of Dublin, since the spring of 1888.

VADMONIS LACUS, the Vadimonian lake, Umbria, central Italy, near which the Etruscans were totally defeated in two severe engagements by the Roman consuls: 1, by Fabius Maximus, 399 B.c.; 2, by Cornelius Dolabella, 283.

VAGRANTS. By law, after being whipped, a vagrant was to take an oath to return to the place where he was born, or had last dwelt for three years, 1530. A vagrant a second time convicted was to lose the upper part of the gristle of his right ear, 1535; a third time convicted, death. A vagabond to be branded with a V, and be a slave for two years, 1547. If he absconded and was caught, he was to be branded with S, and be a slave for life. Vagrants were punished by whipping, gaoling, boring the ears, and death for a second offence, 1572. The milder statutes were those of 17 Geo. II: 32, 33, and 59 Geo. III. The present Vagrant Act (5 Geo. IV. c. 83) was passed in 1821; amendment act passed, 12 Aug., 1898. See under Poor.

VALENÇAY, a château near Châteauroux, central France, where Napoleon I. imprisoned Ferdinand of Spain from 1808 to 1813. His kingdom was restored to Ferdinand by a treaty signed 2 Dec. 1813.
VALENCIA. 1463

VALENCIA (E. Spain), the Valenti,a Eledtornum of the Romans, became the capital of a Moorish kingdom, 1000; annexed to Aragon 1238. Its university, founded, it is said, in the 13th century, was revived in the 15th. Valencia was taken by the earl of Peterborough in 1705, but submitted to the Bourbon after the unfortunate battle of Almanza, in 1707. It resisted the attempts made on it by marshal Moncey, but was taken from the Spaniards with a garrison of more than 16,000 men, and immense stores, by the French under Suchet, 9 Jan. 1812. Population of the city, 1887, 1,570,763; 1897, 204,768; 1910 (est.), 224,503.

VALENCIENNES (N. France). This city (the Roman Valencianum), after many changes, was taken by Louis XIV. in 1677, and annexed 1678. It was besieged from 23 May to 28 July, 1793, when the French garrison surrendered to the allies under the duke of York. It was retaken, together with Condé, by the French, 27-30 Aug. 1794; on capitulation, the garrison and 1,100 emigrants were made prisoners, with immense stores.

VALENTIA, a Roman province, including the country between the walls of Severus and Adrian, was reconquered from the Picts and Scots by Theodosius, and named after Valentinian I., the reigning emperor, 368.

VALENTINE'S DAY (14 Feb.). Valentine is said to have been a bishop, who suffered martyrdom under Claudius II. at Rome; others say under Aurelian, in 271. 618,000 letters passed through the post-office on 14 Feb. 1856. 530,300 was the estimated number of valentines delivered in 1864; in 1870, 1,545,755. The custom has now almost ceased. See Post.

VALENTINIANS, followers of Valentine, a priest, who, on being disappointed of a bishopric, forsok the Christian faith, declaring there were thirty gods and goddesses, fifteen of each sex, which he called Zones, or Ages. He taught in the 2d century, and published a gospel and psalms; his followers added other errors.

VALLA DOLID (Spain), the Roman Pintia and the Moorish Belad Wald : was recovered from the Christians by Orsino II., the first king of Leon, 914-23. It became capital of Castile in the 15th century. It was taken by the French Jan. 1808; and captured by the English, 4 June, 1813. Here died Christopher Columbus, 20 May, 1506. Population, 1887, 62,012; 1910 (est.), 80,060.

VALLOMBROSA (Central Italy). A Benedictine abbey was founded here by John Guibert, about 1053. The monks were termed Val Lombroso.

VALMY (N. France). Here the French, commanded by Kellermann, defeated the Prussians, commanded by the duke of Brunswick, 20 Sept. 1792. The victory was of immense moral advantage to the republicans; and Kellermann was made duke of Valmy in 1808.

VALOIS, a county (N. France) given by Philip III. to his younger son Charles, whose son Philip became king as Philip IV. in 1328; see France.

VALOR ECCLESIASTICUS, a report of the annual value of church property, made by order in 1534, was published by the Record Commission in 1810-34.

VALPARAISO, principal port of Chili, South America, was bombarded by the Spanish admiral Mendez Nuñez, on 31 March, 1806, when much property was destroyed. It suffered by earthquakes in 1822, 1829, and 1857. Population 1870, 122,447; 1910 (est.), 287,500. See Chile, 1891.

Large part of the city reduced to ruins by an earthquake followed by fires; several thousand persons killed . . . 16 Aug. 1906

VALTELLINE (N. Italy), a district near the Rhaetian Alps, seized by the Grison league, 1312, and ceded to it, 1539. At the instigation of Spain, the catholics rose and massacred the protestants, 10-21 July, 1620. After much contention between the French and Austrians, the neutrality of the Vallentine was assured in 1639. It was annexed to the Cisalpine republic in 1797; to Italy, 1807; to Austria, 1814; to Italy, 1860.

VALUATION OF PROPERTY ACT, to provide for the uniform assessment of rateable property in the metropolis, was passed 9 Aug. 1866.

VALVASOR (or "Vavasor"). Camden holds that the "Vavasor" was next below a baron. Du Cange maintains that there were two sorts of vavasors: the greater, who held of the king, such as barons and counts; and the lesser, called "valvasini," who held of the former, such as vassals holding land under a nobleman himself a vassal. Vavasors are mentioned in the Domesday book, 1086.

VANADIM (from Vanadis, the Scandinavian Venus), metal discovered by Cefström, in 1839, combined with iron ore. A similar metal, discovered in lead ore by Del Rio in 1801, and named Erythronium, was proved by Wöhler to be Vanadium. Vanadium was discovered in the copper-bearing beds in Cheshire, in 1865, by Mr. (Capt. Sir) H. E. Roseoe, by whom its peculiarities were further studied, and published in 1867-8. It is useful in photography and dyeing.

VANCOUVER'S ISLAND, North Pacific ocean, near the main land. Settlements were made here by the English in 1778, which were seized by the Spaniards in 1780, but restored. By a treaty between the British government and that of the United States in 1846, this island was secured to the former. It has become of much greater importance since the discovery of gold in the neighbouring main land in 1858, and the consequent establishment of the colony of British Columbia (which see). Victoria, the capital, was founded in 1857. The island was united with British Columbia by act passed in Aug. 1866; and on 24 May, 1868, Victoria was declared the capital. See Juan, San. Chinese immigrants are virtually excluded by a poll-tax, 1878.

Death of the late Mr. W. Brown, of Tasmania, aged 62 14 April, 1907.

New ministry formed; sir W. E. Lewis premier and treasurer 18 June, 1909.

VARANGIONS, or VARAGIANS, a name given to northern pirates, who invaded Flanders, about 813; France, about 820; Italy, 852. Their leader, Ruric, invited by the Novgorodians to help them, founded the Russian monarchy, 862.

VARENNES, a town in N. E. France, is celebrated for the arrest of Louis XVI., his queen, sister, and two children. They fled from the Tuileries on 21 June, 1791; were taken here the next day, and conducted hence to Paris mainly through Drouet, the postmaster, who, at an intermediate town, recognised the king.

VARNA, a fortified seaport in Bulgaria, formerly European Turkey. A great battle was fought near this place, 10 Nov. 1444, between the Turks under Amurath H. and the Hungarians under their king Ladislaus and John Huniadea. The latter were defeated with great slaughter: the king was killed, and Huniadea made prisoner, who had opposed the Christians breaking the truce for ten years, recently made at Nevegim. The emperor Nicholas of Russia arrived before Varna, the headquarters of his army, then besieging the place, 5 Aug. 1828. The Turkish garrison made a vigorous attack on the besiegers, 7 Aug.; and another on the 21st, but were repulsed. Varna surrendered, after a sanguinary conflict, to the Russian arms, 11 Oct. 1828.

It was restored to the Turks in 1829, but its fortifications were dismantled, but have since been restored. The allied armies disembarked at Varna, 20 May, 1854, and sailed for the Crimea, 3 Sept. They suffered severely from cholera. In conformity with the treaty of Berlin, Varna was evacuated by the Turks, and occupied by Russians, autumn, 1878.

Population, 1888, 25,256; 1900, 35,413; 1910, 37,864.

New port of Varna, which took eight years to complete, was opened in the presence of Prince Ferdinand 31 May, 1906.

VASSAR COLLEGE (on the east bank of the Hudson, United States), for the higher education of women, was founded by Matthew Vassar in 1861.

VASSY (N. E. France). The massacre of the protestants at this place by the duke of Guise on 1 March, 1562, led to desecrating civil wars.

VATICAN (Rome), the ancient Mons Vaticanus, a hill of Rome. The commencement of the palace is ascribed to Constantine, Liberius, and Symmachus, and also to pope Eugenius III., 1149. It became the residence of the pope at his return from Avignon, 1377. The palace is VAUD, a Swiss canton, after having been successfully held by the Franks, the kings of Burgundy, emperors of Germany, dukes of Austria, and dukes of Savoy, was conquered by the Bernese, Jan 1536, and annexed, 1539. Vaud, made independent in 1798, joined the confederation in 1815. A new constitution was obtained in 1830, after agitation.

VAUXHALL BRIDGE, constructed of iron under the direction of Mr. Walker, at an expense of 150,000l. (to be defrayed by a toll). The first stone was laid 9 May, 1811, by prince Charles, eldest son of the duke of Brunswick; and the bridge was opened on 4 June, 1816; freed from toll, 23 May, 1859. Design for a new bridge to be built of granite backed with concrete approved by London County Council, Feb. 1898; parliamentary estimate of cost, 380,000l. Owing to difficulties, revealed by boring, due to softer clay, the council adopted, 25 Nov. 1902, the design of a steel elliptical-arch bridge with ornamental facings. London County Council decided upon a steel segmental-arch structure, 16 May, 1913; tender for superstructure, 142,642l., accepted 20 Oct. 1913; heavy work of structure completed Sept. 1915. The new bridge was opened by Mr. Evan Speirs, of the London County Council (erected at cost of 600,000l.), 26 May, 1916.

VAUXHALL GARDENS (London), were so denominated from the manner of Vauxhall, Falkeshall, Fox-hall, or Fawkeshall, said to have been the property of Fulke de Breauté about 1252. The premises were the property of Jane Vaux, in 1615, and the mansion-house was then called Stockton's. From her it passed through various hands, till it became the property of Mr. Tyers in 1732. The New Spring Gardens at Vauxhall are mentioned by John Evelyn in his diary 2 July, 1661, Pepys 29 May, 1662, Wycherley 1711, and in the Spectator 1711, as a place of great resort. The gardens were opened at last for a "riding and fishing," 1717, by Jonathan Tyers. The greatest season was in 1823, when 133,279 persons visited the gardens, and the receipts were 29,590l. The number on the then supposed last night, 5 Sept. 1830, was 16,689 persons. Vauxhall was sold by auction, 9 Sept. 1831, for 20,200l., and again, Aug. 1835. The last operations at Vauxhall took place on 25 July, 1859. The ground was sold for building purposes. Six persons killed and many injured by fall of stack of wood at Buckley's saw-mills, 25 Feb. 1880. Vauxhall park (formerly the lawn, &c., including the residence of Mr. H. Fawcett, M.P., purchased for 45,000l.) opened by the prime of Wales 7 July, 1890. The statue of professor Fawcett, by Mr. T. Haworth, the gift of sir Henry Doniton, was unveiled by the archbishop of Canterbury. 7 June, 1893.

VELMAS, the sacred books of the Hindoos, in Sanskrit, were probably written about the sixth or seventh century B.C. They are marvellous monuments of the ancient literature of India. The Vedic hymns, prayers, and liturgical formulae. The edition by professor Max Müller, printed under the patronage of the East India Company, appeared in 1849-74. Four volumes of a translation by H. H. Wilson appeared in 1850-67. Vols. V. & VI., edited by professor Cowell & W. F. Webster, completing the work, appeared in 1858. In 1857 the Maharajah of Travancore proposed to bear the expense of a new edition of the text, edited by professor Max Müller. Two vols. of this edition, printed at Oxford, appeared in 1857.

VEGETABLES. The table were brought from Flanders about 1520; see Gardening.

VEGETARIAN SOCIETY, founded 1847, whose members restrict themselves to a vegetable diet. A federation of societies throughout the world known as the Vegetarian Federal Union is active in the propaganda of the doctrines of vegetarianism. "Fratetnari," a settlement of vegetarians, existed in California in 1853. See Chion. Aug. 1854.

The London vegetarian association (founded 1839) hold annual meetings. International congresses are held.

VENIFIC TRIBUNALS: Vehmgerichte, Fehmgerichte, or Freigerichte, secret tribunals established in Westphalia to maintain religion and the public peace, had their origin in the time of Charlemagne, and rose to importance in 182, when Westphalia became subject to the archbishop of Cologne. Persons of the most exalted rank were subjected to their decisions, being frequently seized, tried, and executed. The emperors endeavoured to suppress them, but did not succeed till the 16th century. Their last court, it is said, was held in 1588. Sir W. Scott has described them in "Anne of Gerstein." A remnant of these tribunals was abolished by Jerome Bonaparte, king of Westphalia, in 1811.

VEIL, an independent Etruscan city near Rome. There were frequent wars between Veii and Rome, for above three centuries; see Pilate. Veii was taken by the dictator Camillus, it is said, after a siege of ten years, 396 B.C. When Rome was destroyed by the Gauls in 390, the Romans, who had fled to Veii, desired to remain there, and make it their capital, but were dissuaded from it by the entreaties of Camillus, and Veii was abandoned. It was restored by the Emperor Augustus, but had fallen into decay, at the time of Hadrian.

VELDRE (S.E. India) became the residence of the family of the dectroned sultan of Mysores, and strongly rescued by English troops, 1799. The revolt of the sepoys, in which the family of Tippoo took an active part, took place 10 July, 1806. The insurgents were subdued by colonel Gillopie, and mostly put to the sword; about 800 sepoys were killed.

VELVET. The manufacture, long confined to Genoa, Lucca, and other places in Italy, was carried to France, and thence to England, about 1855.

VENTILATORS were invented by the rev. Dr. Hales, and described to the Royal Society of London, May, 1741; and the ventilator for the use of ships was announced by Mr. Triewald, in November, same year. The marquis of Charnell's plan for warming and ventilating theatres and houses for audiences was applied to those of London about 1810. The systems of Dr. Reid (about 1834) and others followed, with much controversy. Dr. Arnold's work on this subject was published in 1838. A commission on warming and ventilation issued a report in 1850.

Bell-driven and electric volume fans largely in use, 1912.

VENTRILIOQUISM (speaking from the stomach), was known to the Greeks, who termed ventrilouquists "belly-prophets." The name is a misnomer, as the sounds are produced by regulating the breathing and organs of voice, without motion of the lips. Among eminent ventrilouquists were Baron Mengen and M. Saint Gille, about 1772 (whose experiments were examined by a commission of the French Academy); Thomas King (about 1716); Charles Mathews (1824); and M. Alexandre (1822); others since.

VENUS, the Roman goddess of love and beauty (the Greek Aphrodite). Status: Venus de Medicis, found near Tivoli, and removed to France, 1680; Venus found at Milo or Melos, 1820, placed in the Louvre, Paris, 1834. The transit of the planet over the sun was predicted by Kepler to take place.
VERA CRUZ.

6 Dec. 1631, but was not observed; he died 15 Nov. 1630. The first transit observed, was by the rev. Jeremiah Horrox, or Horrocks, and his friend, Wm. Crabtree, on 24 Nov. 1630, as predicted by Horrocks in 1633. The astronomer-royal Maskelyne observed her transit at St. Helena, 6 June, 1761. Capt. Cook made his first voyage in the Endeavor, to Otahite, to observe a transit of Venus, 3 June, 1769; see Cook's Voyages. The diurnal rotation of Venus was discovered by Cassini in 1667. This is contested by Schiaparelli and others, who assert her rotation to be as long as her revolution in her orbit. See Sun, note.

Halley suggested the observation of the transit as a means of estimating the distance of the earth from the sun, and devised a method for this purpose.

Another method was invented by Delisle about 1743.

Both plans were used in.

Dec. 1774.

Expeditions for the accurate observation of the place of the transits of the astronomic day; ordinary day, 5 Dec. 1824, were sent to different parts of the globe by all the great powers, and favourable results were reported.

1875.

The transit, on 5 Dec. 1828, was observed at Bath, Penzance, Cork, Cape Town, Washington, Melbourne, and many other places. The next transit will take place 8 June, 2004, and 6 June, 2023.

Venus was both a morning and evening star, rising at 4.5 min. before the sun, and setting 4.5 min. after the sun.

14 Feb. 1894.

Dr. W. R. Brooks obtained some good photographs by the light of Venus when a morning star, Sept. 1900.

VERA CRUZ (Mexico), built about 1600; was taken by the Americans in 1847, and by the allies on 17 Dec. 1861, during the intervention; retaken by the liberals, under Juarez, 27 June, 1867.

VERCELLI, the ancient Vercellae, Piedmont, near which Marius defeated the Umbri, 101 B.C. It was the seat of a republic in the 13th and 14th centuries. It was taken by the Spaniards, 1630; French, 1748; and allies, 1796; and afterwards par took of the fortunes of Piedmont.

VERDEN (Hanover). Here Charlemagne massacred about 3500 Saxons, who had rebelled and relapsed into idolatry, 782.

VERDUN (the ancient Verdunum), a first-class fortress on the Meuse, N.E. France, made a magazine for his legions by Julius Caesar. It was acquired by the Franks in the 6th century, and formed part of the dominions of Lothaire by the treaty of Verdun, 843, when the empire was divided between the sons of Louis I. It was taken and annexed to the empire by Odo in about 959. It surrendered to France in 1552; and was formally ceded in 1648. It was taken and held by the Prussians 43 days, Sept.—Oct. 1792. Gen. Beaumont, the commandant, committed suicide before the surrender, and 14 ladies were executed on 28 May, 1794, for going to the king of Prussia to solicit his clemency for the town. Verdun surrendered to the Germans 8 Nov. 1879, after a brave defence; two vigorous sallies being made 28 Oct. About 4000 men were captured, with a large number of arms and ammunition. It was the last place held by the Germans; and was given up 15, 16 Sept. 1879.

VERGARA, N. SPAIN. Here the Carlist general, Maroto, made a treaty, termed "The pacification of Vergara," with Espartero, 31 Aug. 1839. The monument to celebrate it was destroyed by the Carlists in Aug. 1873.

VERMAMANDIS (N. France), a county given by Charlemagne to his second son Pepin, whose family held it till the 11th century; in 1156 it came, by marriage, to the counts of Flanders; and in 1185 it was seized by Philip II., and incorporated with the monarchy in 1215.

VERMONT, a northern state in New America, was settled by the French, 1724-31; and ceded to Great Britain in 1763. It was freed from the authority of New York, and admitted as a state of the union in 1791. Population, 1880, 332,286; 1900, 343,641; 1910 (est.), 356,759; capital, Montpelier.

VERNEUIL (N.W. France), the site of a battle fought 17 Aug. 1424, between the Burgundians and English, under the regent duke of Bedford, and the French, assisted by the Scots, commanded by the count de Narbonne, the earls of Douglas and Buchan, &c. The French at first were successful; but some Lombard auxiliaries, who had taken the English camp, commenced pillaging. Two thousand English archers came then fresh to the attack; and the French and Scots were totally defeated, and their leaders killed.

VERNON GALLERY. The inadequate manner in which modern British art was represented in the National Gallery was somewhat remedied in 1847, by the munificent present to the nation, by Mr. Robert Vernon, of 157 pictures, all but two being by first-rate British artists. They were first exhibited at Mr. Vernon's house in Pall-mall, next in the vaults beneath the National Gallery, afterwards at Marlborough house, and are now at the South Kensington Museum. In 1857, Mr. John Sheepshanks followed Mr. Vernon's example; see Sheepshanks' Donations.

VERONA (N. Italy) was founded by the Gauls or Eruscan; see Campus Raudus. The amphitheatre was built by Titus, A.D. 82. Verona has been the site of many conflicts. It was taken by Constantine 312; and on 27 Sept. 496 Théodoric defeated Odoacer, king of the Ostrogoths. Verona was taken by Charlemagne 774. About 1260 Mastino della Scala was elected podestà, and his descendants (the Scaligeri) ruled, till subdued by the Visconti, dukes of Milan, 1387. Verona was conquered by the Venetians 1305, and held by them with some interruptions till its capture by the French general Mascena, 3 June, 1796. Near to it Charles Albert of Sardinia defeated the Austrians in May, 1848. Verona is one of the four strong Austrian fortresses termed the Quadrangle, or Quadrilateral (which see), and here the emperor Francis Joseph, on 12 July, 1859, in an order of the day, announced to his army that he must yield to circumstances unfavourable to his policy, and thanked his people and army for their support. It was surrendered to the Italian government, 16 Oct. 1866; and the king was received by 70,000 persons in the amphitheatre, 18 Nov. 1866. Above 50,000 coins of Galleons and other emperors, chiefly bronze, discovered near Verona, Jan. 1857. Population, 1881, 60,788; 1901, 74,201; 1910 (est.), 89,759.

VERSAILLES (near Paris) was a small village, in a forest thirty miles in circuit; where Louis XIII. built a hunting-seat about 1632. Louis XIV. between 1661 and 1687 enlarged it into a magnificent palace, which became the usual residence of the kings of France. By the treaty between Great Britain and the revolted colonies of British North America, signed at Paris, the latter power was admitted to be a sovereign and independent state, 3

VETERINARY COLLEGES.

"VESTIGES OF THE NATURAL HISTORY OF CREATION," a work which upholds the doctrine of progressive development as a hypothetic history of organic creation, ascribed to Robert Chambers, and other persons, first appeared in 1844, and occasioned much controversy. See Origin of Species.

VESUVIUS. MOUNT. S. ITALY. Near it, the Latin confederacy were totally defeated by the Romans, whose general, P. Decius Mus, had devoted himself to death, 330 B.C. By an eruption of Mount Vesuvius, the cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum (which see) were overwhelmed 24 Aug., 79 A.D., and more than 200,000 persons perished, among them Pliny the naturalist. Numerous other disastrous eruptions have occurred. Torre del Greco, with 4000 persons, was destroyed, 17 Dec., 1631. There was a dreadful eruption, which took place suddenly, 24 Nov., 1759, and another 8 Aug., 1766. The violent burst in 1767 was the 33th from the time of Titus. One in June, 1794, was most destructive; the lava flowed over 3000 acres of rich vineyards and cultivated land. Torre del Greco was a second time burned; the top of the mountain fell in, and the crater was nearly two miles in circumference. A great eruption in Oct., 1822, and others in May, 1855, May and June, 1858, caused great destruction. A series of violent eruptions causing much damage occurred in Dec., 1861, and in Feb., 1865. Torre del Greco again destroyed, 1867. Another eruption began 12 Sept., 1897, and continued increasing in grandeur and danger, March, 1868. A great eruption began 8 Oct., 1868, and continued, causing much destruction, 19, 20 Nov. A severe eruption began 23 April and ended about 3 May, 1872; above 60 lives were lost. The mountain was disturbed in 1876; and another eruption began about 20 Sept., 1878; lava was ejected to the height of 300 feet; an eruption began 11 June, 1879; an intermittent eruption 2 May, 1885. A new crater formed 7 June; continued flowing of lava, 11 June; ceased 16 June, renewed; a Brazilian tourist fell into the crater, July, 1891. Increasing eruptions, 9 June et seq.; active, 13 Sept., 1892.

VESUVIUS was ascended by the princess of Wales and her family 25 March, 1893; a fissure on the N.W. side of the great cone, increased activity, reported (Nature, 8 Aug.) 7 July, 1895; active eruptions of lava streams, 2 Nov., 1895; again, 4 Aug.: violent eruption, 7 new craters, 15-17 Sept.; again, 31 Dec. 1896-Jan., 1897; and again 4 July. New eruptive cone formed, 24 July, 1897.A new crater formed, 24 Sept., 1899; vigorous activity, 2 May, 1900-28 April, 1901; VESUVIUS increasingly active; masses of igneous matter hurled to great heights; large fissures in the great cone 31 July, 1905.

Many explosions heard April-May; lateral outlets for ejected lava formed, followed by flow of lava streams. 25 May, violent eruption Jan.; one village destroyed by 8 April; much damage; notes of Spain's visit of sympathy; church collapses at San Giuseppe, about 200 killed; village of Ottano completely destroyed, 250 lives lost; king Edward VII, and queen Alexandra visit Naples, 27 April, and gave 8000l. towards relief fund; leave for England.

Krivar opened in side of mountain, 28 March; strong active; new crater formed; observatory and Cook's railway destroyed, 7-8 April; port of on crater falls in, causing eruption of cinders and sand 20 Dec.

Slight eruption 21 Oct., 1899.

VESUVIUS. MOUNT. S. ITALY. See also. Albans, St. VEVERNS (N. France). Here was concluded the peace between Philip II. of Spain and Henry IV. of France, with mutual concessions, 2 May, 1589.

VESERONCE (S. E. France), near Vienne. Here Gondemar, king of the Burgundians, defeated and killed Clodomer, king of Orleans, and revenged the murder of his brother Sigismund and his family, 524. This conflict is called also the battle of Voreon.

VESPER, see Sicilian Vespers. In the house of the French ambassador at Blackfriars, in London, a Jesuit was preaching to upwards of three hundred persons in an upper room, the floor of which gave way with the weight, when the whole congregation was precipitated to the street, and the preacher and more than a hundred of his auditory, chiefly persons of rank, were killed. This catastrophe, termed the Fatal Vespers, occurred 26 Oct., 1623. Sour.

VESTA. The planet Vesta (the ninth) was discovered by Dr. Others, of Bremen, 29 March, 1807. She appears like a star of the sixth magnitude.

VESTALS, virgin priests, took care of the perpetual fire consecrated to Vesta. The mother of Romulus and Numa is said to have pointed four, 710 B.C., and Tarquin added two. Minuitia was buried alive for breaking her virgin vow, 337 B.C.; Sextilia, 273 B.C.; and Cornelia Maximiliana, A.D. 92. It is said that only eighteen vestals had been condemned since the time of Numa. The order was abolished by Theodosius, 389.
The Veterinary Surgeons act, 44 & 45 Vict. sec. 62, passed 27 Aug. 1851, deals only with this college; amendment act passed, 30 July, 1890. The Royal Veterinary College at Camden Town, London, N.W., was founded in 1791, and was a part of the University of London, 13 Dec., 1852. There are veterinary colleges in Edinburgh and Glasgow; new one opened at Ballsbridge, Dublin, 1 Oct. 1902, and at Liverpool in connection with the Liverpool University, 13 Dec. 1904. All these are affiliated to the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons.

TREATIES OF VIENNA.

1. The treaty between the emperor of Germany and the king of Spain, by which they confirmed to each other such parts of the Spanish dominions as they were respectively possessed of; and by a private treaty the emperor engaged to employ a force to procure the restoration of Gibraltar to Spain, and to use means for placing the Pretender on the throne of Great Britain. Signed at Vienna, 17 July, 1738.

2. Treaty of alliance between the emperor of Germany, Charles VI., George II., king of Great Britain, and the states of Holland, by which the Pragmatic San-cion was guaranteed to the emperor and the disputes as to the Spanish succession terminated. (Spain acceded to the treaty on the 2nd of July.) Signed 16 March, 1745.

3. Treaty of peace between the emperor Charles VI., of Germany and the king of France, Louis XV., by which the erater power agreed to guarantee the Pragmatic Sanction, and Lorraine was ceded to France. Signed 10 Nov., 1755; see Pragmatic Sanction.

4. Treaty between Napoleon I. of France and Francis
(H. of Germany) I. of Austria, by which Austria ceded the Tyrolian Alps, a portion of Lombarcy, and other territories, which were shortly afterwards declared to be united in France under the title of the Illyrian Provinces, and engaged to adhere to the prohibitory system adopted

5. Treaty between Great Britain, Austria, Russia, and Prussia, containing the principles on which they had acted by the treaty of Chaumont, 1 March, 1814. Signed 23 March, 1815.

6. Treaty between the king of the Netherlands on the one part, and Great Britain, Russia, Austria, and Prussia on the other, agreeing to the enlargement of the Dutch territories, and vesting the sovereignty in the VIENNE, the ancient Vienna Allobrogum (S. E. France). Here the emperor Valentinian II. was put to death by Arbogast, 15 May, 392, and a short reaction in favour of paganism followed. Vicence was capital of the kingdom of Burgundy in 132 and 879, and sometimes gave its name to the kingdom. A general council was held here in 1311. Vicennie was annexed to the French monarchy, 1418.

VIGILANCE MURDER ASSOCIATION, see Ireland, 1883.

VIGO (N.W. Spain) was attacked and burned by the English, under Drake and Norris in 1580. Sir George Rooke, with the combined English and Dutch fleets, attacked the French fleet and the Spanish galleons in the port of Vigo, when several involuntary war and galleons were taken, and many destroyed, and abundance of plate and other valuable effects fell into the hands of the conquerors, 12 Oct. 1702. Vigo was taken by lord Cobham in 1710, but diminished after raising contributions.
It was again taken by the British, 27 March, 1809.

VIKINGS. Scandinavian chiefs, Sweeds, Danes and Norsemen, who in the 4th century migrated—eastward, to the countries beyond the Baltic; westward and southward, chiefly to the British isles.

M. Paul B. Du Chatill (died 30 April, 1903), in his "Viking Age," describes the Vikings as the an-

Viking ship found at Osloberg, Norway . Feb. 1905.

VILLA FRANCA. Near here, and Llerena, Spain, the British cavalry, under sir Stapleton
Cotton, defeated the French cavalry under marshal Soulil, 11 April, 1812. — VILLA FRANCA, a small port on the Mediterranean, near Genoa, was bought for a steam-packet station by a Russian company, about Aug. 1828, which caused some political excitement. — At VILLA FRANCA, in Lombardy, the emperors of France and Austria met, on 11 July, 1859 (after the battle of Solferino), and on 12 July signed the preliminaries of peace, the basis of the treaty of Zürich (which see).

VILLA VICIOSA. 1. in Portugal. Here the Portuguese, under the French general Schomberg, defeated the Spaniards, 1665. 2. in Castle, Spain. Here the struggle for the Spanish crown was decided in favour of Philip V. by Venlôme’s victory over Staremburn and the Austrians, 10 Dec.
1710.

VILLE DU HAVRE, French Atlantic mail steamer, 5,100 tons, sailed from New York for Havre, 15 Nov., 1873; was run into by a Glasgow clipper, Locharum, about 2 a.m., 22 Nov., and sunk in twelve minutes; 220 out of 313 persons perished.
The crew of the Locharum rescued 57, who were conveyed to Cardiff by the American vessel Tre-mountain, capt. Unquil, arriving there 4 Dec., 1873.
The Locharum, beginning to sink, 28 Nov., was abandoned by her crew, who were rescued by the British Queen, and brought to Plymouth 7 Dec.
On judicial examination, the Locharum was exomerated in England, but censured in France Jan. 1874.

VILLETA (Paraguay, South America). Here
Lopez and the Paraguayans were totally defeated by the Brazilians and their allies, 11 Dec. 1868.
Lopez and 200 men fled; 3000 prisoners were made; and the war ended.

VIMIERA (in Portugal), where the British and Spanish forces, under sir Arthur Wellesley, defeated the French, under marshal Junot, duke of Abrante, 21 Aug. 1808. The attack, made with great bravery, was gallantly repulsed; it was repeated by Kellermann at the head of the French reside, which was also repulsed. The French, charged with the bayonet, withdrew on all points in confusion, leaving many prisoners.

VINCENNES, a strong castle near Paris; a residence of the French kings from the 12th to the 14th centuries. Henry V. of England died at the Bois de Vincennes, 31 Aug. 1422. At the fosse of the castle, Louis duc d'Enghien was shot by order of Napoleon, after a hasty trial, early on the morning of 22 March, 1804.

VINCENT, ST. (West Indies), long a neutral island; but at the peace of 1763, the French agreed that it should be vested in the English. The latter soon after engaged in a war against the Caribs, on the windward side of the island, who were obliged to consent to a peace, by which they were obliged to cede a large tract of land to the British crown. In 1770 the Caribs greatly contributed to the reduction of this island by the French, who, however, restored it in 1783. In 1795 the French landed some troops, and again in 1796 attempted the Caribs to an insurrection, which was not subdued for several months. Mt. Soufriére (abt. 3,623 ft. high) erupted 24 April, 1718; and again, 1 May, 1812, a violent eruption took place, 3 craters opened, 1,205 dead bodies found, total deaths, 1,565, 100 hopeless injured, 3,000 homeless, 16 sq. miles covered with lava, ash fell on hundreds of miles south and west, 17 May, 1902, the disturbances took place in the adjoining islands, and earthquake shocks were frequent at Kingston and Georgetown, whilst the village of Wallibou partly sank, and that of Richmond rose, 17 May (Nature, 27 May, 1902); eruptions continued, violent, 18, 21 May; earth quake shakes and another eruption, 10 July (see Nature, 16 July, 1902); slighter eruption 29 July et seq.; violent, 3, 5, 21, Sept., 16 Oct.; Messrs. Quinon, Powell, and Foster ascended the mountain, while in a state of activity, 28 Oct. 1902. Population in 1881, 40,458; in 1901, 47,548; 1909 (est.), 52,652; see Windward Isles.

Great destruction of life and property by a hurricane, 16 Aug. 1886; again, 300 deaths, 10-12 Sept. 1895. See St. Vincent.

VINCENT DE PAUL, ST., CHARITABLE SOCIETY founded in 1833, in France, by twelve young men. It extends its extremely beneficial operations into Britain. Its power excited the jealousy of the French government, which suppressed its central committee of Paris, in Oct. 1861. St. Vincent de Paul was born, 1572; established the congregation of Lazarists, or Vincentines, 1625; Sisters of Charity, 1634; a founding hospital, 1648. He died 1660.

VENCY, N. France. Here Charles Martel defeated the Austrarians, 21 May, 717, and acquired their country.

VINE. The vine was planted by Noah, 2,417 n.c. Gen. ix. 20. A colony of vine-dressers from Phoca, in Tonia, settled at Marseilles, and instructed the South Gauls in tilage, vine-dressing, and commerce, about 600 n.c. Some think that vines are aborigines of Languedoc, Provence, and Sicily, and that they grew spontaneously on the Mediterranean shores of Italy, France, and Spain. The vine was carried into Champagne, and part of Germany, by the emperor Probus, about A.D. 279. The vine and sugar-cane were planted in Madeira in 1420. In the gardens of Hampton Court palace is an old and celebrated vine, said to surpass any known vine in Europe; see Grapes and Wine. The Tokay vines were in Europe in 1550.

VIVISECTION.

seeded from the Union, 25 April, 1861, but Western Virginia declared for the Union, 15 Feb., and elected a governor, 20 Feb. 1861; became a state 1863. Virginia was a chief seat of the war. The state was readmitted to the congress, Jan.-Feb. 1870; see United States and Richmond. Population in 1880, 1,512,506; 1900, 1,854,584; 1910 (est.), 2,035,245; estimated, 1910, Western Virginia, population, 1,800,018, 145,717; 1910 (est.), 181,103; 1910 (est.), 161,750; capital, Wheeling. By the overlying of a lake near Staunton, houses were swept away and many lives lost, reported 1 Oct. 1899. Cloudburst and bursting of a dam in the west (about 100 deaths) about 22 June, 1891.

Virginia City, see Nevada.

Virginia Islands (West Indies), an eastern group discovered by Columbus (1493): Virginia Gorda, Tortola, Anegada, &c., and the Danish Isles, St. Thomas, Santa Cruz, and St. John. Population of the British possessions in 1898 was 4,517: St. Thomas, 4,100; 1910 (est.), 5,275. Revenue, 1907-8, 3,577,761; expenditure, 3,577,761; imports, 7,400,000; exports, 8,027,641. See Leeward Isles.

Torto settled by Dutch buccaneers about 1638; expeditioned by the English (who have held it since), 1666. The island was held by the Dutch for a few years after: held by the British 1801-1815; was sold to the United States for $1,250,000, to be made a territory. Dutch proclamation, 29 Oct. 1867, purchase declared by U.S. Senate, 22 March, May, 1870.

By a dreadful hurricane on St. Thomas, the Royal Mail steamer Rhode and Wise were entirely wrecked; the King and Prince were among the 100 other vessels, driven ashore; about 3000 persons said to have perished.

Much suffering was occasioned in Tortola; houses blown down or repaired &c. Earthquake at St. Thomas’s and other islands Nov. 11, 1893. St. Lucia, 23rd March, 1893. Anno-200A eruption, in which M. Fontaine, a planter, was killed. Pre-his childhood and 158 out of 300 sugar plantations were burned, and about 3000 whites rendered homeless. During the suppression of Sir Codrington, the governor, about 200 troops were stationed at St. Thomas. Earthquake shocks felt at San Juan and St. Thomas.

Virgin Mary. The assumption of the Virgin is a festival in the Greek and Latin churches, in honour of the miraculous ascent of Mary into heaven, according to their belief, 15 Aug. A.D. 43.

The Presentation of the Virgin is a feast celebrated 21 Nov., said to have been instituted among the Greeks in the 4th century; its institution in the West is ascribed to pope Gregory XI. 1372; see Annunciation and Assumption, Immaculate.

Visconti, the name of a noble Italian family, which ruled in Milan from about 1277 to the death of the last. The heiress was married to Francesco Sforza, who became duke 1450.

Viscount (The Comtes), anciently the name of the deputy of an earl. The first viscount in England created by patent was John, lord Beaumont, whom Henry VI. created viscount Beaumont, giving him precedence above all barons, 10 Feb. 1410.

Asmodeus. This title is of older date in Ireland and France. John Barry, lord Barry, was made viscount Buttevant, in Ireland, 9 Rich. II. 1385.

Visible Speech, a term applied by Mr. Alex. Melville Bell to his "Universal Self-Interpreting Physiological Alphabet," comprising thirty symbols representing the conformation of the mouth when uttering sounds. He stated that about fifty different types would be required to print all known languages with these symbols. He expounded his system to the Society of Arts, London, 14 March, 1866; and published a book in 1867.

Vigisoths, separated from the Ostrogoths about 330; see Goths. The emperor Valens, about 390, admitted them into the Roman territories upon the condition of their serving when wanted in the Roman armies; and Theodosius the Great permitted them to form distinct corps commanded by their own officers. In 400, under Alaric, they invaded Italy, and in 410 took Rome. They founded their kingdom of Tolosa, 414; and extended their rule into Spain, 414; expelled the Romans in 488; and finally were themselves conquered by the Saracens under Mazza, in 711, when their last king, Roderic, was defeated and slain; see Spann for a list of the Visigothic kings. Their rule in France ended with their defeat by Clovis at Vouillé, in 507.

Vital force, defined by Humboldt "as an unknown cause preventing the elements from obeying their primitive affinities. This theory is opposed by many physiologicalists, and animal motion is attributed to muscular and nervous irritability, illustrated by the researches of Galvani, Humboldt, sir Charles Bell, Marshall Hall, and others. The subject has been much discussed by the late professor Huxley and other eminent physiologicalists.

Vittoria (N. Spain), the site of a victory obtained by Wellington over the French army commanded by Joseph Bonaparte, king of Spain, and marshal Jourdan, 21 June, 1813. The hostile armies were nearly equal, from 70,000 to 75,000 each. After a long and bloody battle the French were driven, towards evening, through the town of Vittoria, and in their retreat were thrown into irretrievable confusion. The British loss was 22 officers and 475 men killed; 167 officers and 2690 men wounded. Marshal Jourdan lost 153 pieces of cannon, 453 wagons of ammunition, all his baggage, provisions, cattle, and treasure, with his baton as a marshal of France. Continuing the pursuit on the 25th, Wellington took Jourdan’s only remaining gun. Population, 1891, 30,514; 1910 (est.), 35,000.

Vivisection, physiological experiments upon living animals, as practised by William Harvey, John Hunter, and other eminent physiologicalists, it is said, with good results. The societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals in London and Paris in 1835 requested the opinion of a committee of eminent scientific men on the merits of the knowledge thus acquired. Their judgment was not unanimous. The London society took up the question in 1860; and printed a pamphlet by Mr. G. MacMillan against vivisection. In Aug. 1892 an international conference to discuss the question was held at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham. The subject was discussed in 1896, and a prize awarded by the London society. Sir Charles Bell’s opinion of vivisection was, that it either obscured the subject it was meant to illustrate, or misled men into practical errors of the most serious character. Discussion revived in consequence of the prosecution of Dr. Schiff in Florence, who justified vivisection when any anaesthetic was used. 1872.

Rival societies: 1. Society for the abolition of vivisection, 1357; Mr. G. H. Jesse, the founder (died June, 1855), leaves 600,000 to the society; 2. International Association for total suppression of vivisection, 1876.

Commission (viscount Cardwell, professor Huxley, and others) to inquire into the practice, appointed.
VOIRON, see Veszprem.

VOLAPUK (from 'word' and 'speak'), universal commercial language invented by M. Schleyer, who taught it in Paris in Feb. 1886. The Philological Society of London advocated its use in diplomacy and science, in 1887. The roots chiefly borrowed from Romance, Germanic, and especially English languages shortened. There is a Volapük Academy at Munich.

VOLCANOES. In different parts of the earth there are above 200 volcanoes which have been active in modern times; see Etna, Vesuvius, New Zealand, Owhyhee, and Ireland. In Mexico, a plain was filled up into a mountain more than a thousand feet in height by the burning lava from a volcano, in 1795. A volcano in the isle of Ferro broke out 13 Sept. 1777, which threw out an immense quantity of red water, that discoloured the sea for several leagues. A new volcano appeared in one of the Azore islands, 1 May, 1808. Much volcanic activity in 1902 and 1903; see Martínique, Vesuvius, and Tuscany, 87.

VOLHYNIA, a Polish province, annexed to Russia 1793.

VOLSCI, an ancient Latin people, frequently at war with the Romans. From their capital, Coriolis, Cairns Martius (who defeated them about 390 B.C.) derived his name Coriolisius. The story of his banishment by his ungrateful countrymen; of his revenge on them by bringing the Volsci to the gates of Rome, yet afterwards sparing the city at the entreaties of his mother, Voluntia (457 B.C.), is considered by many as a poetical legend. The Volsci and their allies were totally defeated at Sutrium by the consul Valerius Corvinus (316), and incorporated with the Roman people about 338.

VOLSINI, the inhabitants of an Etruscan city, who, after a sharp contest, were completely overcome by the Roman consul Titus Corunicus 280 B.C.

VOLTAIC PILE or BATTERY, was constructed by Galvani; see Galvani in article Electricity. The principle was discovered by Alessandro Volta, of Como (born 1745), professor of natural philosophy at Pavia, and announced by him to the Royal Society of London in 1793. The battery was first set up in 1800. Volta was made an Italian count and senator by Napoleon Bonaparte, and was otherwise greatly honoured. While young he invented the electrophorus, electric pistol, and hydrogen lamp. He died in 1826, aged 81. The form of the Voltaic battery has been greatly improved by the researches of modern philosophers. The nitric acid battery of Sir W. K. Grove was constructed in 1839; Alfred Smees's battery in 1849; the carbon battery of professor Robert Bunsen (died 16 Aug. 1841) in 1812. The first is very much used in this country; that of Bunsen on the continent; see Copper-Zine Couple and Italy, 1819.

VOLTURNO, a river in S. Italy, near Capua, near to which Garibaldi and his followers held a strong position. This was furiously assailed by the royal troops on 1 Oct. 1860, who were finally repulsed after a desperate struggle, the fiercest in which Garibaldi had yet been engaged. He was aided greatly by a band of Piedmontese from Naples. On 2 Oct. general Bixio completed the victory by capturing 2500 fresh Neapolitan troops and dispersing others.
VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS. Public contributions for the support of the British government against the policy and designs of France amounted to two millions and a half sterling in 1798. About 200,000 were transmitted to England from India in 1798. Sir Robert Peel, of Bury, among other contributions of equal amount, subscribed £1,050. For the National Debt Fund; see Patriotic Fund. In 1862 nearly a million pounds were subscribed in the British empire for the relief of the Lancashire cotton spinners; see Cotton and Mansion House, where voluntary contributions for beneficent purposes are continually received.

VOLUNTARY SCHOOLS, see Education.

VOLUNTEERS. were enrolled in England for the American war 1775, and especially in consequence of the threatened invasion of revolutionary France, 1793-4. Besides our large army, and 85,000 men voted for the sea, we subsidised 20,000 Germans, raised our militia to 100,000 men, and armed the citizens as volunteers; the yeomanry formed cavalry regiments. Between 1795 and 1803, when the losses of greatest amount, it numbered 410,000, of which 70,000 were Irish. On 26 Oct. 1803, King George III. reviewed in Hyde Park 12,401 London volunteers, and on 28 Oct. 14,476 more. The English volunteers were, according to official accounts, 341,600 on 1 Jan. 1804; see Naval Volunteers. In May, 1859, in consequence of the prevalence of the fear of a French invasion, the formation of volunteer corps of soldiers commenced under the auspices of the government, and by the end of the year many thousands were enrolled in all parts of the kingdom. The volunteers were said to be "a force potentially the strongest defence of England," 19 April, 1859. The Lord Chancellor declared as the originator of the movement, knighted, May, 1859. The new territorial scheme under which volunteers and yeomanry were reorganized came into force in 1867; see Artillery Association, Naval Artillery Volunteer Force, and Territorial Force.

Yeomanry were enrolled by Lord Chatham in 1761. The number of yeomanry: 1761, 12,043; 1762, 11,292; 1765, 12,857; 1767, 20,044; 1768, 18,194; 1769, 27,538; see Territorials. By War-office regulations the whole yeomanry force was re-organized and appointed a definite place in the mobilization scheme (commencing 1 April, 1869).

Volunteers.—The first Middlesex x volunteers were formed in 1803 as the Duke of Cumberland's sharpshooters. They retained their organisation as a rifle club, when other volunteers were disbanded. In 1825 they were permitted by the Duke of Kent to take the name of the Royal Victoria Rifle Club.

Circular letter from Col. Jonathan Peel, proposing organization of National Volunteers Association for promoting the practice of rifle shooting, 12 May, 1857.

The first regiment of Irish volunteers was formed at Dublin under the command of the Duke of Leinster, Oct. 1777. They armed generally to the amount of 20,000 men, and received the unanimous thanks of the houses of lords and commons in Ireland, for their patriotism and spirit, for coming forward and defending their country. At the period when the force appeared Irish affairs bore a serious aspect; manufactures had decreased, and foreign trade had been hurt by a prohibition of the importation of salted provisions and butter. No notice of the complaints of the people had been taken in the English parliament, when, owing to the alarm of an invasion, ministers allowed the nation to arms, and an intestine war was begun. The Irish took this occasion to demand a free trade, and government saw there was nothing to interfere with a country with arms in its hands. The Irish parliament unanimously addressed the king for a free trade, and it was granted 1777.

1859. It was established in London, under the patronage of queen Victoria, Mr. Sidney (afterwards lord) Herbert, secretary at war, president, and the late Duke of Bedford, earl Elcho, and other nobleman vice-presidents. (Annual subscription one guinea, or a composition for life of ten guineas.)

Return of the C.I.A. S: total sent 92 officers, 626 men (lieut. Alt and 13 men killed, 45 died of wounds or disease), see London, 29 Oct., 1890 (total volunteers who served in the war, about 750 officers and 22,500 men and who enlisted in the army—Times, 20 June, 1892). 32,551 volunteer officers and men served in S. Africa and 2,379 officers and men of yeomanry, total 35,921.

Since 1902 there have been no manoeuvres of volunteers on an extensive scale, but there have been great musters of brigades last August at various stations. On Salisbury plain there have been combined operations by volunteers and regulars.

Attendance at camp—In 1902 a new code of conditions concerning volunteer efficiency was issued, which included a clause of a negative character, requiring attendance nodens rebens at a camp for 6 days. Practically the clause was not to come into effect until 1904. This clause was received with great amount of dissatisfaction, and a crisis occurred, the strength of nearly every corps being rapidly depleted by the resignations of officers, non-commissioned officers and men. From time to time the War office made various concessions, until at last the obnoxious clause was practically withdrawn, but not until much mischief had been done. Some corps are gradually recovering their former strength, but the establishment of a number was reduced. In the early part of 1903 a royal commission was appointed to inquire into the conditions of service and efficiency of the force, and the report of this commission was issued in June, 1904, but nothing has been carried out so far except the re-organisation of volunteer brigades.

VOTING PAPERS. See Judson's Act. The proposal to use them was negatived in the debates on reform in 1867; adopted by the ballot act in 1873. A bill against plural voting was read first time in the commons, 20 April, 1893. See Ballot.

VOUGLE or VOUILLE, S.W. France (near Poitiers), where Alaric II., king of the Visigoths, was defeated and slain by Clovis, king of France, 507, who subdued the whole country from the Loire to the Pyrenees. A peace followed between the Franks and Visigoths, who had been settled about one hundred years in that part of Gaul called Septimania. Clovis soon afterwards made Paris his capital.

VOYAGES. It is mythically stated that by order of Pharaoh-Noch, of Egypt, some Phoenician pilots sailed from Egypt down the Arabian Gulf, round what is now called the Cape of Good Hope, entered the Mediterranean by the Straits of Gibraltar, sailed along the north of Africa, and at length arrived in Egypt, after a navigation of about three years, b. c. 404. See Herodotus. The first voyage round the world was made by a ship, part of a Spanish squadron which had been under the command of Magellan (who was killed at the Philippine Islands in a skirmish in 1521-22; see Circumnavigators, North-West Passage, and Periplus.

VOSEY ESTABLISHMENT FUND. The Rev. Charles Vosey having been deprived for heresy (see Church of England, 1871), began a series of services at St. George's hall, Langham-place, 7 Oct. 1871. The fund for their maintenance was supported by R. Hills of Norwich (retired), Sir John Bowring, and other eminent liberals. Services now (1910) held in Swallow-street, Piccadilly, the congregation worshipping as the "Theistic Church."

VULCAN, see Planets. The Greek god Hephaistos answered to the Roman Vulcan.

VULCANITE (vulcanised india-rubber), also termed Ebonite.

VULGATE (from vulgat-us, published), a term applied to the Latin version of the Scriptures which is authorised by the council of Trent (1546), and which is attributed to St. Jerome, about 384. The older version, called the Italic, is said to have been made in the beginning of the 2nd century. A critical edition was printed by order of pope Sixtus V. in 1590, which, being considered inaccurate, was superseded by the edition of pope Clement VIII. in 1592. The earliest printed vulgate is without date, by Gutenberg and Fust, probably about 1455, the first dated (Fust and Schoeller) in 1462.

WACHT DES DEUTSCHEN VATERLAND ("Watch of the German Fatherland").
German national hymn, by Reichardt, first performed 2 Aug. 1825. Very popular during the war 1870-71.

WAGEN, see Appeal.

WAGES IN ENGLAND. The wages of sundry workmen were first fixed by act of parliament 25 Edw. III. 1350. Haymakers had but one penny a day. Master carpenters, masons, tailors, and other coverers of houses, had not more than 3d. per day (about 9d. of our money); and their servants 12d.

By the 23 Henry VI., the wages of a bailiff of husbandry was 23s. 4d. per annum, and clothing of the piece of 3s. with meat and drink; chief hood, carpenter, shepherd, 20s., clothing, 4s.; common servant of husbandry, 15s. clothing, 4d.; woman-servant, 10s. clothing, 4s.

By the 11 Henry VII., a like rate of wages with a little advance: as, for instance, a free mason, master carpenter, rough mason, bricklayer, master tiler, plasterer, carver or joiner, was allowed from Easter to Michaelmas to take 6d. a day without meat and drink; or, with meat and drink, 4d.; from Michaelmas to Easter, to abate 1d. A master having under him six men was allowed pl. a day extra.

Agricultural labourers per week: Warwickshire, 3s. 6d. and 4s.; Devonshire, 3s.; Suffolk, 3s. and 6s.; wood-cutters, about 3s. and 4s. (Macclesfield) about 1865.

In 1866 the annual amount of wages paid in the United Kingdom was estimated by Mr. Gladstone at 250,000,000; by Mr. Bass at 350,000,000; and by professor Leone Levi at 422,700,000. In 1872 many trades struck for increase of wages, and frequently were successful; in 1873-9, unsuccessful.

In 1878 professor Levi estimated that 500,000,000, were earned (by men, 390,000,000; by women, 110,000,000); after deducting for holidays, &c., 422,700,000. He says, that "in no other country are wages more liberal, but in no other country are they more wastefully used." See Strikes.

Payment of wages in public-houses prohibited by act passed in 1823.

WAGGONERS were rare in the 18th century. They, with carts, &c., not excepting those used in agriculture, were taxed in 1783. The carrier's waggons are now nearly superseded by the railways.

WAGRAM, a village near Vienna, where Napoleon I. totally defeated the archduke Charles, 5, 6 July, 1809. The slaughter on both sides was dreadful; 12,000 Austrians were taken by the French, and the defeated army retired to Moravia.

WAIHABES OR WAHABITES, a warlike Mahometan reforming sect, considering themselves the only true followers of the prophet, established, themselves in Arabia about 1750, under the rule of Abd el-Wahab, who died 1787. His grandson, Saoud, in 1801, defeated an expedition landed by the caliph of Bagdad. In 1803 this sect seized Mecca and Medina, and continued their conquests, although their chief was assassinated in the midst of his victories. His son, Abdallah, long resisted Mahommed Ali, pacha of Egypt, but in 1818 was defeated and taken prisoner by Ibrahim Pacha, who sent him to Constantinople, where he was put to death. The sect is well described by Mr. W. Gifford Palgrave in his "Journey and Residence in Arabia in 1862-3," published in 1865.

WAHLESTATT, see Kutschach.

WAIFS and STRAYS (children). Church of England Incorporated Society for providing homes for Waifs and Strays. Patrons: Their majesty the king and queen. Over 15,000 children have been rescued since foundation of society in 1881. 106 homes (including 2 in Canada, and 5 special homes for crippled children) and some 4,400 children now under society's care. Income, 1909, 107,046; expenditure, 1909, 105,958.

WAITS, the night minstrels who perform shortly before Christmas. The name was given to the musicians attached to the king's court. We find that a company of waits was established at Exeter in 1490 to "pipe the watch." The waits in London and Westminster were long officially recognised by the corporation.
WAKEFIELD. 1485

WAKEFIELD (W. Yorkshire), an ancient town. Near it a battle was fought between the adherents of Margaret, the queen of Henry VI., and the duke of York, in which the latter was killed 16 Aug. 1461, and 2,000 Yorkists fell upon the field, 31 Dec. 1460. The Earl of Warwick supported the cause of the duke's son, the earl of March, afterwards Edward IV., and the civil war was continued. An art and industrial exhibition was opened at Wakefield, 30 Aug., 1865. The Bishops' act, authorising the establishment of a see at Wakefield, was passed 16 Aug., 1868.

The required funds subscribed Jan. 1888. Population, 1881, 30,951; 1901, 41,413; 1907 (est.), 43,923.

Mr. M. E. Sanderson bequeathed the sum of £110,000 for the promotion of the work of the Church of England in Wakefield, 22 Feb. 1908.

WAKES, the ancient parish festivals on the saint's day to commemorate the dedication of the church; regulated in 1536, but gradually became obsolete.

WALBROOK CHURCH (London), a master-piece of Sir Christopher Wren, completed in 1679. There was a church here in 1135, and a new church was erected in 1429.

WALCHEREN (an island at the mouth of the Scheldt, Holland). The unfortunate expedition of the British to this isle in 1809 consisted of 35 ships of the line, and 200 smaller vessels, principally transports and merchantmen. Lord Nelson received the command of the Earl of Chatham, and the fleet under Sir Richard Strachan. For a long time the destination of the expedition remained secret; but before 28 July, 1809, when it set sail, the French journals had announced that Walcheren was the point of attack. Flushing was invested in August; a dreadful bombardment followed, and the place was taken 15 Aug.; but no suggestion on the part of the naval commander, nor urging likewise by officers, could induce the Earl to vigorous action, until the period of probable success was gone, and necessity obliged him to return with as many of the troops as disease and an unhealthy climate had spared. The place was evacuated, 25 Dec. 1809. The house of commons instituted an inquiry, and Lord Chatham resigned his post of master-general of the ordnance, to prevent greater disgrace; but the policy of ministers in planning the expedition was, nevertheless, approved. The following epigram, of which various readings exist, appeared at the time:

"Lord Chatham [or the warrior earl] with [his] sabre drawn, Stood waiting for sir Richard Strachan;
Sir Richard, longing [or eager] to be at 'em, Stood waiting for the Earl of Chatham."

A Lyceum erected by queen Victoria at Dowcerton parish church, in memory of British soldiers who died there of disease contracted during the expedition 1809-11, was opened by gen. Gates, 22 Sept. 1890.

WALDENSEES (also called Waldenses, Vallenese, and Vaudois), a sect inhabiting the Cottian Alps, derives it name, according to some authors, from Peter de Waldo, of Lyons (1170). They had a translation of the Bible. The Waldenses settled in the valleys of Piedmont about 1375, but were frequently dreadfully persecuted, especially in the 17th century, when Charles I. of England interceded for them (1627-9). Oliver Cromwell, by his acts 1655-6, obtained them some degree of toleration. All the Waldensian Barbes or pastors, save two, died in the great plague of 1630. Gilles and Gros went to Geneva and Lausanne for Swiss Calvinist ministers to fill the vacancies. The new ministers were no sooner inducted than they deposed the surviving Barbes and abolished all the ritualistic ceremonies, substituting the Geneviese model. They were permitted to have a church at Turin, Dec. 1853. They became French subjects when Savoy was annexed by Napoleon III. in 1860. In March, 1898, it was stated that there were in Italy 28 ordained Waldensian ministers, and 30 other teachers.

WALES. 59

WALES, Cambria, Cymru, the land of the Cymry, called by the Romans Britannia Secunda. Welsh and Wales are corruptions of the Teutonic epithets applied to foreigners, especially to Germans. After the Roman legions retired to Wales, and defended themselves against the Saxons, in their inaccessible mountains, about 447. In this state Wales remained unconquered till Henry II, subdued South Wales in 1157; and in 1252 Edward I. entirely reduced the whole country, an end being put to it by the death of Llewelyn, the last prince.* In 1284 the queen gave birth to a son at Caernarvon, whom Edward, lord styled prince of Wales, now title of the heir to the crown of Great Britain. Wales was united and incorporated with England by act of parliament, 1536; see Britain, Bards and Population: 1891, 1,518,914; 1901, 1,455,353; 1910 (est.), 1,709,300. Ostorius Scapula, proprietor of Britain, defeats the Cymry.

The supreme authority in Britannia Secunda inas was invested in the Roman legions which conquered the wars of the Britons. The Silures, who resisted the advance of civilization in 135-61. Conquests by Julius Frontinous.

The Silures totally defeated.

The Roman, Julius Agricola, commands in Britain.

Brennus, the Light, dies about 80.

The Druidical class gradually dissolved by the influence of Christianity in 300-400.

The statute of Wales, enacted at Rhuddland, 13 March, 1284 (or March, 1285), alleges that "the Divine Providence has now removed all obstacles, and transferred wholly and entirely to the king's dominion the land of Wales and its inhabitants, heretofore subject unto him in feudal rights. The ancient laws were to be preserved in civil causes; but the law of inheritance was to be changed, and the English criminal law to be put in force. Anna's of England.

War secretary, Mr. R. B. Haldane, Dec. 1905.

WAR, GAME OF (German, Kriegspfand), based on the game of chess, was described in a pamphlet in 1780, and rules for it laid down by Domene- ratho von Reisswitz about 1820, and published by his son in 1824-38. Capt. (earl Cromer, 1901) Evelyn Haring published a translation of works on the subject in 1872. A society (including von Moltke) was formed at Magdeburg to study it. Prince Arthur (now duke of Connaught) lectured on this game at Dover, 13 March, 1873; so the home district war society has since been established.

WARBECK'S INSURRECTION. Perkin Warbeck, the son of a Florentine Jew, to whom Edward IV. had been godfather, was persuaded by Margaret, duchess of Burgundy, sister to Richard III., to personate her nephew Richard, Edward V.'s brother, which he did first in Ireland, where he landed, 1492. The imposture was discovered by Henry VII. 1493. Some writers consider that Warbeck was not an impostor.
Warbeck attempted to land in Kent, with 650 men, 169 were taken prisoners, and executed, July, 1495. Recommended by the king of France to James IV. of Scotland, who gave him his kinswoman, lord Huntley's daughter, in marriage, when he assumed the title of Richard IV. James IV. invaded England in his favour, 1496.
Left Scotland, and went to Bodmin, in Cornwall, where he joined the queen, Sept. 1496. On the approach of Henry took sanctuary at Beaulieu; surrendered; taken to London, Oct. 1497.
Said to have been set free in the stocks at Westminster and Cheapside, and sent to the Tower, June, 1499. Accused of plotting with the earl of Warwick to escape out of the Tower, by murdering the lieutenant, Aug.; the plot failed, and he was hanged at Tyburn, 23 Nov.; the earl beheaded, 28 Nov. 1499.

WARBURG (N. Germany). Here the French were defeated by the duke of Brunswick and the allies, 31 July, 1756.

WARDIAN CASES. In 1829, Mr. N. B. Ward, from observing a small fern and grass growing in a closed glass bottle, in which he had placed a chrysalis covered with moist earth, was led to consider his well-known closely glazed cases, which afford to plants light, heat, and moisture, and exclude deleterious gases, smoke, &c. They are particularly adapted for ferns. In 1833 they were first employed for the transmission of plants to Sydney, &c., with great success, and professor Faraday lectured on the subject in 1838.

WARDMOTES, meetings of the citizens of London in their wards, where they elect annually their common councilmen. The practice is said to have begun in 1386. They had previously assemled in Guildhall; see Though Monday.
WARRANTS, GENERAL, do not specify the name of the accused. They were declared to be illegal by lord chief justice Pratt, 6 Dec. 1763, in relation to the seizure and committed of Mr. Wilkes for a libel on the king; see North Briton.

WASTE LANDS. The immolation of waste lands and commons, in order to promote agriculture, first began in England about the year 1547, and gave rise to Ket's rebellion, 1549. Inclosures were again promoted by the authority of parliament, 1755. The waste lands in England were inclosed in 1794 to amount to 14 millions of acres, of which there were taken into cultivation, 2,857,470 acres before June, 1804. In 1814, there were about 9,700,000 acres of waste land, of which more than half was thought to be capable of improvement; see Agriculture.

WATCHE OF LONDON. at night, appointed 1253, proclaimed the hour before the introduction of public clocks. Harbottle. The old watch was discontinued, and a new one put in (on duty day and night) commenced, 20 Sept. 1829; see Police.

WATCHES are said to have been first invented at Nuremberg, 1477, although it is affirmed that Robert, king of Scotland, had a watch about 1310.

Watches first used in astronomical observations by Parthach 1509 authors assert that the emperor Charles V. was the first who had anything that might be called a watch, about 1516. Watches first brought to England from Germany in 1530. A watch which belonged to queen Elizabeth is preserved in the library of the Royal Institution, London.

Spring power watches (watches properly so-called) have had their invention assigned to Dr. Hooker by the English, and M. Du Vergiers by the Dutch. Dr. Berham, in his Artificiall Inventions, says that Dr. Hook was the inventor; and he appears certainly to have produced what is called the pendulum watches about 1530, as well as several other evidences, from an inscription on one of the double-balance watches presented to Charles II., to Rob. Hook, invin. 1653; T. Tompion, feuil, 1675. Repeating watches invented by Baron 1660. Harrison's first-time-piece produced (see Harrison) 1735.

The tax was repealed in 1738. See this 1738. Arrangements made at Kew observatory for testing high-class watches, and granting graduated certificates; fees, 1. 1s., 18s. &c. April, 1834

WATER. Thales of Mileta, founder of the Ionic sect, considered water to be the original principle of everything, about 504 B.C. Stanley.

Cavendish and Watt demonstrated that water is composed of 3 parts of oxygen and 2 parts of hydrogen.

Water was decomposed into oxygen and hydrogen gases by Davy, 1803, by the voltaic battery by Nicholson and Carlisle, 1807, by the heat of a dynamo machine by W. R. G. 1816.

In freezing, water contracts till it is reduced to 49° fahr. ; it then begins to expand till it becomes ice at 32°.

Water was first conveyed to London by leaden pipes, 21 Henry VIII., 1534. It took about fifty years to complete it, the whole being finished, and Thames conduit erected, only in 1525.

The New River water (which we) brought to London from Chadwell in Essex in Hertfordshire, at an immense expense, by Sir Hugh Myddelton, in 1609.

The city was supplied with its water by conveyance of wooden pipes in the streets and small leaden ones to the houses, and the New River Company was incorporated, 1629. Sale of queen Anne's time there were water-carriers at Aldgate-pump.

The water-works at Chelsea completed, and the company incorporated 1712.

London bridge ancient water-works destroyed by fire 29 Oct. 1779.

An act to supply the metropolis with water 13 & 14 Vict. c. 24, was passed, 1 July, 1842. This act was amended by an act passed 21 Aug. 1847. The companies were bound to provide a constant supply when required; the occupier of the house to provide the prescribed fittings.

Since 1851 the bill has gradually adopted the modifications in 1856.

Commissioners for metropolitan water supply appointed, 25 April, 1869; report signed April 1869.

London supplied by nine companies: the New River (the best), East London, Chelsea, Grand Junction, Southwark and Vauxhall, Kent, West Middlesex, Lambeth, and South Essex; who deliver about 125,000,000 gallons daily, 1877: about 116,230,000 gallons 1877.

Water examination committee's report on prevention of bacteria in storage water issued 20 July, 1877; report on effect upon typhoid bacillus of river storage issued 24 July, 1879

The income of the present metropolitan water board, established "for the purpose of acquiring, by purchase and of managing and carrying on," the undertakings of the metropolitan water companies, was generally for the purpose of supplying water within a specified area. The water board took over the property of the water companies, June 24, 1854; New River company a month later. The board includes a chairman, a vice-chairman and 40 other members; the chairman and vice-chairman are appointed by the board, and the other members are appointed by the L.C.C. (14), and by the various counties and boroughs, urban councils, and conservancies in the area covered by the board. The total cost of acquiring the eight private undertakings was about 45 million pounds. The board has jurisdiction over the whole of the county of London and a vast district outside the area controlled by the L.C.C. Its total average daily supply of water is 6,975,000,000 gallons per head; 18,693,600,000 gallons; for the year ending March 31, 1909, the volume of water supplied was 81,310,000,000 gallons; 62 storage reservoirs for unfiltred water; capacity, 3,241,600,000 gallons; 22 service reservoirs for filtered water; capacity, 255,400,000 gallons; and 166 filter beds.

WATER-COLOUR PAINTING was gradually raised from the hard dry style of the 18th century to its present brilliancy, by the efforts of Nicholson, Copley Fielding, Sandby, Varley, the great Turner, Pyne, Cattermole, Proud, Thos. Collier and H. G. Hine. The Water-colour Society's exhibition, which began in 1805, was made Royal in 1881. The Institute of Painters in Water-colours, established 1881 (made Royal in 1883), opened new galleries in Piccadilly in 1887, and threw open their exhibitions to all artists.

WATERFORD (S. Ireland), built about 879, was totally destroyed by fire in 914. Rebuilt and considerably enlarged by Strongbow in 1271, and still further in the reign of Henry VIII. who granted considerable privileges to the citizens. Richard II. landed and was crowned here in 1399; in 1496. James II. embarked from hence for France, after the battle of the Boyne; and William III. resided here twice, and confirmed its privileges. Memorable storm here, 18 April, 1792. The cathedral of Waterford, dedicated to the blessed Trinity, was first built by the Ostmen, and by Malchus, the first bishop of Waterford, after his return from England from his consecration, 1069. This see was united with that of Lismore in 1363. It was valued in the king's books, by an extent returned 20 Henry VIII., at 47, 8s. 6d. Irish per annum. By stat. 35 & 36 Will. III. c. 3 (the benefices and parochial acts), the see of Waterford and Lismore was united with the see of Cashel and Emly, 14 Aug. 1833. The interior of the cathedral, organ, &c., were destroyed by fire, 25 Oct. 1815. Population, 1891, 21,693; 1901, 26,743; 1910 (est.), 30,000.

Waterford returns three M.P.'s by act passed 25 June, 1832.

WATER-Glass, a name given to a liquid mixture of sand (silica) and one of the alkalies (potash or soda). Glauber (De Lithiae) mentions a similar mixture in 1644. Dr. Von Fuehs gave an account of his process in 1825; and Mr. Frederick Finsome, of Ipswich, ignorant of Von Fuehs's discovery, patented a mode of preparing water-glass in 1845, which he afterwards greatly improved upon. In 1857, M. Kuhlmann, of Lille, published a pamphlet setting forth the advantageous employment of water-glass in hardening porous stone and in stereochromy (which see). It has been applied to the exteriors of many buildings in France and England. The memoirs of Von Fuehs and Kuhlmann translated and printed in England, 1859, by direction of the prince consort.

WATERLOO, in Belgium, the site of the great battle, on Sunday, 18 June, 1815, between the French army, of 71,047 men and 219 guns, under Napoleon, and the allies, commanded by the duke of Wellington; the latter, with 67,661 men and 125 guns, resisted the various attacks of the enemy from about ten in the morning until five in the afternoon. About that time, 16,000 Prussians reached the field of battle; and by seven, the force under Blucher amounted to above 30,000 men, with 704 guns. Wellington then moved forward his whole army. A total round count was made between 6 and 7 P.M. of the British (23,991), 43 officers and 196 men were killed and missing, and 363 officers and 4350 men wounded—total, 4922; and the total loss of the allied army amounted to 4200 killed, 1453 wounded, and 4231 missing, making 22,976 hors de combat. French loss about 30,000. Napoleon, quitting the track of his army, returned to Paris; and, finding it impossible to raise another, abdicated. P. Nicolas.

Napoleon attributed his defeat to the failures of marshals Grouchy, Wellington said unjustly. By the side of the chapel of Waterloo, which was uninjured by shot or shell on 18 June, 1815, Marborough cut off a large division of the French army about 1859. The monuments on the same field are the only British commanders whose career brought them to dukedoms.

WATERLOO BRIDGE, LONDON. Abriqde over this part of the Thames was repeatedly suggested during the last century, but no actual preparations to carry it into effect were made till 1866, when Mr. G. Bodley procured an act of parliament, and gave the present site, plan, and dimensions of the bridge; but, in consequence of some disagreement with the committee, he was superseded by Mr. John Ronnie, who completed this noble structure. It was commenced 11 Oct., 1814, and opened 15 June, 1817, on the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, when the prince regent, the duke of Wellington, and other distinguished personages, were present. Its length within the abutments is 1,252 feet; its width within the balustrades is 32 feet; and the span of each arch, of which there are nine, is 120 feet. Bought for 47,500l., by metropolitan board of works; opened toll free, 5 Oct., 1828.

On Oct. 22, 1823, a waterspout, named Kibby, found on one of the abutments of the bridge, a carpet bag, containing human bones and flints, which had been cut up, salted, and boiled, and some foreign clothes. No clue could be found respecting these remains, which were interred in Woking cemetery.

WATERSPOUT. Two waterspouts fell on the Glitz mountains in Germany, and caused dreadful devastation to Hautbois and many other villages; many persons perished, 13 July, 1827. A waterspout at Glanbeek, near Killarney, in Ireland, passed over a farm of Mr. John Macarthy, destroying farm-houses and other buildings; seventeen persons perished, 4 Aug., 1831. The estimated length of one seen near Calcutta, 27 Sept., 1855, was 84 days, 17 hours, and ten minutes, and was absorbed upwards. One seen on 24 Sept., 1857, burst with heavy rain. The town of Misolez, Hungary, destroyed by a waterspout; great loss of life and property, 30 Aug., 1878. 93 persons said to have been killed by a waterspout in Algeria, Oct., 1881. A waterspout at Arequipa, Peru, caused immense damage, several persons drowned, 12 Feb.; one at Pachuca, Mexico, 30 deaths, 27 Sept., 1883; another near Lagos, very destructive, 6 or 7 June, 1888. Destructive waterspout at Swansea 4 Sept., 1890; another on Baton Rouge hills, Louisiana, greatly damaged the villages of Chatnoile, Cerne, and Minterm, 26 June, 1889. By the bursting of a waterspout near Wotton-under-Edge, Gloucester, one man was killed, and others injured. Water spouts have been observed and studied in China, the United States, and Russia, and are generally believed to be temporary phenomena.

WATERING MILL. Used for grinding corn, are said to have been invented by Pelserius, the general of Justinian, while besieged in Rome by the Goths, 555. The ancient potted their corn, and pounded it in mortars. Afterwards mills were invented, which were turned by men and beasts with great labor, yet thirty-toned wheels turned by water. WEALD. 1497

WEALD of Kent and Sussex, the site of very large, ancient forests; St. Leonard's still remaining; near which, in the Wealden formation, Dr. G. A. Mantell discovered the remains of huge extinct animals, 1825 et seq.

WEAVING appears to have been practised in China more than a thousand years before it was known in Europe or Asia. The Egyptians ascribed the art to Isis; the Greeks to Minerva; and the Persians to the wife of Manco Cupac. Our Saviour's vest, or coat, had not any seam, being woven throughout, in his native land. The print of a frame for weaving such a vest may be seen in Calmet's Dictionary, under the word Testaments. Two weavers from Brabant settled at York, where they manufactured woollens, which, says king Edward, "may prove of great benefit to us and our subjects." (1351). Flemish dyers, cloth drapers, linen-makers, silk-thieves, &c., settled at Canterbury, Norwich, Colchester, Southampton, and other places, on account of the duke of Alva's persecution, 1567; see Loom and Electric Loom.

WEDDING-RINGS were used by the ancients, and put upon the wedding finger, from a supposed connection with a vein there with the heart. According to Pliny they were made of iron; in the time of Tertullian of gold. Wedding-rings are to be of standard gold, by statute, 1855; see Adriatic.

WEDDINGS. Silver weddings are celebrated after a union of 25 years; golden weddings after a union of 50 years; and diamond weddings after a union of 60 years, some apply it to 75 years. John, king of Saxony, celebrated his golden wedding, 10 Nov. 1872.

WEDGWOOD WARE, pottery and porcelain produced by Mr. Josiah Wedgwood, of Staffordshire, in 1762. His potteries, termed Etruria, were founded in 1771. Previously to 1753, much earthenware was imported from France and Holland.

WEDNESDAY, the fourth day of the week, so called from the Saxon idol Woden or Oor, worshipped on this day. Woden was the reputed author of magic and the inventor of all the arts, and was thought to answer to the Mercury of the Greeks and Romans.

WEEDON INQUIRY (Northamptonshire). Commissioners were appointed to inquire into the accounts of Mr. Eliot, superintendent of the great military clothing establishment at this place, in July, 1858, and commenced sitting in September. Many of the statements were afterwards disputed, and caused much dissatisfaction.

WEEK, the space of seven days, supposed to be first used among the Jews, who observed the sabbath every seventh day. They had three sorts of weeks—the common one of seven days; the second of years, seven years; the third of seven times seven years, at the end of which was the jubilee. All the present English names are derived from the Saxon:

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. These and the stamping of gold and silver money, are attributed to Phidias, c. 460 B.C.; see Alcibiades, Ctesibius. Weights were originally taken from grains of wheat, the lowest being still called a grain. Chalders. See Drachm.

The Jews ascribed weights and measures to Cain; the Egyptians to Thoth, god of wisdom; the Greeks, to Hermes (the Roman Mercury).

The basis of ancient measures was the natural proportions of the human body: the digit, or breadth of the middle part of the first joint of the forefinger, being the lowest unit of the scale.

The Egyptian cubit (six hands), under the Pharaohs, was about 58.74 English inches; the Greek cubit of Ptolemy about 21.27 inches; he determined the length of a stadium, and of a degree.

The sacred cubit of the Jews (Newton), 24.7 inches.

The standard measure was originally kept at Winchester by the law of king Edgar, 975; standards of weights and measures were provided for the whole kingdom of England by the sheriffs of London, 9 Rich. II. (1377).

A public weighing-machine was set up in London, and all country weights and measures were to be weighed by the city-officer, called the weigher-master, who was to do justice between buyer and seller, cap. 3 Edw. II. (1389).

Edward III. ordered that there should be "measuring weight, measure, and yard," throughout the kingdom.

First statute, directing the use of avoirdupois weight, of 24 Hm. VIII.

Weights and measures were ordered to be examined by the justices at quarter-sessions, 35 Geo. III. (1820). Again regulated.

Statute for establishing uniformity of weights and measures, 1824, took effect throughout the whole kingdom in Jan. 1825.

New acts relating thereto passed in 1834, 13 & 14 Vict., and in 10 & 11 Vict. c. 42, regulates the weights to be used in the sale of bullion, and adopts the use of the Troy ounce.

A commission to assis5ing Mr. G. B. Ary, esq. F. R. S., lord Rosse, Mr. T. Graham, and others, appointed to examine the standards on 9 May, 1877. Report of the Standards commission states that various exist in official standards, dated 24 July, 1877.

A new Weights and Measures act passed to enforce uniformity in all markets in the United Kingdom, and abolish local measures, Aug 1877. This act was combined with another passed July, 1879, another act passed July 1879.

Weights and Measures (metric system) act passed, 1875.

The removal of the monument to a different part of the cathedral, and the addition of the episcopal statue, modelled by Mr. Stevens, proposed in April, 1872; work completed Jan. 1874.

WELLS were dug by Abraham, 1802 n.c., and Isaac, 1804 (Gen. xxi. 30, and xxvi. 19). Dennis is said to have introduced well-driving into Greece from the tubewell. The Sutton Monastery, built Oct. 1867, is said to be the invention of Hiram J. Messenger, Stephen Brewer, and Byron Mudge, of New York. The apparatus consists of an iron tube perforated with holes at the lower end, and shod with a steel point, which readily enters the hardest soil when forcibly driven. It was used with great advantage during the civil war 1861-4; by the British in their campaign in Abyssinia in 1867-8; and by the Russians in Khiva, 1873.

WELLS (Somerset). The cathedral church was built by Ina, king of the West Saxons, 704, and by him dedicated to St. Andrew. Other West Saxon kings endowed it. The see was united to the bishopric of 990, during the reign of Edward the Elder. The present church was begun by Robert, 8th bishop of this see, and consecrated in 1148, and completed by his successors and finally consecrated by Jocelin. The first bishop was Ethelm or Adelnum (afterwards bishop of Canterbury). The see was united with Bath (which see) in 1668. Population, 1881, 4,454; 1901, 4,491; 1910 (est.), 5,000.

WESLEYAN METHODISTS. THE, founded by John Wesley (born 1703, died 1791) and his brother Charles, who in 1727, with a few other students formed themselves in a small society for the purpose of mutual edification by religious exercises. From their regularity of life they were called Methodists, in 1729. John Wesley went to Georgia in America, in 1735; with a view of converting the Indians. On his return to England, in 1738, a great change took place in his mind (24 May), he commenced itinerant preaching, and gathered many followers. On finding many churches shut against him, he built spars tied meeting-houses in London, Bristol, and other places. The Wesleyan Methodist Society, as such, began in 1739. For some time the Wesleys were united with George Whitefield; but differences respecting the doctrine of election and a separation in 1744; see Whitefield. Wesley was almost continually engaged in travelling through the United Kingdom. His two leading doctrines were conscious assurance of acceptance with God and Entire Sanctification. His society was well organised, and he preserved his influence over it to the last. ' His genius for government was not inferior to that of Relieaus.' In the centenary year, 1873, this Society, of 1,700 and those establishing his annual conference (which first met in 1744 on a legal basis) is dated 28 Feb. 1784. The Conference of 1791 accorded every privilege conferred by the Deed of Declaration on all preachers in full connection with it. In 1821 there were 428 circuits in Great Britain, with between 13,000 and 15,000 local preachers, 450 itinerant preachers, and 6,578 chapels; in 1875, 8,943 chapels with 2,455 ministers, between 14,000 and 20,000 lay preachers and 1,568,568 members; 7,912 Sunday schools with 131,743 teachers and office holders, and 1,051,522 scholars.

Other branches of Methodists are:
- New Connexion formed by Rev. A. Kilham, 1777.
- Primitive Methodists; founded by H. Bourne and W. Clowes in Staffordshire, 1802.
- Bible Christians, or Bryntegs, founded by Wm. O'Brien, 1792.
- Wesleyan Methodist lay preacher in Cornwall, 1775.
- Methodist Indians, founded, 1774.
- Wesleyan Methodist Reformers, founded, 1814.
- The last arose out of the publication of the notorious "Fly sheet of converted, etc." (see 1814). Their friends were expelled. By these disruptions the main body is thought to have lost 100,000 members. This sect in America numbered about a million in 1844, when a division took place on the slavery question.

The United Methodist Free Churches, an amalgamation of the Primitive Methodist (1852), Wesleyan Methodist (1894), and the Salvation Army (1878), founded, 1932.

Wesleyan Missionary Jubilee Fund produced 18,000. (1873)
- Rev. Dr. Bowman Stevenson founded Cheltenham Homes, 1860.
- Lay representatives admitted to Wesleyan Conference, 1874.
- An denominational conference to be held in the autumn of 1841, settled, 21 July, 1841.
- Letter from Dr. Pusey requesting aid in opposing Corder's bill for admitting dissenters to the universities, read at the conference, but not received, 13 Aug., 1843.

The establishment of a high school for Wesleyans at Cambridge (to prepare for the university) proposed, 1 May 1852.

The chapel in the City-road, London, founded by John Wesley, 1 April, 1772, was nearly destroyed by fire, 16 June 1871.
- Geographical Methodist Conference (at City-road chapel, London), of 400 delegates, ministers, and laymen from all parts of the world (representing nearly 40,000 members), held, Oct., 1871.
- Centenary of the death of the celebrated John Wesley; his statue by Mr. Adams Action, in front of the City-road chapel, unveiled, by the Rev. W. F. Newton, 2 March, 1887.
- The chapel in the City-road, London (restored since 1824), reopened by Dr. Matthew, a bust of the Rev. Dr. W. F. Newton unveiled by Sir Henry Fowler (viscount Waldegrave), 7 July, 1859; memorial window to Dr. Simpson, unveiled by Mr. Choate, U.S., 15 March, 1892.
- Dedication and Anniversary of John Wesley's house in the City-road, 2 March, 1873.
- The rev. Hugh Price Hughes, popular preacher, died, aged 55.

Sierra Leone, Gambia, Southern and Northern Nigeria and Gold Coast are all separate colonies under separate governors (p. 11).}

WESTERN AUSTRALIA, formerly SWAN RIVER SETTLEMENT, which was projected by colonel Peel in 1828. Regulations issued from the colonial office, and captain (atl, sir James) Stirling, appointed Lieut.-gov., Jan. 17, 1829; who arrived at the site in August following. The three towns of Perth, Fremantle, and Guildford were founded same year. In March, 1830, fifty ships, with 2,000 emigrants, with property, amounting to $1,000,000, arrived here and reached hundreds of land surveys. The more energetic settlers left for home, or the neighbouring colonies, and the colony languished for twenty years after for want of suitable inhabitants—the first settlers, from their previous habits and rank in life, proving unfit for the work of colonization. In 1848, the colony requested that convict transport be sent out to them, and in 1849 a band arrived, who were kindly received and well treated. The best results ensued. By 1852, 2000 had arrived, and the inhabitants of Perth had requested that 1000 should be sent out annually. The reception of convicts ceased after three years, in consequence of the energetic opposition of the other Australian colonies (1865).—The settlement of King George's Sound was founded in 1826 by the government of New South Wales. It was used as a military station for four years. In 1839, the home government ordered the settlement to be transferred to Swan River. Since the establishment of steam communication, the little colony of Albany has become a thriving seaport. It possesses an excellent harbour. Bishopric of Perth founded 1857. Area, 67,000 sq. miles. WESTMINSTER, so called on account of its western situation with regard to St. Paul's cathedral, or from there being formerly a monastery named Eastminster, on the hill now called Great Tower-hill. This city joins London at Temple-bar. Formerly Westminster was called Thorney, or Thorny Island; and in ancient times Canute had a palace here, burnt in 1293. Westminster and London were once considered as one. When the houses were thatched, and there were mud walls in the Strand. It is said that the great number of Scotsmen who came over after the accession of James I., occasioned the building of Westminster, and united it with London. (See London and Westminster. Pop. 1881, 3,438,732; St. George's Hanover-sq., 1881, 149,71;8. (Civ. 1891, 651, 168,953.) Westminster reconstituted a city under the London Government Act, 1894, 10 aldermen, 60 councillors; the duke of Norfolk, first mayor, his portrait unveiled in the council chamber, 12 Feb., 1895. WESTPHALIA or MÖNSTER. PEACE OF:

The treaties signed at Osnabrug 6 Aug., and at Münster 23 Oct. 1648, between France, the emperor, and Sweden, ended the Thirty Years' war and continued the war against France. By this peace (ending the thirty years' war) the principle of a balance of power in Europe was first recognised; Alsace given to France, and part of Pomerania and some other districts to Sweden; the Lower Palatinate restored to the elector palatine; the religious and political rights of the German states established; and the independence of the Swiss Confederation recognised by Germany.

WHALE-FISHERY. It is said, was first carried on by the Norwegians in the ninth century.

Leucht. Whales were killed at Newfoundland and Labrador, for their oil only, 1578; the use of their bones and haws was not yet known, consequently (a writer adds) no stays were worn by the ladies. The English whale-fishing commenced at Spitbergen in 1642; but the Dutch had been previously fishing there. The fishery was much promoted by an act of parliament passed in 1749. From 1800 to 1840 whales had been killed annually on the coast of Greenland, &c. The quantity of whale-oil imported in 1814 was 35,567 tons; in 1826, when gas-light became general, 25,000 tons; in 1830, about 22,000 tons; in 1840, 18,091 tons; in 1850, 14,750 tons; in 1851, 14,793 tons; in 1871, 19,759 tons; in 1878, 20,650 tons; in 1883, 17,146 tons; in 1890, 20,307 tons; in 1895, 21,507 tons; in 1898, 22,745 tons. A living whale from Labrador, 9 feet 6 inches long, placed in the Westminister aquarium, 20 Sept., died 20 Sept. 1877.

White whale (Beluga), arrived 28 May; died in latter part of June.

WHARNCLIFFE MEETINGS of public companies (held to give enlarged powers under certain prescribed conditions) are so called because the standing orders of the house of lords, under which they are held, were introduced by lord Wharncliffe, about 1846.

WHEAT. The Chinese ascribe to their emperor, Ching-Young, who succeeded Fohi, the art of husbandry, and method of making bread from wheat, about 2000 years before the Christian era. Wheat was introduced into Britain in the 6th century, by Colb ap Coll Frewl, Roberts. The first wheat imported into England of which we have a note was in 1347. Various statutes have regulated the sales of wheat, and restrained its importation, in order to encourage its being raised at home. In 1862 attention was drawn to the probable utility of considering the pedigree of wheat. In 1871 it was estimated that 3,571,894 acres in the United Kingdom were devoted to wheat; in 1876, 3,524,342 acres, and wheat was officially established in 1815; 417,493 ares, and wheat in 1895; 815,124 in 1896; 1,796,695 in 1901; 1,696,733 in 1908. See Bread and Corn Laws. Greatest producers (in order), United States, Russia, France, Great Britain, &c. The wheat crop for Great Britain is said to have yielded 71,939,416 bushels in 1888: 37,470,257 in 1895: 52,693,809 in 1900: 58,924,459 in 1902. See Corner, 1838, 1891, and Jacoby, 1848.

WHISKY, the spirit distilled from malt and other corn in Scotland and Ireland. The distillation of whisky is referred to the 16th century; but some authors state it to have been earlier; see Distillation. In 1827 the duties on spirit-distilled in Scotland and Ireland were equated with those distilled in England. Women's Whisky War, see United States, 1874.

Whiteday dinner, when the cabinet ministers met at the end of each session, is said to have begun at the end of the 18th century, through sir Robert Preston and Mr. George Rose inviting Mr. Pitt and his colleagues to dine at Jungenham, and afterwards at Greenwich. Another account dates its origin in 1721. The annual whitebread dinner, stopped by the Gladstone ministry, was revived by the Disraeli ministry.

Aug. 1874, and continued by the Gladstone, 1 Sept. 1880. This dinner has never since 1851 been revived by the Rosebery ministry, 13 Aug. 1874. The whitebread ( pela y a l a b a ) is a subject of controversy. Albert Gänther, of the British Museum, in his Catalogue of Fishes, says the whitebread is “a purely nominal species,” and that all the examples which he has examined were young herrings (1858).

At the inquiry in June, 1857, James Henry Cannon, Fisherman, claimed the discovery of the fish for his grandfather, Richard, who named it 1759. It was mentioned in a letter in the life of Lord Melville, 2 July, 1759.

WHITEBOYS, a body of runlins in Ireland, so called on account of their wearing linen frocks over their coats. They committed dreadful outrages from 1761, but were suppressed by a military force, and their ringleaders executed in 1762. They rose again in 1780-7. The insurrection act was passed on their account in 1782.

WHITE CAPS, a self-constituted organization in the United States, which pretended to take cognizance of offenses against morality and social order, punishing the offenders by severe whipping. Called “White caps” from the members wearing white hoods to conceal their faces when visiting the houses of alleged delinquents.

Whewel, or Hurlen, or Wheel, the name given by the court party to their antagonists for holding the principles of the [plotted Whigs, or fanatical covenanters in Scotland; and in return the name Tory was given to the court party, comprising them to the Tories, or popish robbers in Ireland. Baker. The distinction arose out of the discovery of the Fifelub plot (which see) in 1678. Upon bringing up the mess plot before parliament, two parties were formed: the ones who doubted the plot styled those who believed in it Whigs; these styled their adversaries Tories. In time these names, given as marks of opprobrium, became honoured distinctions. Home. The Whigs brought about the revolution of 1688, and established the Protestant succession. They were chiefly instrumental in obtaining the abolition of the slave trade and slavery, the repeal of the Test and Corporation act, Catholic emancipation, parliamentary and municipal reform, the repeal of the corn laws, and similar measures. The Whig Club was established by James Fox, and its founder and named the great French, duke of Bedford, who died in 1802. See Liberals. WHITECHAPEL MURDERS, etc. Henry Wainwright, a brushmaker, murdered Harriet Lane, his mistress, on his premises, 215, Whitechapel-road, and buried the body, Sept. 1874.

While conveying the mutilated remains to be concealed in his cellars in Southwark, Wainwright and Alice Bay were apprehended, through the assistance of the activities of Alfred Prior Stokes, in Sept. Bay was discharged; Henry and his brother Thomas were committed for trial 13 Oct. 1875.
Nine days trial before chief justice Cockburn; Henry convicted of murder, Thomas as accessory after the fact (seven years' penal servitude), 22 Nov. 1875; Henry executed 21 Dec. 1876. Both sentenced for Henry's family.

Much excitement was caused by the murder and brutal mutilation of unfortunate women at different times—Smith, 3 April; Martha Turner, 7 Aug.; Nicholas, 31 Aug.; Chapman, 7 Sept. Coroner's return open verdict.
The evidence showed the murderer possessed surgical knolige, his object being to get possession of certain organs. Two more women murdered in a similar manner near Commercial Road and Aldgate; E. Watts or Strike and C. Conway or Edwards between 1 and 2 a.m., 30 Sept. The lord mayor offers 200 reward, besides all reward to the murder near Aldgate; Mary Jane Kelly's body found dreadfully mutilated in 26 Dorset Street, Spitalfields, 9 Nov. 1878. Rose Mellor of Davigton St, Strangford on Totter, 26 Dec. Alice McKenzie found at Abney Hill, 3 Jan. 1879.

WHITE DOVES, a South Russian religious sect, said to be wealthy and superstitious, strongly advocating celibacy; under a chief named Konstrin. Members were tried for moral offences about April, 1876.

WHITEFIELDITES. George Whitefield, the founder of the "Catholic Methodists," born 1714, was the son of an innkeeper at Gloucester, where he received his first education. He was admitted a student at Oxford in 1732, became a companion of the Wyles there, and aided them in establishing Methodism. He parted from them in 1741, on account of their rejection of the doctrine of election. He was the most eloquent preacher of his day. His first sermon was preached in 1736, and he commenced field preaching in 1739. He is said to have delivered 18,000 sermons during his career of 34 years. He visited America in 1737, 1739, and 1741. His followers are termed "the countess of Huntington's connection," from his having become her chaplain in 1738, and from her energetic support of the sect, by establishing a college at Trefeven, 1767. See Spitalfields. There were 109 chapels of this connection in 1851; 30 chapels in 1866, but many of his followers have joined the Independents. He died 30 Sept., 1770, and the countess died 17 June, 1791; see Tabardwine.

WHITEHALL (London). built by Hubert de Burgh, earl of Kent, before the middle of the 13th century. It afterwards deolved, by bequest, to the Black Friars of Holborn, who sold it to the archbishop of York, whence it received the name of York-place, and continued to be the town residence of the archbishops till taken by Henry VIII. from cardinal Wolsey, in 1530. At this period it became the residence of the court. Queen Elizabeth, who died at Richmond in 1603, was brought from thence to Whitehall, by water, in a grand procession. It was on this occasion, Camden informs us, that the following quatrain panezgyric on her majesty was written:

At every stroke the ears did tins let fall.
More chung about the large: fish under water Wept out their eyes of pearl, and swam blind after.
I think the bargemen might, with easier thighs,
Have rowed her thither in her people's eyes.
For however much my thoughts have seawnd,
She had come by water, had she come by land."

Whitehall was partly burnt 9-10 April, 1601; totally destroyed by fire 4 Jan. 1697-8, except the banqueting-house, which had been added to the palace of Whitehall by James I., according to a design of Inigo Jones, in 1619. In the front of Whitehall Charles I. was beheaded 30 Jan. 1649. George I. converted the hall into a chapel 1723-4.
The exterior of this edifice underwent repair between 1829 and 1833. The chapel was ordered to be permanently closed, 28 Oct. 1869; lent during queen Victoria's reign, to the Royal United Service Institution, from 1 Jan. 1891; first meeting held, 7 March, 1891.

WHITE SHEEP. WIGHT, ISLE OF.

WHITE SHEEP, a name given to the Turcoman who conquered Persia about 1468, and persued the Shutites, but were expelled by Ismail, who founded the Sophi dynasty in 1501.

WHITE TOWER, the keep or citadel in the Tower of London, a large, square, irregular building, erected in 1070 by abbot Gundulph, afterwards bishop of Rochester. It measures 116 feet by 96, and is 92 feet in height: the walls, which are 11 feet thick, having a winding staircase continued along two of the sides, like that in Dover Castle.
It contains an extensive armory. Within this tower is the ancient chapel of St. John, originally used by the English monarchs. The turret at the N.E. angle, the highest of the four by which the White Tower is surmounted, was used for astronomical purposes by Flamsteed previously to the erection of the royal observatory at Greenwich.

WHITSUNTIDE, a festival appointed to commemorate the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the apostles, colored persons catechized, men, are said to have worn white garments on Whitsunday. This feast is movable, being always exactly seven weeks after Easter. Rogation week (which see) is the week before Whitsunday.

Whitsunday, a Scotch quarter-day, is always on 15 May, as settled by an act of 1663, but local usage varies.

WHITTINGTON'S CHARITIES. Sir Richard Whittington, a citizen and mercer of London, served the office of lord mayor three times, the last in 1459. Many false stories are connected with his name, and his munificent charities are little known. He founded his college, dedicated to the Holy Ghost and the Virgin Mary, in 1421; and his alms-houses in 1429; the latter, originally built in London, now stand on Highgate-hill (built 1608) near the supposed site of the stone which commemorated the legend of his return to London, after leaving it in despair.

WHITWORTH FOUNDATIONS. Mr.
(adv.) Sir Joseph Whitworth, the eminent engineer (born 21 Dec. 1803; died 22 Jan. 1887), in a letter to the first lord of the treasury, dated 18 March, 1868, offered to found 30 scholarships of the annual value of 100l. each, to be applied for the further instruction of young men, natives of the United Kingdom, selected by open competition for their meritorious proficiency in the theory and practice of mechanics and its cognate sciences, with a view to the promotion of engineering and mechanical industry in this country; and he expressed hopes that means might be found for bringing science and industry into closer relation with each other than at present obtains here. This offer was accepted by the lords of the committee of the privy council, 28 March, 1868. In 1875, sir Joseph assigned an estate to support these scholarships. For the results of sir Joseph Whitworth's will, see Manchester, 1888-90.

"WHOLE DUTY OF MAN:" (the authorship doubtfully attributed to alps. Sumeretz, Frewen, and Sterne; to bishops Fell and Chapel:
to Dorothy, lady Packington, and others:) first published, 1659. Loundes. It is attributed by some to John Ischen.

WICKLIFFITES, the followers of John Wickliffe (born 1322), a professor of divinity in the university of Oxford, and rector of Lutterworth in Leicestershire. He was a forerunner of the reformation of the English Church from popery, being among the first who opposed the authority of the pope, transubstantiation, the celibacy of the clergy, &c. Wickliffe, protected by John of Gaunt, Edward's son and Richard's uncle, was virtuately persecuted by the church, and only saved from mar-yrdom by a paralytic attack, which caused his death, 31 Dec. 1384, in his 60th year. The Council of Constance, in 1414, decreed his bones to be disinterred and burnt, which was done by the bishop of Lincoln, and his dust was cast into the river Swift, 1415. Wickliffe's English version of the Bible was commenced in 1382, a noble edition of it was printed at Oxford in 1580. Wycliffe Society, founded in 1882 to publish his works. Quincentenary of his death celebrated in London, &c., 21 May, 1883.

The Jewish law required a man's brother to marry his widow if without children (1350 n.c.). For the burning of widows in India, see Ates-
t. Among the numerous associations in London for the relief of widows are, one for the widows of musicians, instituted in 1738; another (now existing) established 1881; for widows of medical men, 1788; widows' friend society instituted in 1808; society for the relief of distressed widows, instituted in 1823; society for the relief of widows and children of clergymen, instituted in 1833, sold-ers' and sailors' families association, founded 1885; and a society for artists' widows, 1841. - Widowers were taxed in England as follows: a duke, 120. 10c.; lower peers, smaller sums; a common person, 15. 7 Will. III.]

WIGAN (Lancashire). The king's troops, com-nanded by the earl of Derby, were defeated and driven out of the town in 1643 by the parliamentary forces under sir John Scorton. The earl was again defeated by colonel Athton, who razed the fortifications of Wigan to the ground, same year; and once more by a greatly superior force commanded by colonel Lihurne, 1651. In this last engagement, sir Thomas Tildiey, an arithmetician, was slain; a pillar was erected to his memory in 1674. The soldiers in the neighborhood struck, and acting violently 17, 18 April, 1894, were quelled by the military. Arrangements were soon after made with the employers. The prince and princess of Wales at their visit, 4 June, 1873, opened a new hospital.

WIGHT, ISLE OF, the Roman Victor or Vietia, was conquered by Vespasian in the reign of Claud-us. It was conquered by the Saxons under Cerdic about 530; by the Danes, 787, and in 1001, when they held it for several years. It was invaded by the French, July, 1357, and has several times suffered from invasion by them. In 1415, Henry VI. ascended the Isle to Henry de Beaufort, first premier earl of England and then duke of Warwick, and afterwards crowned him king of the Isle of Wight, with his own hands; but dying without heirs male, his real title died with him, and the kingship of the Isle returned to the crown. Charles I., after his flight from Hampden, took refuge on the island in 1647, in the time of Charles H. t. of England, was very plentiful.
In this island was queen Victoria's marine residence, Osborne-house, which she bequeathed to king Edward VII.: he gave it to the nation to be used as a convalescent home for officers in the navy and army, 9 Aug. 1912. Population, 1901, 52,751; 1916

WILLS AND TESTAMENTS are of very high antiquity, see Gnomon xlvii. The private will of Sehnecherib, king of Assyria, 680 B.C., found at Nineveh, is translated in Records of the Past, Vol. I. Solo, introduced them at Athens, 576 B.C. There are regulations respecting wills in the Koran. Treasurers testify the civilian, introduced codicils to wills at Rome, 41 B.C. The power of bequeathing lands by the last will and testament of the owner was confirmed to English subjects 1 Henry I. 1100; but with great restrictions and limitations respecting the feudal system, which were taken off by the statute of 42 Hen. VIII. 1514, Blackstone's Commentaries. The first will of a layman on record is stated (but not given) to be that of Richard H. 1397; Edward the Confessor made a will, 1066. Various laws have regulated the wills and testaments of Briti-sh subjects. All previous statutes were repealed by the "Wills Act," 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, 1837, and the laws with relation to wills amended. The present

Probate Court (which see) was established in 1857. An office for the reception of the wills of living persons was opened in Jan. 1861. See Thel- luson's Wills; Bromley, Duties, Trials, 1 April, 1867. In 1869 twenty probates of wills or letters of administration were stamped for personal property, each exceeding a quarter of a million; one had a stamp of 21,000L. The Wills Office, removed from Doctors' Commons to Somersett House, was opened 21 Oct. 1874.

WILMINGTON (N. Carolina, U.S.) was held by the confederates; resisted severe attacks of the federals in Dec. 1864. Fort Fisher was taken by assault on 15 Jan., and Wilmington was evacuated by the confederates, 22 Feb. 1865.

WINCHESTER (Hampshire), a most ancient city, whose erection may reasonably be ascribed to the Celtic Britons, with the fabulous date 302 B.C. It was made the capital of the West Saxon kingdom under Ceolred, about 520; and of England by Egbert, 827; it became the residence of Alfred, 879-901. In the reign of William I. London be- gan to rival it; and the destruction of religious houses by Henry VIII. almost ruined it. Several kings resided at Winchester, and many parliaments were held there. Memorials of its ancient superi- ority exist in the national denomination of measures of quantity, as Winchester ell, Winchester bushel, sc. the use of which has but recently been replaced by imperial measures. The cathedral church was first founded and endowed by Cymgulis, or Kene- gibus, the first Christian king of the West Saxons. Becoming ruinous, the present fabric was begun by bishop Wulflacyn, the 31st bishop, 1073; re- pairs to the roof began March, 1894; completed 23rd July, 1908, Dec. 1896. The church was first dedicated to St. Amphibalus, then to St. Peter, and afterwards to St. Swithin, once bishop here. Dedicated to the Holy Trinity by Henry VIII. St. Birinus was the first bishop of the West Saxons, his seat Dorchester, 636; Wina, in 660, was the first bishop of Winchester. The see is WINCHESTER SCHOOL. The oldest of our great schools, "Semte Marie College of Wincheste," the charter of which is dated Oct. 1282, was founded in 1387 by William (Long) of Wykeham, bishop of Winchester, who had established a school here in 1373. The ancient statutes were revised in 1855; and still further altered by the Public Schools act of 1868. In Nov.-Dec. 1872 there was much published correspondence respecting the founding—the excessive punishment of the boys by boy prefects. In May, 1892, it was arranged that the quincentenary of the school should be celebrated 25 July, 1893.

Erection of memorial buildings determined on 4 May, 1892; buildings opened by the warden, the rev. Godfrey Bolles Lee, 15 June, 1892.

The quincentenary of the foundation of the school (or college) was celebrated 25 July, 1893.

[Besides special services in the buildings, there was a solemn service in the cathedral, processions, meetings, vigils and festivities. Among the visitors were the prince of Wales and the duke of Connaught.]

WINNIPEG, capital of the province of Manitoba, Canada, has recently risen to great importance. The population, which was 215 in 1870, had risen to 20,238 in 1891; 1902, 55,000; 1910 (est.), 135,000. A period of depression from 1882 to 1884 has, however, followed by great prosperity especially since the suppression of Riel's rebellion in 1885; large numbers of immigrants reported during last six years. WISCONSIN, a N.W. state of N. America, was organised as a territory in 1836; and received into the union, 29 May, 1848. Population in 1880, 4,315,497; 1900, 2,090,042. Capital, Madison. Destructive forest fires, see United States, 31 Aug., 1894; and storms, 1899.

WISSENBURG, or WEISSENBURG, N.E. France, in the department of the Lower Rhine, situate on the right bank of the river Lauter, the boundary of France and the Palatinate. It was formerly an imperial city of Alsace, and was seized by Louis XIV. in 1673, and annexed to France by the treaty of Ryswick, 1697. The "lines" of Wissenburg, negotiated by Villars 1705, were taken by the Austrians and retaken by the French, 1793, after Hoche's victory at Geiberg. On 4 Aug., 1879, the crown-prince of Prussia crossed the Lauter and gained a brilliant but bloody victory over the French (a part of M. Haulton's division), screening the lines and the Geiberg. General Abel Doumergue mortally wounded, and about 800 prisoners were made. The killed and wounded on both sides appear to have been nearly equal. The German army, composed of Prussians, Bavarians, and Württembergers, was, it is said, about 40,000, against about 10,000 French, who fought with desperate bravery.

WITCHCRAFT. The Jewish law (Exodus xxii. 18), 1391 n.c., decreed, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." Saul, after banishing or condemning witchcraft, consulted the witch of Endor, 1056 n.c. (1 Sam. xxviii.). Pope Innocent VIII. issued a bull against witchcraft in 1484. Thousands of innocent persons were burnt, and others killed by the tests applied. Many Temples burnt at Paris for witchcraft, 1485. Joan of Arc burnt at Rouen as a witch, 20 May, 1431. About five hundred witches burnt in Geneva, in three months, 1545. New York burnt in the diocese of Cape, about 1544. A great number in France, about 1540, when one sorcerer confessed to having 2000 associates. Nine hundred burnt in Lorraine, 1580-1585. One hundred and fifty-seven burnt at Wurtzburg, old and young, learned and ignorant, between 1629 and 1632. Grander, the parish priest at London, burnt on a charge of having bewitched a whole convent of nuns, 1634. In Brittany, twenty poor women put to death as witches, 1654. Disturbances commenced on charges of witchcraft in America, in Massachusetts, 1647-9; and prosecutions commenced treacherously in Pennsylvania and Maryland. At Salem, in New England, nineteen persons hanged (by the Puritans) for witchcraft, eight more condemned; filthy confessed themselves to be witches and were pardoned, 1692. Maria Regua burnt at Wurtzburg in 1728. At Kalisk, in Poland, nine old women charged with having bewitched and rendered unfruitful the lands belonging to that patrician, were burnt 22 July, 1777. Five women condemned to death by the Brahmins, at Patna, for sorcery, and executed, 15 Dec., 1802.

WITCHCRAFT IN ENGLAND.

A statute enacted declaring all witchcraft and sorcery to be felony without benefit of clergy, 35 Hen. VIII. 1541. Again, 5 Eliz. 1562, and 1 James I. 1603. The 7th canon of the church prohibits the clergy from casting out devils, 1603.

Barrington estimates the judicial murders for witchcraft in England in 200 years at 30,000.

Matthew Hopkins, the "witchfinder," causes the judicial murder of about 100 persons in Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk, 1645-7.

Matthew Hale burnt two persons for witchcraft in 1684. Seventeen or eighteen persons burnt at St. Oysthys, in Essex, about 1690.

Two pretended witches were executed at Northampton in 1675, and five others seven years afterwards. In 1716, Mrs. Hicks, and her daughter, aged nine, were hanged at Huntington.

Northampton and Huntington preserved the superstition about witchcraft later than other counties.

In Scotland, thousands of persons were burnt in the period of about a hundred years. Among the victims were persons of the highest rank, while all orders in the state concurred. James I. even caused a whole assise to be prosecuted for an acquittal. The King published his Daemonologie in Edinburgh, 1657. The last sufferer in Scotland was at Dornoch in 1752.

The laws against witchcraft had lain dormant for many years, when an ignorant person attempting to revive them (by finding a bill against a poor old woman in Surrey for the practice of witchcraft), they were restored, 1736.

On 4 Sept., 1793, a poor old paralysed Frenchman died in consequence of having been ducked, as a wizard, at Castle Hedingham, Essex. Ann Turner, old; killed as a witch by a half-insane man at Long Compton, Warwickshire, 17 Sept., 1875.

Bridget Cleary, aged 87, burnt as a witch at Ballyvat, co. Tipperary, 15 March, 1836. The husband sentenced to 20 years, and 5 others to different terms of imprisonment, 5 July, 1836.

WITTHENA-MOT or WITENA-GEMOT, the assembling of the wise men, the great council of the Anglo-Saxons. A witena-mot was called in Winchester by Egbert, 800, and in London, 843, to consult on the proper means to repel the Danes; see Parliam.tent.

WITTPESK (in Russia), where a battle was fought between the French under marshal Victor, duke of Belleme, and the Russians commanded by general Wittgenstein. The French were defeated after a desperate engagement, with the loss of about 3000 men on both sides, 14 Nov., 1812.

WITNESSES. Two or more witnesses were required by the law of Moses, 1357 n.c. (Deut. xiv. 6), and by the early Christian Church in cases of discipline, 1871 n.c. (1 Tim. v. 19). The evidence of two witnesses required to attain for high treason, 25 Edw. III. 1352. In civil actions between party and party, if a man be subpoenaed as a witness on a trial, he must appear in court on pain of 100d. to be forfeited to the king, and 40s., together with the damages equivalent to the loss sustained by the want of his evidence to the party aggrieved. Lord Ellenborough ruled that no witness is obliged to answer questions which may tend to degrade himself, 10 Dec., 1802. New act relating to the examination of witnesses passed 13 Geo. III. 1773. Act to enable courts of law to order the examination of witnesses upon interrogations and otherwise, 1 Will. IV. 30 March, 1831. The Witness Protection Act (see under Parliament 3d, April, 1822), passed 28 June, 1822.

WITGENEBERG, the capital of Upper Saxony, Prussian since 1785, the birthplace of the Reformation, suffered much during the thirty years' war, and Napoleon wars. Here are the houses, tombs, and statues of Luther and Melanchthon.

On the western door of the castle church (consecrated 1434) Martin Luther, as Augustinian monk, took his vows, and at the same feast of his thesis against the sale of indulgences, and inaugurated the Protestant reformation, 31 Oct., 1517.
The church, restored by the emperor William I and his successors, was solemnly reopened by the emperor William II, in the presence of the protestant princes of Germany and representatives, including the duke of York and other dignitaries, during the Luther celebration...

WITU, or Vitu. See Zanzibar, 1890.

WIVES, see Marriage. By the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Act, passed in 1857, the condition of married women has been much benefited.
When ill-used they can obtain a divorce or judicial separation, either in the hands of any clergyman or person they may acquire is secured to them personally, as if unmarried. By another act passed in 1857, they are enabled to dispose of reversionary interests in personal property or estates. An act to amend the law relating to the property of married women was passed 9 Aug. 1870. By it the separate earnings of a wife were secured to her own use, as well as personal and pre-marital property bequeathed to her. She may maintain an action at law, and acquires other rights. The husband is declared liable for debts contracted by his wife prior to marriage, and she may sue for them. This act was amended in 1874. Husband and wife may be joined in suit for the recovery of debts by marriage. By the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1878, a mistake can grant judicial separation, with maintenance, to a wife suffering from her husband’s ill-usage.

House of lords decide that the husband is not responsible for his wife’s debts if he allow sufficient for dress, &c. Topham v. Mellen. 27 Nov. 1880 Married Women’s Property Act, 24 & 25 Vict.
c. 75, passed 18 Aug. 1875, making their powers almost equal to those of single women, and increasing their responsibilities in regard to debt, came into effect, 1 Jan. 1876; amended, 5 Dec. 1893
Provision for deserted wives made by Act passed 22 Chitere 1872—Miss Emily Hall (born 1866) was married to Mr. E. Houghton Jackson at Blackburn, 5 Nov. 1877. They never lived together; she returned to her friends, and he soon after went to New Zealand. He returned to England, on her application; after a interview (16 Jan. 1878) she steadfastly refused to live with him. Some litigation ensued, and a degree against her was obtained, 50 July, 1889.
Mr. Jackson and his wife applied for her when coming from church at Clitheroe, and carried her off to his house at Blackburn, where she was closely confined in charge of a nurse.
By this act a wife can sue for a she was brought before the court of appeal, who decided that a husband has no legal power to detain his wife against her will, 19 May. Mrs. Jackson then returned to her friends.

known.

WOERTHERSEE SAFER, a town in the department of the Lower Rhine, N.E. France. After storming Wissembourg (which see) on 4 Aug. 1870, the crown-prince of Prussia, with the 3rd army (about 100,000) marched rapidly forward and surprised part of the French army under Marshal MacMahon, including the corps of Camrard and part of that of Fally (about 47,000), and defeated it in a long, desperate, and sanguinary engagement near this place 6 Aug. The battle lasted from 9 a.m. till 4 p.m. The chief struggles occurred in the country round Reichshoffen and in the village of Froschweiler; the French are said to have charged the German line eleven times, each time breaking it, but always finding a fresh mass behind. The ride on which Woerth stood was not captured until the French were taken in flank by the Bavarians and Wurttemburgers. Nearly all Mac-Mahons staff were killed, and the marshal himself, unhorsed, fell fainting into a ditch, from which he was rescued by a soldier. He then, on foot, directed the retreat towards Saverno, to cover the passes of the Vosges. The victory is attributed to the very great numerical superiority of the Germans as well as to their excellent strategy. The French loss has been estimated at 5000 killed and wounded, and 5000 prisoners, 2 cagles, 6 mitraillesuses, 35 cannon, and much baggage. The Germans are stated to have had above 8000 men put hors de combat.

WOLVERHAMPTON (Staffordshire), an old town formerly named Hamton; owes its present name to the foundation of a college here by Wulfruna, sister of king Edgar, and widow of Aldhelm, duke of Northampton, 996. Queen Victoria was present at the inauguration of the prince consort’s statue, 30 Nov. 1866. Wolver-hampton is eminent for its manufactures in metal.
Statute of hon. C. P. Villiers (its M.P., 1855-58) was uncovered, 6 June, 1879; he voted personally, when aged 90, for confidence in the Salisbury ministry, 11 Aug. 1882; died 16 Jan. 1888. Population, 1881, 75,766; 1891, 98,194; 1899 (est.), 104,933.

Feb. 1900).

Fine art and industrial exhibition opened by the duke and duchess of Connaught, 1 May, 1902; deficit of £4,000, reported, 5 Dec. 1902.

WOLVES were once very numerous in England.
Their heads were demanded as a tribute, particularly 300 yearly from Wales, by king Edgar, 661, by which step they were falsely said to be totally destroyed. Citer. Edward I. issued his mandate for the destruction of wolves in several counties of England, 1289. Ireland was infested by wolves for many centuries after their extirpation in England; for there are accounts of some being found there 80 late as 1710, when the last presentment for killing wolves was made in the county of Cork.

In 1874 the annual revenue of the crown woods and forests was 457,657/. 1882-3, 308,000; 1901, 666,109/; 1902, 618,356/.

There are 319,213 acres under the charge of the Commissioners, 66,683 acres under timber, 128,117 acres are uncropped wastes; income to 31 March, 646,868; expenditure, 152,979; payments into exchequer, 530,000.

Wood's Half-pence, for circulation in Ireland and America, were coined by virtue of a patent, passed 1722. Against them, Dr. Jonathan Swift, by his letters signed M. B. Drapier published about 1723, raised such a spirit of opposition that the patent was withdrawn. Wood received a compensation, but was virtually banished from the kingdom. The half-pence were assayed in England by Sir Isaac Newton, and proved to be genuine, in 1724.

Wood Pavement was laid down at Whitehall in 1877, and in London-street, the Strand, and other streets. The principal part was soon taken up. In Nov. 1872, the improved wood pavement company put forth a prospectus; and in May, 1876, wood was laid down in many places. It is said to be the best pavement in London, and its use has diminished the noise of the traffic. Wood is now (1910) generally adopted as the paving for the principal thoroughfares of the metropolis and many other towns and cities.

Woodstock (Oxfordshire). In Woodstock, now Blenheim-park, originally stood a royal palace, in which King Ethelred held a parliament, and Alfred the Great translated Beowulf de Consolatione Philosophiae, 888. Henry I. beautified the palace; and here resided Rosamund, mistress of Henry II. In 1141, it was given by King Henry II. to his brother, Edmund, second son of Edward I. In 1217, and Edward, eldest son of Edward II., died here; and here the princess Elizabeth was confined by her sister Mary, 1554. A splendid mansion, built at the expense of the nation, for the duke of Marlborough, was erected here to commemorate his victory at Blenheim in 1704. At that time every tree of the ancient edifice was removed, and two elms were planted on its site; see Blenheim.

Wool. From the earliest times to the reign of Queen Elizabeth the wool of Great Britain was not only superior to that of Spain, but accounted the finest in the universe; and even in the times of the Romans a manufacture of woollen cloths was established at Winchester for the use of the emperors. Augustus. In later times wool was manufactured in England, and is mentioned 1185, but not in any quantity until 1311, when the weaving of it was introduced by John Kempe, and other artisans from Flanders. WORCESTER, successively an important British, Roman, and Saxon town, was burnt by the Danes (1011) for resisting the tribute called Danegeld. William l. built a castle, 1090. The city was frequently taken and retaken in the civil wars of the middle ages, and by Cromwell in 1651. The Bishops' war was founded by Ethelred, king of the Mercians, 880, and taken from the see of Lichfield, of which it composed a part. The married priests of the cathedral were displaced, and monks settled in their stead, 1084. The church was rebuilt by St. Wulstan, 25th bishop, 1090; the remains of his hospital are described by the rev. T. H. Marsh, in its "Annals," published in 1890. The see has yielded to the church of Rome five lord chancellors and three lord treasurers. It is valued in the king's books at 10,000/. 16s. 3/4. per annum. Present income, 5,000/. International Working Men’s Association (termed the International) owes its origin to some German socialists in London, 1847, and was much promoted by the foreign visitors to the great exhibition in 1852. It was definitely organised, 28 April, 1864, George Odger first president. Its principal object is the complete emancipation of labour from the tyranny of capitalists. It has held congresses at Geneva, Sept., 1866; Lausanne, Sept., 1867; Brussels, 6-11 Sept., 1868; Basel, 6-11
Sept., 1869; Barcelona, June, 1870; at the Hague, where great discussions arose between the “liberators,” who consider a government needful, and the “anarchists,” who deny it. One party including the council seduced from the true position, and adjourned to New York, 1872.

WORMS, a city on the Rhine, in Hesse-Darmstadt. The Roman city, Borbomagus, was plundered by the Alemanni, 354., and by Attila, 451; rebuilt by Clovis I., about 575. Here Charlemagne resided in 806. Here was held the imperial diet before which Martin Luther was summoned April 1521, and by which he was proscribed. Luther was met by 200 persons on foot and on horseback, at the distance of a league from Worms. When Spalatyn sent to warn him of his danger, he answered, "If there were as many devils in Worms as there are tiles upon the roofs of its houses, I would go on." He appeared before the emperor, the archduke Ferdinand, six electors, twenty-three bishops, seven margraves, thirty bishops and priests, and many princes, counts, lords, and ambassadors, 17 April, acknowledged his writings and opinions, and left Worms, in fact, a conqueror. Yet, to save his life, he had to remain in seclusion under the protection of the elector of Saxony for about a year. The edict putting him under the ban of the empire was issued 26 May, 1527.

Worms was burnt, by order of Louis XIV., 1689, the cathedral excepted; and was taken by the French, under Custine, 4 Oct. 1702. A memorial statue of Luther at Worms was uncovered, 23 June, 1888, in the presence of the king of Prussia and other sovereigns. Population, 1860, 40,705; 1895, 43,541.

WOUNDED IN BATTLE, see Geneva Convention, and Aid to Sick and Wounded.

WOUNDING, Malicious wounding of another was adjudged death by the English statutes. The Coventry Act was passed in 1671; see Coventry Act. By lord Ellenborough's Act, persons who stab or cut with intent to murder, maim, or disfigure another were declared guilty of felony without benefit of clergy. Those guilty of maliciously shooting at another in any dwelling-house or other place, are also punishable under the same statute in the same degree, 43 Geo. III. 1802. This offence is met by some later statutes, particularly the act for consolidating and amending the acts relating to offences against the person, 4 Geo. IV., June, 1828. This last act is extended to Ireland by 10 Geo. IV., 1829. An act for the prevention of maliciously shooting, stabbing, &c., in Scotland, 6 Geo. IV., 1825; amended by 10 Geo. IV., 4 June, 1829, for the prevention and punishment of assaults on women and children.

WRECKS. The loss of merchant and other ships by wreck upon lee-shores, coasts, and disasters in the open sea, was estimated at Lloyd's, in 1806, to be about an average of 3/5 ships a year. In 1830, it appeared by Lloyd's Lists that 677 British vessels were totally lost, under various circumstances, in that year. The laws respecting wrecks were consolidated in 1826 and 1854. See Seamen (commission of inquiry).

Abstracts of the returns made to the Board of Trade of shipping casualties on or near the coast, &c., of the United Kingdom, and also of the casualties to British vessels elsewhere, and also to foreign vessels, published annually since 1855.

The year 1853-4, particularly the winter months (Dec. and Jan.), was very remarkable for the number of drear wrecked ships and lives lost at sea; but a few of them are recorded. Wrecks (including vessels suffering casualties on British coasts) in 25 years (1834-79), 49,332; lives lost, 18,319.

WRECK COMMISSION, a court established to inquire into the causes of shipwrecks: first sat., 30 Oct. 1876, Mr. H. C. Rottohy, presi- dent, resigned 1880.

WRESTLING. The art of wrestling dates back many centuries. Its popularity has waxed and waned with varying periods. Towards the end of the 19th century wrestling as a pastime again began to penetrate into prominence in England by the introduc- tion of Russian, Turkish, and other foreign wrestlers. The principal forms of modern wrestling are the Greco-Roman, the Catch-as-catch-can, and Jiu- jitsu, the latter being the national style in Japan. In Greco-Roman wrestling the opponents are not allowed to hold each other below the waist, and both hips are free to be lifted or driven on the ground. In the Catch-as-catch-can style any hold is allowed, and the placing of both hips and one shoulder of a rival to the mat constitutes a fall. Jiu-jitsu, or the Japanese art of self-defense, has methods peculiarly its own, mainly consisting of locks and holds, a knowledge of which enables an comparatively weak person to defeat and overcome another of greater strength. The city of London police, as well as other forces, have been taught Jiu-jitsu.

WÜRTZBURG. 1531

Wyoming'.

Heir presumptive (William, born 29 July, 1828, died 6 Nov., 1866; Nicolous, born 1 March, 1833, died 21 Feb. 1913, next in succession, duke Philip and his son Albrecht.

WÜRTZBURG (in Bavaria), was formerly a bishopric, and its sovereign one of the greatest ecclesiastic princes of the empire. It was given as a principality to the elector of Bavaria in 1803; and by the treaty of Presburg, in 1805, was ceded to the archduke Ferdinand of Tuscany, whose electoral title was transferred from Salzburg to this place. In 1814 this duchy was again transferred to Bavaria, in exchange for the Tyrol, and the archduke Ferdinand was reinstated in his Tuscan dominions. Ministers from the second-rate German states met at Würzburg to promote union amongst them, 21-27 Nov. 1859. Near here the archduke Charles defeated the French under Jourdan, 3 Sept. 1796; and the Prussians defeated the Bavarians, 28 July, 1806.

WYATT'S INSURRECTION, see Rebellions, 1554.

WYOMING, a western territory of the United States of America, constituted in 1868, admitted a state 1890. Capital, Cheyenne. Lynch Law has not long been superseded. Women have been disfranchised. It includes Yellowstone park (which see). The desolation of Wyoming, in Pennsylvania, by an incursion of Indians allied with the British, 3 July, 1778, forms the subject of Campbell's poem, "Gertrude of Wyoming," published 1806. Wyoming abounds in iron, coal, natural soda, mineral oil, &c. Explosion in a coal mine at Red Canyon, about 68 deaths, 21 March, 1895; another at Hanna, 175 killed, 30 June, 1913. The U.S. settlers attack the Bannock Indians on their hunting grounds; several killed; troops sent, 24 July, 1895. Population 1880, 20,789; 1905, 101,016; 1910 (est.), 140,600.

XANTHIAN MARBLES, see British Museum.

XANTHICA, a military festival observed by the Macedonians in the month called Xanthicus (our April), instituted about 332 B.C.

XANTHUS, Lycia, Asia Minor, was taken by Harpagus for Cyrus, about 536 B.C., when the inhabitants buried themselves in the ruins. It was besieged by the Romans under Brutus 42 B.C. After a great struggle the inhabitants set fire to their city, destroyed their wives and children, and perished. The conqueror wished to spare them, and offered rewards to his soldiers if they brought any of the Xanthians into his presence, but only 150 were saved. Plutarch.

XENOPHON, see Retreat of the Greeks.

XERES DE LA FRONTERA (S.W. Spain), the Asta Regia of the Romans, and the seat of the wine-trade in Spain, of which the principal wine is that so well known in England as Sherry, an English corruption of Xeres. The British importations of this wine in 1850 reached to 3,826,785 gallons; and in the year ending 5 Jan. 1852, to 3,934,978 gallons. Xeres is a handsome and large town, of great antiquity. At the battle of Xeres, 26 July, 711, Roderic, the last Gothic sovereign of Spain, was defeated and slain by the Saracens, commanded by Tariq and Muza.

XERXES' CAMPAIGN. Xerxes crossed the Hellespont by a bridge of boats, and entered Greece in the spring of 480 B.C., with an army which, together with the numerous retinue of servants, eunuchs, and women that attended it, amounted (according to some historians) to 5,285,220 souls. Herodotus states the armament to have consisted of 3,000 sail, conveying 1,700,000 foot, besides cavalry and the marines and attendants of the camp. This multitude was stopped at Thermopyla (which see) by the valour of 300 Spartans under Leonidas, 7–8 Aug. 480 B.C. The fleet of Xerxes was defeated at Artemisium and Salamis, 20 Oct. 480 B.C.; and he hastened back to Persia, leaving behind Mardonius, the best of his generals, who, with an army of 500,000 men, was defeated and slain at Plataea, 22 Sept. 479 B.C. Xerxes was assassinated by Artabanus, 465 B.C.

XESIBELAND, a district in S. Africa, situated between Griqualand East and Pondoland; annexed in 1880 to Cape Colony.

XIMENA (S. Spain), the site of a battle between the Spanish army under the command of general Bullasteros, and the French corps commanded by general Regnier, 10 Sept. 1811. The Spaniards defeated their adversaries; the loss was great on both sides.

YANKEE, from "Yencees," a corruption of "English," the name originally given by the Massachusetts Indians to the colonists; applied solely to the New Englanders by the British soldiers in the American war (1775-81); afterwards by foreigners to all natives of the United States; and by the confederates of the south to the federals of the north during the war 1861-64.
YEAR. The Egyptians, it is said, were the first who fixed the length of the year.

The Roman year was divided into months, each of 30 days, except February, which had 29 days, and so the whole year contained 365 days. But in 46 B.C., by Julius Caesar, the year was corrected by adding a day to the month of February, making it 30 days long, and so it has been ever since. The solar or astronomical year was found to be about 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, 52 seconds, and 6 decimals, 265 B.C.

The lunar or Sidereal year was found to be about 365 days, 6 hours, 9 minutes, 11 seconds, and 14 decimals.

The Jews dated the beginning of the second year in March, and civil year in September: the Athenians began the year in June; the Macedonians on 24 Sept.; the Christians of Egypt and Ethiopia in 25 or 30 Aug.; and the Persians on 1 April. Now all Christian nations have commenced the year on 1 January.

In France, the Mowogian kings began the year with March; the Byzantines sometimes began the year with Christmas, 25 Dec.; and sometimes with Easter, which being a movable feast, led to much confusion. Charles IX. of France, in 1564, published an act, the last article of which declared that, for all times to come, he must be both annually and universally, and written on and from 1 January. The beginning of the year has been reckoned from the day celebrated in the Briton, the birthday of Christ, 25 Dec.; his circumcision, 1 Jan.; his conception, 25 March; and his resurrection, Easter.

The English began the year on the 25th of December, until the time of William the Conqueror. This practice having been crowned on 1 Jan., gave occasion to the English to begin their year at that time, to make it agree with the then most remarkable period of their history. Soon. Until the act for altering the style, in 1752 (see Style), when the year was ordered to begin on 1 Jan., it did not legally and generally commence in England until 25th March. In Scotland, at that period the new year began on the 1st of January. This difference caused great practical inconveniences, and January, February, and part of March sometimes being two dates, as we often find in old records, 1733, 1734, 1745, and 1746. Such a reckoning often led to chronological mistakes; for instance, we regularly say the "revolution of 1688," as that event was completed in February, or the "year of 1688," as that year was fixed in the book of computation; but if the year were held to be one, it does now, on the first of January, it would be the revolution of 1685.

The year in the northern regions of Siberia and Lapland is described in the following calendar, given by a traveller: 25 Feb., snow melts; 27 Feb., snow on; 9 March, fields quite green; 27 March, plants at full growth; 25 July, plants in full blossom; 10 Aug., plants shed their seeds; 27 Dec., snow. The snow continues upon the ground from 15th Aug. of one year to 23rd June of the following, being 360 days only; so that May, June, July, and August of one year correspond to January, February, March, and April of the next, and spring, summer, and autumn are together only six days, or eight weeks. The winter is of forty-five weeks' duration in the British countries.

See New Style, Platonic Year, Substantial Year, Modern Calendar, French Revolution, Calendars of the Year of our Lord, see Style.}

YEAR of our LORD: see Style.

YEAR of the REIGN. From the time of William the Conqueror, 1066, the year of the reign is always given, both in the two chambers of Parliament. The King's patents, charters, proclamations, and all acts of Parliament have since then been generally so dated. The same manner of writing is used in all the states of the Western Hemisphere, and in all similar documents and records; see List of Kings under Epoch of.
the Norman law, which enacted that a beast found on another's land, if unclaimed for a year and a day, belonged to the lord of the soil. It is otherwise a legal space of time.

YEAR-BOOKS contain reports in Norman-French of cases argued and decided in the courts of common law. The printed volumes extend from the beginning of the reign of Edward II. to nearly the end of the reign of Henry VIII., a period of about 220 years; but in this series there are many omissions. These books are the first in the long line of legal reports in which England is so rich, and may be considered as, to a great extent, the foundation of unwritten law. "For non-scripturam." In 1803 et seq. various year-books of Edward I. (1292-1301) edited by Mr. A. J. Horwood, for the series of the Chronicles and Memorials, were published at the expense of the British government.

YEAST, a substance causing fermentation, was discovered by Cagniard de la Tour and Schwann, independently, in 1836, to be a vegetable cell or fungus.

YELLOW FEVER, an American pestilence, made its appearance at Philadelphia, where it committed great ravages, 1699. It appeared in several islands of the West Indies in 1732, 1739, and 1745. It raged with unparalleled violence at Philadelphia: in Oct. 1702; and most awfully at New York in the beginning of Aug. 1791. This fever was a great devastation at Philadelphia in July 1793; carrying off several thousand persons. It again appeared in Oct. 1797; and spread its ravages over the northern coast of America, Sept. 1798. It reappeared in the summer of 1802; and broke out in Spain, in Sept. 1803. The yellow fever was very violent at Gibraltar in 1804 and 1813; in the Mauritius, July 1815; at Antigua, in Sept. 1816; and it raged with dreadful consequences at Cadiz, and the isle of St. Leon, in Sept. 1819. A malignant fever raged at Gibraltar in Sept. 1828, and did not terminate until the following year. Yellow fever raging in the southern of the United States, Sept. Oct. 1828; at Mobile, Alabama, 1829; in Florida (specially in Jacksonville) and other southern states, autumn 1888. Mr. R. A. Proctor, the astronomer, died of it at New York on his way from Florida to England, 12 Sept. 1888; the epidemic abating Oct. 1888: 4,583 cases, and 356 deaths in Jacksonville to Nov. 17, 1888; large outbreak, with some deaths, July-Sept. 1887; and at Senegal, autumn, 1880; Messrs. Reid, Carroll, and Agomonte investigate into the cause of the fever in Cuba during 1900, and finally prove the disease to be conveyed by a species of mosquito (Culex fasciatus), reported Feb. 1901.

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, about 3,300 square miles, in territory of Wyoming. It includes Yellowstone lake, about 30 square miles, with numerous geysers, volcanic and other grand natural phenomena, rugged mountains, forests, meadows, rivers, and much beautiful scenery. Its formation was authorised by congress in March, 1872.

YELEM, a province of Asiatic Turkey, on the Red Sea, the Arabia Felix of the Romans; see Arabia.

YENIKALE, see Azoff.

YEOMANRY, see under Territorials.

YEOMEN OF THE GUARD, a peculiar body of foot guards to the king's person, instituted at the coronation of Henry VII. 30 Oct. 1485, which originally consisted of fifty men under a captain. They were called butt-eaters, a corruption of buffets, being attendants on the king's buffet or sideboard; see Battle-Axe. They were of a larger stature than other guards, being required to be over six feet in height, and were armed with a short sword and a small shield. The number was increased by Henry's successors to one hundred men, and seventy supernumeraries; and when one of the hundred died, it was ordered that his place should be supplied out of the seventy. They were clad after the manner of king Henry VIII. Ashmole's Institut. This is said to have been the first permanent military and instituted in England. John earl of Oxford, was the first captain in 1486. Barton's Pol. Index.

YEON, a municipal borough in Somerset, situated on the river Yeovil, 22 miles S.E. of Bridgewater, and 40 miles S. of Bristol. The parish church, St. John's, called the "Lantern of the West," is a fine cruciform church, dating from the 13th century, restored 1864. The town was formerly noted for its woollen industry; at the present time (1903) it carries on an extensive trade in gloves manufactured here. In 1499 a huge fire destroyed 127 houses. Population, 1901, 9,286; 1910 (est.), 10,125.

YERMUK (Syria). Near here the emperor Heraclius was totally defeated by the Saracens, after a fierce engagement, Nov. 636. Damascus was taken, and his army expelled from Syria.

YEW-TREE (Taxus). The origin of planting yew-trees in churchyards was (these latter being fenced) to secure the trees from cattle, and in this manner preserve them to the use of archery. A general plantation of them for the use of archers was ordered by Richard III. 1483. Stone's Chron. Near Fountains Abbey, Yorkshire, were seven yew-trees, called the Seven Sisters, supposed to have been planted before 1088; the circumference of the largest thirty-four feet seven inches round the trunk. In 1828 it was said to be growing in the churchyard of Gresford, North Wales, whose circumference was nine yards nine inches, being the largest and oldest yew-tree in the British dominions; but tradition states that there are some yews in England older than the introduction of Christianity. The old yew-tree mentioned in the survey taken of Richmond palace in 1619, is said to be still existing.

YEZDEGIRD, or PERSIAN ERA, was formerly universally adopted in Persia, and is still used by the Parsees in India and by the Arabs, in certain computations. This era began on the 26th June, 622, when Yezdegird was elected king of Persia. The year consisted of 365 days only, and therefore its commencement, like that of the old Egyptian and Armenian year, anticipated the Julian year by one day in every four years. This difference amounted to nearly 112 days in the year 1875, when it was known by Jahed, who ordered that in future the Persian year should receive an additional day whenever it should appear necessary to postpone the commencement of the following year, that it might occur on the day of the sun's passing the same degree of the ecliptic.

YEZIDI, an eastern tribe, living near the Euphrates, visited by Mr. Layard in 1841; see Devil Worship.

YIDDISH, a kind of jargon Hebrew spoken by the lower class of Jews. There are two daily papers published in Y publish in the east of London, the Jewish Express and the Jewish Journal, each one half-penny.

YORK. ARCHBISHOPRIC OF. The most ancient metropolitan see in England, being, it is said, so made by king Lucius about 850, when Christianity was first partly established in England.
The bishop Eborus was present at the council of Arles, 314.
Trinity was overthrown by the Saxons, and was revived by pope Gregory the Great, the conversion, and Paulinus is said to have been consecrated archbishop, 21 July, 625.
York was the metropolitan see of the Scottish bishops; but during the time of archbishop Neville, 1494, they withdrew their obedience, and had archbishops of their own.
Much dispute arose between the two English metropolitan about precedence, as by pope Gregory's institutions it was thought the metropolis of Rome by both parties, and it was determined in favour of Canterbury.
The archbishop of York was allowed to style himself primate of England, while the archbishop of Canterbury styled himself primate of all England.
The province of York now contains the dioceses of York, Carlisle, Chester, Durham, Sodor, and Man, and that of York; Edinburgh, Newcastle, Wakefield and Ripon (which yr.) York has yielded to the church of Rome eight saints and three cardinals, and to England twelve lord chancellors, two lord treasurers, and two lord presidents of the north.
It is rated in the king's books, 3 Henry VIII. 1544, at 1000l. 19s. 2d., per annum.

YORK (Upper Canada), founded in 1794; since 1834 named Toronto. In the war between the United States and Great Britain, the United States' forces made several attacks upon the province of Upper Canada, and succeeded in taking York, the seat of the government, 25 April, 1813; but it was soon afterwards evacuated by the Americans.

YORKSHIRE. Exhibition of Arts and Manufactures, opened at Leeds, by the duke of Edinburgh, 13 May, 1875.

YORK TOWN (Virginia, United States). Lord Cornwallis had taken possession of York town in Aug. 1781; but after sustaining a disastrous siege, he was obliged to surrender his army, consisting of about 7000 men, to the allied armies of France and America, under the command of General Washington and Count Rochambeau, 19 Oct. 1781. This mischance was attributed to sir Henry Clinton, who had not given the garrison the necessary succour they expected; and it mainly led to the close of the war. The centenary was celebrated 16 Oct. 1881. On 19 Oct. the British town was saluted generally. The town was strongly fortified by the confederates in the American civil war, but surrendered to McClellan, May, 1862.

YOUNG ENGLAND, a name given to a number of young Tory gentlemen earnestly opposed to the repeal of the corn laws and other liberal measures, and very desirous of reviving the old distinctions between the upper and lower classes mixing in rural sports, &c., yet preserving the due distinctions (1842-5). Lord John Manners (duke of Rutland, 1888), and the hon. G. Smythe, were eminent leaders, and their ideas were favoured by Mr. Disraeli (lord Beaconsfield) in his novel "Coningsby," published 1844. Duke of Rutland died, aged 81, 4 Aug. 1860.

On 10 Feb. 1851, an important treaty of commerce and navigation, between Austria and Prussia, to last from Jan. 1852 to Dec. 1865, was signed, to which the other states of the Zollverein gave their adhesion on 5 April, 1853. In Nov. 1861, Prussia threatened to withdraw unless certain changes were made. By the treaty of 8 July, 1867, between the North German confederation and the southern states (Bavaria, Wurttemberg, Baden, and Hesse), various changes were made, and by other treaties signed in Oct. these states agreed to send delegates to a customs parliament to be held at Berlin. A resolution of this congress was signed by the king of Prussia, 27 April, and closed 23 May, 1868. Federal chancellor, the count von Biichner.

ZOOLOGY (from zoion, Greek for animal) is the division of biology which treats of animals.

Linnæus divided the animal kingdom into six classes,

- Mammalia, which includes all animals that suckle their young;
  Aves, birds;
  Amphibia, or amphibious animals;
  Pisces, fishes;
  Insecta, insects;
  Pooma, worms.

Cuvier (died in Paris, 13 May, 1832), in his great work, Règne Animal, published in 1815, distributed the animals into twelve tabular divisions, the classes, orders, families, genera, and species.

In 1858, professor Owen made known a system of arranging the class Mammalia according to the nature of their brains.

ZOUAVES AND FOOT CHASSEURS. When the French established a regency at Algiers, in 1830, they hoped to find the employment of native troops advantageous, and selected the Zouaves, a congregation of daring Arab tribes. In time, numbers of red republicans, and other enthusiastic Frenchmen, joined the regiments, adopting the costume, &c., eventually the Africans disappeared from the ranks, and no more were added. Among those that were more Liberal-minded was Captain Gambalda.

The French Zouaves formed an important part of the army in the Crimean war, 1853-4.

The Imperial Governments of Russia and Japan, being sincerely attached to the principles established by the Convention concluded between them on July 30th, 1907, and being desirous of developing the effects of that Convention with a view to the consolidation of peace in the Far East, have agreed to complete the said arrangement in the following manner:—

1. With the object of facilitating communication and developing the trade of the nations, the two high contracting parties agree to extend to one another their friendly cooperation with a view to the improvement of their respective railway lines in Manchuria and the perfection of the connecting services of the said lines, and to abstain from all competition prejudicial to the realization of this object.

2. Each of the high contracting parties undertakes to maintain and respect the status quo in Manchuria resulting from all the treaty conventions, and other arrangements concluded up to this date, either between Russia and Japan or between these two powers and China. Copies of the said arrangements have been exchanged between Russia and Japan.

3. In the event of anything arising of a nature to threaten the status quo mentioned above the two high contracting parties shall enter each time into communication with each other with a view to coming to an understanding as to the measures they may think necessary to take for the maintenance of the said status quo.
